KIDNEY CHILLS AND BACKACHE

If, when you get wet or take cold it "settles on the kidneys" and there is a shivery, chilly sensation in the back, it shows kidney weakness which is often the beginning of serious disease. Doan's Kidney Pills should be used persistently until the backache and other symptoms disappear.

C. D. Kessler, 406 5th St., Mendota, says: "Kidney trouble came on me about years ago and became so bad I was unable to work for weeks. I was thin, worn out and nervous; doctors admitted they could not help me and my friends expected me to die. As a last hope I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and shortly after passed a gravel stone. Later on several more stones passed and from then on I improved until cured."

Remember the name—Doan's.

In his native town Jimmy had always been most popular with young and old, but when he was sent away to boarding school, he was for a time too homesick to make friends. His first letter was little more than a wail.

"I'm way behind the other boys in everything," he wrote, dolefully. "'Tisn't only studies, but it's gymnasium and banjos and everything. I don't believe they'll ever have much use for me."

But the second letter, written after a week in the new school, was quite different in tone.

"I'm all right," he wrote to his mother. "The boys say they'll teach me all they know, for they're proud to have me here. I can stretch my mouth half an inch wider than any other boy in school, and my feet are the longest by a full inch. So you needn't worry about me any more."—Youth's Companion.

ECZEMA BROKE OUT ON BABY

"When my baby was two months old, she had eczema and rash very badly. I noticed that her face and body broke out very suddenly, then and red as a coal of fire. I did not know what to do. The doctor ordered castile soap and powders, but they did no good. She would scratch, for it itched, and she cried, and did not sleep for more than a week. One day I saw in the paper the advertisement of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, so I got them and tried them at once. My baby's face was as a cake of sores.

"When I first used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I could see a difference. In color it was redder. I continued with them. The baby was in a terrible condition. I used the Cuticura Remedies (Soap and Ointment) four times a day, and in two weeks she was quite well. The Cuticura Remedies healed her face perfectly, and her skin is now pure and fine through using them. I always use the Cuticura Soap today, and shall continue to, for it makes a lovely skin. Every mother should use the Cuticura Remedies. They are great for all sores, and the Cuticura Soap is also good for shampooing the hair, for I have tried it. I tell all my friends how the Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured my baby of eczema and rash." (Signed) Mrs. Drew, 1 W. 18th St., New York city, Aug. 1910.

Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, Mass., for free booklet on the skin.

MISS SELINA LUE and the Soap-box Babies

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Selina Lue, spinster guardian angel of River Bluff, presides over an impromptu day nursery for the babies of the neighborhood in the rear of her grocery. Her charges are known as "Soap-box Babies." The fact that she is single makes her an object of sympathy to the mothers. One of her friends is Miss Cynthia Page, daughter of Widow Page. Cynthia visits Miss Selina and learns that she has taken another "Soap-Boxer" in Alan Kent, a young artist who wishes to establish a studio in her barn. Blossom, Miss Lue's adopted baby, and one Cynthia is very fond of, shows an evident preference for Alan. When Cynthia leaves, Alan hears that her mother is in danger of losing the old homestead. A mortgage rukus. Alan admires Cynthia. Selina tells how she came to locate in the place and start the haven for little ones. Alan suspects that Cynthia is responsible for Alan's neglect of herself. Sale of the mortgaged Page place considered. Alan's portrait of Cynthia is discovered. Evelyn Blanch, Cynthia's close friend, shows interest in Alan Kent. Cynthia relieves Selina for a day, cooks dinner for Mr. Kent and makes a sorry mess of it. Alan declared a favorite with all the Bluff folk.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

"We all wish you could settle right down here with us for life. Of course we won't ever have money enough to make the picture trade brisk, but Mr. Tim Peters was a-saying the other night he most knew he could git you a job with the 'lectric company to help out. You would have all our recommends fer anything you wanted to git."

"Miss Selina Lue," Mr. Alan's voice was low and very gentle, "I may ask your recommendation some day about something—I—want—very much. I—am—afraid—"

"Law, Mr. Alan, don't feel that way about Miss Cynthia! She ain't noth ing but a mite shy of you, and I ain't got a bit of doubt that she's jest a-waiting fer you to pop the question. For my part I always held with a little waiting in girls. Minds made up too quick are mighty apt to unmake, same as a garmint sewed with a red-hot needle and a burning thread, is liable to come to pieces."

"Oh, Miss Selina Lue, I didn't mean you to guess—that is to say, I have no right to—" Mr. Alan broke down and commenced all over again with shining eyes. "It began two months ago at my first sight of her here in the grocery door. She is so beautiful and—I—I do care—I—! How glad I am that you know, dear Miss Selina Lue; now I can talk about it to you. I know I ought not to—and I—"

"Young man, I've got a heap more faith in the love that is so much it spills over than in the kind that don't quite fill out the measure."

"Oh, do you really think—could it be possible that I have just a chance with her? I—I—"

"Wait a minute," said Miss Selina Lue, and moved by a desire to settle the matter then and there she hurried into the store toward her room door, but she was too late, for the bird had flown from behind the molasses barrel. Miss Cynthia was stealing through the garden and in her ears there sounded a soft-voiced echo—"She is so beautiful—I do care—"

"My, that pin muster been a crooked one that she couldn't get to without undressing," said Miss Selina Lue to herself. "I do hope she will come back right away." And she went out to the steps a bit crestfallen, still actuated by motives of delicacy in not mentioning Miss Cynthia's precipitous flight.

"Did you ever see anything so lovely as she is, Miss Selina Lue?" And the rhapsody began where it had been interrupted.

"Yes, and her heart and soul are jest as pretty as she is. I was a-thinking the other day that they ain't many girls as would git into folks' lives as she have done right here on the Bluff. She is friendly to everybody and they husbands. It takes a feeling and managing person to know that the thing to do is to take up for a woman's husband when she tells you how he's been abusing of her. Miss Cynthie have stove off trouble fer Mr. Kinney more times than he knows."

"I don't know what I am to do. I never can seem to see her anywhere, and she hasn't asked me to call on her." Mr. Alan's lugubrious tones were symptomatic of his condition.

"Well, anyway, there's the party tomorrow afternoon and she'll be here sure. I want to git your advice about how to do things stylish. Would you have the pie on plates, and knives and forks to eat it with? Or would it do to hand it around in wedges to be et like cake?"

"I believe the plates would be safer," answered Mr. Alan in a judicial tone. "She might get some on her dress." In the throng to be at the entertainment, in his state of mind, he could prevision only Miss Cynthia.

"That depends on whether they was made cross-barred, open-face or kivered. Cross-barred is the prettiest, but they could all lean over and bite kivered without making no mess," said Miss Selina Lue, who was seeing the question from all viewpoints before deciding.

"Suppose you have the plate for the grown people and let the youngsters take their luck," compromised Mr. Alan, not liking the idea of trusting the "kivereds" entirely.

"That's just what I'll do," answered Miss Selina Lue. "I think it will be best for Miss Evelyn to go up and look at the pictures and then come down here and all eat the pie. I am going to clear off the counters so they can set up to them and be comfortable, and I am going to put a bunch of flowers in between each pile of pies. Won't they all have a good time?" Something in Miss Selina Lue's beaming hospitality smothered any misgivings that Mr. Alan might have had about the arrangements, and his glow of anticipation matched her own.

"Well," she remarked briskly, "I must be turning around if I am to get all that ready. Can't I help you fix up none? Don't you want any pants pressed? I would admire to do it. I could borrow the heavy iron Mis' Simmons presses Mr. Simmons' with and do it in no time."

Miss Selina Lue's sweet solicitude went to Mr. Alan's heart and he took her hand as he said:

"If my mother had been with me, Miss Selina Lue, she would have let me tell her—about—it all—and she would have—asked about the trousers. I wonder if it is because you are not anybody's mother that you are everybody's?"

"Mr. Alan, you are the first person that ain't put that to me pitying-like about not having no children, and here you are giving me the whole world to mother. Well, my heart ain't crowded yet; they is room fer 'em all, big, little and grown-ups too. Seems like sometimes grown-ups show a mighty hankering fer a little mothering, and I ain't the one to hold it back from 'em. Lands alive, if there ain't Mis' Tyne and all the family come back! You pick up Pattie and bring her out here, fer I know her ma is jest dead to see her, and I will run and help Sammie and Ella Virginia carry that valise."

As Mr. Alan approached the group that seethed around and against Miss Selina Lue, the mother of Pattie segregated herself from the mass and without warning precipitated herself on Pattie and so necessarily on that young lady's new friend.

"Oh, please excuse me, sir," she panted, gaining her equilibrium and her offspring at the same time. "I was jest that excited! Seems like I could eat her up. Miss Selina Lue, you can't never know how good it is to git back to one you've left," which seemingly, only seemingly, ungracious remark had the edge taken off by Pattie's emphatic squirm and whimper toward Miss Selina Lue. The quality of Miss Selina Lue's mercy she knew and that of her mother she had forgotten.

"Give her back to me, Mis' Tyne, and I will put her in her soap-box while you all git unpacked. You come jest in time fer the party, and you better git about fixing fer it. Thank you, Mr. Alan—the valise are a heavy load fer the children."

As she stood on the grocery steps and watched Mr. Alan carrying the Tyne valise on down to the Tyne front door with perfect courtesy, she spoke earnestly to Blossom, who sat in a split basket by the door. Blossom's personality, though in the bud, exhaled the fragrance of sympathy and made her a responsive mark for conversation.

"Blossom," she said in tones of quiet joy, "it looks like the two nicest people in the world are going to git married to each other, and ain't it fine that they dispositions fit into one another like the edges of a piece of paper tored in two? Sometimes when I see wives all wore out with work and crossness, and husbands fed bad and no buttons, and sick children and too much beer at the saloon, let alone a hard winter a-coming, I git too much pleased with my condition, and I need jest sech a thing as this to remind me that the Lord do join some folks, which let not man put asunder. Amen!"

CHAPTER VII.

A Send-off for Mr. Alan.

"But ain't it a good thing to think how there's a guiding hand, child, a guiding hand?"

—Miss Selina Lue.

The stir and bustle on the bluff began early and rose at times to a tumult, for an afternoon tea was a thing that had seldom come the way of the older citizens and was fraught with the mystery of the unencountered for all the small fry. By eleven o'clock the excitement had spread telepathically to the Hill mansion and was bringing the color to Miss Cynthia's cheeks and lending an additional sparkle to her eyes. Miss Cynthia's eyes, however, had been very bright through a very wide-eyed night, and her heart had been dancing in an unaccountable way since she fled through the fields with the echo in her ears.

Generally speaking, a woman prefers a first-hand wooing, but to Miss Cynthia the outburst in the grocery had had an especial charm. There is something propitiating and alluring in an affection that is daringly outspoken and declares itself at the first opportunity, whether or not the listener is the inspiration. Her state of mind might have been guessed by the careful process of her toilet, though she only intended to descend to the bluff for the purpose of aiding Miss Selina Lue in her hospitable preparations. The visit of her friend Evelyn had lost all aspect of an embarrassment; rather it partook of the nature of a triumph.

"The Lord Do Join Some Folks, Which Let Not Man Put Asunder. Amen."

Her trip to the Bluff, however, was postponed for an almost unendurable length of time, for in the hall she encountered Mr. Everston in the act of taking his departure after an interview with Mrs. Jackson Page. The expression of extreme harassment on that good gentleman's face conveyed a definite idea of the interview, and Miss Cynthia followed him to the veranda and invited the explosion.

"Most unreasonable, my dear, most unreasonable! The land company is willing to wait no longer than two weeks for a definite answer. It is an exceptional opportunity and the only way to settle the estate so as to insure a residue—er—suitable to your mother's—er—needs. The price of the house is, I may say, a fancy one, and I cannot see another way of getting the property on the market except at a sacrifice. Couldn't you—er—er—my dear, remonstrate with your mother?"

Remonstrance with Mrs. Jackson Page sounded stupendous even to the ears of her own daughter, but Miss Cynthia's head went up a trifle and she answered in tones slightly akin to those habitually used by that most impressive lady:

"If you please, Mr. Everston, proceed with the business of the sale, and when the time comes I am sure she will sign the papers. Thank you for your kindness and—your patience," and Miss Cynthia held out her hand to the flustered old gentleman with the smile that always drew Bennie Dobbs—and others. She watched him drive away in his sedate old gig, and then turned, not to the apartment of the difficult Mrs. Jackson Page, but down the hill to the bluff, where turmoil and excitement and life called.

And she found them in abundance; in fact, the bluff fairly teemed with them and spilled over and ran out to meet her. Bennie headed the onslaught and was followed by Ethel Maud and Luella Kinney and several Tynes of assorted sizes. As they brought up beside her, Ethel Maud stepped on one of her own feet in a most amazing way and fell sprawling in such a manner as to graze her little retrousse nose on the tip of Miss Cynthia's shoe. A mighty wail ensued, which was augmented by Bennie's most unsympathetic prediction that she would be denied the privilege of attendance at the party.

"Oh—oh—o—ho, I can go, too! I don't eat with my nose, and I see with my eyes and they won't be nothing to smell. Oh—ho, can't I go, Miss Cynthie?"

"Yes, indeed you can," answered Miss Cynthia, as she wiped the barked little dot with her clean handkerchief and failed to notice the smutty prints from the small fingers that clung to the sleeve of her snowy frock. "Bennie mustn't say that. He knows it wouldn't be a nice party if you had to stay at home with a sick nose. Now come on and let's get your mother to put some camphor on it." And they all proceeded down street.

Mrs. Kinney hailed them from her open window with the rolling-pin. She was almost, literally speaking, elbow deep in pies, and the aroma thereof spread across the street. Her front stoop glistened damply in the sunlight and the front walk was spotless. The gate was tied up as a signal for the children to jump over the fence and approach their home with caution—on the grass.

Where Women Work.

The smallest dependency of France is the Ile d'Hoedle, situated at the east of Belle Isle. Its population is two hundred and thirty-eight. They do not speak French, except the cure and the school master, but Celtic, and they are provided with food at an inn managed by the women. Fishing is the principal industry. The profits are divided up each year among the inhabitants. The men live on soup and fish, and smoke pipes with lobster claws for stems. The women do all the hard work—get in the harvest, look out for wreckage, and gather seaweed, from which they extract soda. The town has no streets. The houses are of mud. The islanders have a yearly feast in the early part of October. The island possesses a good water supply. The governing body is composed of the ten ancients of the place, under the direction of the cure.

The Greatest.

"What makes you think the Jigsbys are living high?"

Sentimental Juries.

Maitre Henri Robert, the most famous advocate in criminal cases at the Paris bar, told an audience almost entirely composed of ladies that before any jury a woman with some youth, some looks and a pretty voice has 50 chances out of 100 of being acquitted, whereas a man would only have one. If she knows how to shed tears at the right moment she need not worry—a verdict of not guilty is a dead certainty.

"Humor is a funny thing," said Binks.

"It ought to be," said the Philosopher.

"Oh, I don't mean that way," said Binks. "I mean that it is a strange thing. Now, I can't speak French, but I can always understand a French joke, and I can speak English, but I'm blest if I can see an English joke."

"Most people are," said the Philosopher.

FEED YOUNG GIRLS
Must Have Right Food While Growing.

Great care should be taken at the critical period when the young girl is just merging into womanhood that the diet shall contain that which is upbuilding and nothing harmful.

At that age the structure is being formed and if formed of a healthy, sturdy character, health and happiness will follow; on the other hand unhealthy cells may be built in and a sick condition slowly supervene which, if not checked, may ripen into a chronic condition and cause life-long suffering.

A young lady says:

"Coffee began to have such an effect on my stomach a few years ago that I finally quit using it. It brought on headaches, pains in my muscles, and nervousness.

'I tried to use tea in its stead, but found its effects even worse than those I suffered from coffee. Then for a long time I drank milk at my meals, but at last it palled on me. A friend came to the rescue with the suggestion that I try Postum.

"I did so, only to find at first, that I didn't fancy it. But I had heard of so many persons who had been benefited by its use that I persevered, and when I had it made right—according to directions on the package—I found it grateful in flavour and soothing and strengthening to my stomach. I can find no words to express my feeling of what I owe to Postum!

"In every respect it has worked a wonderful improvement—the headaches, nervousness, the pains in my side and back, all the distressing symptoms yielded to the magic power of Postum. My brain seems also to share in the betterment of my physical condition; it seems keener, more alert and brighter. I am, in short, in better health now than for a long while before, and I am sure I owe it to the use of your Postum." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason."

ut across the street the Dobbs res- nce was undergoing more in the of a general toilet than that ch had been finished at the Kin- house. The front door stood wide n and the little hall and front room sented a swept and garnished ap- rance. All the flower pots on the dow ledge had green paper covers flaunted many brilliant colors, for wers bloomed under the ministra- ns of Mrs. Dobbs' easy good nature. Miss Cynthia was opposite the e the lady of the house came ound from the side yard with a cket of foaming whitewash in her nd and an old broom, whose brush s swathed in rags.

"Now, Bennie, I've done caught you ir! Come on and finish that last nel of fence you done got tired on t week. You've put the brush way so as not to find it handy, but ese rags on a broomstick is just good. Make him come, Miss Cyn- ie." And Mrs. Dobbs smiled a jo- al appeal to Miss Cynthia to use her fluence with the reluctant Bennie.

"Why, boys like to whitewash, Mrs. obbs," answered Miss Cynthia en- ouragingly. "How nice everything oks, everywhere."

"Well, it oughter, for Miss Seliny ue come around and waked us all up ng 'fore five o'clock. I'm afraid to set own, fer I am so stiff that I mightn't e able to git up again," answered rs. Dobbs, plaintively.

"Well, I know Bennie and Ethel aud are going to stay now and help ou get done so you can rest," said iss Cynthia with a significant glance t the two deserters, who fell to on he fence with a will.

"Be sure and notice them new lace urtains Mis' Jim Peters is a-putting up in her front windows," Mrs. Dobbs called after her as she started down the street. Miss Cynthia smiled and nodded as she looked over with inter- est at a slender figure poised on a chair by the window in the little cot- tage opposite the grocery. Mrs. Jim Peters waved her hand in greeting and Miss Cynthia caught a glimpse of the precious little cradle through the open door.

The front regions of the grocery were deserted and presented their usual utilitarian appearance, except that huge bunches of fragrant sweet fern were set around in different homely receptacles and arranged with a decidedly artistic effect.

Miss Cynthia's eyes roamed delight- edly over the cool, dark interior, but in a second were focused on a scene in the back of the store.

On the floor, collar flaring, sleeves rolled to his shoulders and girt by an ample gingham apron, knelt Mr. Alan with a large tub full of squirming ba- bies before him, and with praisewor- thy despatch he was polishing off the head of Carrots of the flaming hair. The brother of Carrots wiggled and splashed and seemed intent on a deep- sea dive.

"Here, young man, I can't scrub Carrots and keep you up too. Sit tight a moment, can't you, old slip- pery?" The voice had a slightly anx- ious note.

"Lands alive, Mr Alan, you hadn't oughter soaped them both to onct!" said Miss Selina Lue's voice from the lean-to. "Just hold 'em still until I button Blossom's neck and put Clem- mie on the floor and I'll come. A soapy baby ain't a thing to take risks with, I can tell you."

"Could I help?" Miss Cynthia's voice was sweetly solicitous, but it acted on the be-aprned scrubber in the manner expected of a two-pound bomb. He sat back on the floor so suddenly that Carrots slipped danger- ously and the other Farity almost ac- complished his plunge. A man on his knees before a deep tub of water with a soapy baby in each hand is at a dis- advantage in the way of greetings to a lady who has walked right out of a dream, and not a word rose to the troubled surface of Mr. Alan's mind.

"Miss Cynthie, honey, grab one of them children, quick!" Miss Selina Lue called. "Mr. Alan hain't had the experience to manage two, and if they slip there will be a mighty ruckus with both of them in the crying way."

In a moment Miss Cynthia was on her knees by the tub, had rescued the brother of Carrots and was holding him firmly under his arms with both hands. Not for worlds would she have attempted to go on with the rites of the bath; holding up was fraught with anxiety enough for her nerves. Across the dripping, bobbing heads her eyes met the artist's, and there ensued a few moments of silent, breathless mirth that well-nigh inca- pacitated them both and threatened disaster to the bathers.

"Oh, Miss Selina Lue, come get him quick—I am going to let him slip in a minute!" she gasped. "Look out, Carrots is turning over, Mr. Kent! Do hold him right side up!"

"There now," said Miss Selina Lue, as she swept both babies into the curve of one arm and seized the wash- rag out of Mr. Alan's nerveless hand, "I can polish 'em off in no time. Please pick Blossom and Clemmie offen the floor and put 'em in the boxes. I want 'em to stay clean fer the party. Ain't they too sweet all dressed up? folded number two in both his own hands with unmistakable warmth and smiled down into Miss Cynthia's lift- ed, blue-star eyes with a sweetness that was—generous.

"Lands alive, Mr. Alan, I see Char- ity a-going into the barn and sure as shooting she'll eat up some of the decorations! Ask her to please stay in the meadow until the party's over, though of course she thinks she is in- vited, being so one of the family like," Miss Selina Lue called from the lean- to where she was employed in the robing of the Flarity brothers. "Miss Cynthie, honey, please shake up the cushions and put Blossom and Clem- mie in their boxes. They have done dozed off on the floor here and I am in a hurry to put up the twins, who'll drop off dead-like if I don't get 'em down in a few minutes."

The boxing up of the babies occu- pied the next few minutes and as at last Miss Selina Lue looked down at them safely and snugly asleep she said to Miss Cynthia softly:

"Ain't they sweet? They's a heap a-going to happen to 'em as they go 'long, but ain't it a good thing to think how there's a guiding hand, child, a guiding hand? I can't bear to give Pattie up, but I know Miss Tyne'll let me have her most all of every day. She is one of the sorter mothers that kinder fergits at times that children need more worrying over than puppies and kittens. She carries her burdens light and rolls 'em off on any shoulder handy. Some women think they have did sech a big thing in borning children that it's only right for the rest of the world to do the looking after them; but the rest of the world ain't always got the mother heart she expects of them. Sometimes the babies git a cold wel- come lots of places."

"If all the world were like you—" began Miss Cynthia, but Miss Selina Lue answered with a laugh:

"Why, chickie-biddie, what would we do without the yous and the Mr. Alanses and the Mr. Dobbses, so pa- tient with his family 'cept fer the cussing, and the sweet Miss Evelyns

Mr. Kent Received Five Slender, White, Dripping Fingers in His Own.

And, Mr. Alan, I wish you would dry Miss Cynthie's hands on your apron before they drip on her dress. They's a heap to do, for it's about to turn twelve o'clock now, and I want things to be beforehanded."

There are some situations in life that are marked by a charm that par- takes decidedly of terror, and as Mr. Kent received five slender, white, drip- ping fingers in his own and proceeded to envelop them in a fold of the ging- ham garment pendent about his waist, he was possessed by a wild desire to bolt through the back door, but he realized at the same moment that nothing so beautiful had ever hap- pened his way before. His composure was sufficient, barely, to keep him to the enchanting task and he solemnly dried the dainty fingers one at a time without so much as a glance at the owner of them.

Now, although the heart of Miss Cynthia was a tender organ and though she fully realized the suffer- ings of the victim of such embarrass- ment, she smiled a very lovely, very wickedly mirthful and comprehending smile straight into his eyes and hand- ed him the other hand. But if her lit- tle laugh had been intended to terrify further, it failed of its purpose, for Mr. Kent rallied to himself gloriously, and even the old Mr. Leekses—and—But lands alive, we must be turning around, instead of standing here con- gratulating the Lord on his work, and git to our own. Don't everything look nice? Everybody's been stirring since daybreak. I believe in getting done in plenty of time fer to my mind company is more comfortable when they don't find so much sign of fuss."

"Everything is lovely. Is there any- thing I could do now? You seem about ready. Is—is—the barn all dec- orated?" and Miss Cynthia cast long- ing glances toward the wide door and cool interior. Miss Selina Lue would have been glad to send her on an er- rand in that direction if she had thought of it at all.

"Yes, indeed," she answered, obliv- ious of the gentle hint, "finished along about ten o'clock. It's jest a green- house of vines and truck from across the river. But I want you to help me decide where the folks must set—and some other things. I thought I would let the children all go down to the car to meet her in two lines and sing one of them new hymns they learned at the gospel tent as she comes up the hill. I advised her special to come on the car, 'count of that rocky hill they can't nothing on wheels git any good outer climbing."

"What time do you expect her?"

"Four o'clock, sharp. I asked Mr. Alan to take the in-car and meet her at the switch to 'scort her up. I thought it would give her a nice feel- ing, being as she is his old friend."

Miss Cynthia's color deepened a trifle, but she said in a light, sus- piciously light, tone: "And whom are you going to send for me, Miss Selina Lue?"

"Well, now, that's right; I oughter send for you too, though you are sich home folks. How would Mr. Si Brad- ford do? You know he's a-running fer sheriff and he's a-going to make her a speech of welcome at the grocery door. I don't want her to think we're trying to put on too much style, but I felt like this entertainment was a kinder send-off fer Mr. Alan and we all don't want to spare no pains in showing how much we think of him. Do you think she will understand how we feel about it?"

"I am sure she will—appreciate your feelings in the matter," answered Miss Cynthia with a twinkle in her eye.

"I thought she would. And how do you think it will do to ask Mis' Si Bradford to set next to her at the re- freshments? You know Mis' Si is kinder proud on 'count of having a blue teapot handed down from her pa's mother, though it's cracked, and a chair she used to set in, only one leg's gone. I know she's sorter slow and heavy-like, but she thinks a heap of herself and I feel it's kind ter let everybody set their own price, so I humors her; though I can't seem to sense how a cracked teapot and a three-legged chair prove anything on your pa's mother or you. I know Mr. Si will admire to come fer you, and I will send him fer you prompt."

"Oh, no, I think as it is so early I will just run down by myself and then —perhaps Mr.—Mr.—Si will take me home if it's late."

"Oh, yes, him or Mr. Alan! Well, good-by till I see you. It is most time fer us all to dress. Tell everybody you see as you go 'long, please; I don't want nobody to miss nothing."

And again, for the second time that day, Miss Cynthia threw herself with abandon into the processes of the toilet and again the result was—de- lightful.

"Why, honey-bunch, I am afraid the folks will all want to eat you in- stead of the refreshments—you look so good—don't she, Mr. Alan?" was Miss Selina Lue's greeting to her from the grocery door. Mr. Kent stood be- side her and was the personification of fresh, cool, elegant, afternoon-tea correctness. Miss Selina Lue judged rightly that the expression dawning in Miss Cynthia's eyes was that of ad- miration, for before she had received an answer to her question to Mr. Kent about the vision of loveliness at the foot of the steps, she broke out afresh with her delighted exclamations:

"Now, ain't he jest too fine, Miss Cynthie? Them white flannels is plumb beautiful before they shrinks, and after that they makes good rags to rub with in cases of rheumatiz and sich. I feel jest as proud of him!"

MAKE FAST TIME ON SKATES

French Engineer's Invention Permits of Speed of Over Thirty Miles an Hour.

A new form of roller skate, the in- vention of M. Louis Marchand, a young French engineer, will shortly be seen on this side, a large quantity of them having been imported for the present season.

These skates, which resemble noth- ing more than miniature bicycles, weigh 25 pounds each, and work au- tomatically. They have thick pneu- matic tires and the wheels, of which there are two on each skate, are 12 inches in diameter.

Thirty miles an hour can easily be made by an unexperienced skater with these skates. The skate is clamped to the shoe, and when the foot is raised a spring is automatically wound up around a specially construct- ed gear attached to the rear wheel. When the foot is put to the ground the pressure releases the spring, un- winds the gear, and revolves the rear wheel at a great rate. Nearly 900 rev- olutions a minute are thus produced.

To Clean Bronze.

Bronzes which have become dull and lusterless with age can be immense- ly improved by the simple means of washing them with a soapy sponge and then rinsing them in beer. Old direc- tions say that the rinsed bronzes should be placed close to the fire while still wet and allowed to dry of themselves. This is supposed to produce the dull, leaden glaze which is characteristic of good bronze. The less soap used the better. To clean bronze in the or- dinary way with plenty of hot water and a strong lather will be apt to in- jure their appearance completely.

The Largest Shot.

The largest and heaviest projectile in the world is the huge five-foot armor-piercing shell fired from the United States government's great 16- inch rifle. This huge shell of steel can be hurled a distance of 20 miles or more and weighs 2,400 pounds. The cost of firing one shot is nearly $1,000.

THE BEST DRESSED MAN

What Made Him So?

He was a mass of bandages, the result of a severe scalding, and when he claimed to be "the best dressed man in town," people wondered. The explanation was easy. A prompt ap- plication of a Resinol ointment dress- ing to the raw flesh had given instant comfort and relief from the pain and suffering. It is the best dressing for burns, scalds, cuts, wounds, felons, carbuncles, and all skin abrasions. It promptly allays irritation and in- flammation and stops itching instant- ly. Resinol ointment cures eczema, psoriasis, barber's itch, rash of poison ivy, herpes, scald head and all skin eruptions. Resinol ointment is free from any injurious ingredient. It's as good for baby as for the older mem- bers of the family. Resinol ointment is put up in opal jars; price fifty cents and a dollar. At all druggists. Resi- nol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

"My dear," said he, excitedly. "Guess what! Intelligence has just reached me—"

The wife gave a jump at this point, rushed to her husband, and, kissing him fervently, interrupted with:

"Well, thank heaven, Harry!"

Hancock County Institute and Summer School, June 7-28

The Hancock County Institute and Summer School will be held at Garner, June 7 to 28.

In planning the Institute with an eighteen day session, we are attempting to make it as beneficial as possible to those who are in attendance. There will be inspirational and helpful talks and addresses on educational subjects followed by a thorough review of the common and First grade branches.

Prof. C. E. Colgrove, of the Iowa State Teachers College, whose life has been an inspiration and help to many of the best teachers of Iowa, will be with us for five lectures.

Dr. Payne will deliver five lectures, illustrated, on Geography and travel. Dr. Payne is considered one of the strongest Institute workers in the country.

Dr. Kepford, state lecturer on Tuberculosis, will address the Institute on the causes and prevention of this dread disease.

The review work will be well taken care of with Supt. Kies of Britt in charge of Arithmetic, History and Civics; Supt. Sunderlin of Garner, Grammar, Economics, Physics and Algebra; and Miss Tierney, experienced in rural and grade school work, will have charge of Reading, Physiology, Music and Method work.

In planning for the Institute work we have tried to anticipate the desires and needs of all. We recognize two classes of persons who will attend. In the first are a number of teachers who have had considerable experience and who hold certificates good for two, three or five years. In the second class are those who are attempting to secure a certificate or who desire to obtain a higher grade of certificate than they now hold.

The first week, June 7-10, is for all, but more especially for the experienced teachers. During this time all of the lectures and special work will be given and June 10th the Rural graduation exercises will be held. The remaining days will be given up entirely to review work.

Plan to be on hand the first day. Come with spirit of giving and receiving help.

Yours truly,
J. R BAGGS,
County Superintendent.

Peter Benson is figuring on the building of a barn on his farm east of Kanawha.

O. Gilster and wife have a new baby girl, born Monday, May 15th. They live on the Pinkerton farm, northeast of Kanawha.

Several thousands of perch and bull-heads have been caught out of the West Lake the last week. The fishing for this kind is good, but other varieties of fish are scarce.

J. E. Rathbun, the pioneer fruit tree man of Twin Lakes township, is enthusiastic over the outlook for apples this year. His orchard has been a billowy mass of blossoms and the ground white as snow with the fallen blossoms. It is quite a privilege to revel in the midst of this little world of fragrance and God made beauty, and we hope the fruitage will be all that the present conditions promise.

BABY ELL IS DEAD

Edward Paul, the ten-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed, G Ell, died on Saturday afternoon, May 20th, 1911, after a prolonged illness. The little one had been in poor health all the past winter and spring and its last days were ones of much suffering. But Baby Edward is now at rest with his kind and loving Heavenly Father and will know no more suffering. While the parents and grand-parents are nearly heart-broken over the separation, they may find consolation in knowing that the soul of the departed one is at home with Him who blessed the little children and said: "Suffer them to come unto me." It is often hard for mortal man to understand the acts of Providence, but we know that He doeth all things well.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon, Rev. H. W. Schneider officiating, and interment was made in Klemme cemetery. The grief-stricken parents and relatives have the sympathy of all in their bereavement.

CARD OF THANKS

ELEVEN YEARS OF HEALTH.

Kidney Trouble Never Returned.

Mrs. Everett Griffith, 2845 E. Indiana Ave., Evansville, Ind., says: "I was certainly in bad shape from kidney disease and it is really a wonder that I am alive today. The kidney secretions passed irregularly and were abnormally thick; I had bad spells with my head and at times could hardly stand. My left limb below the knee became so badly swollen that I began to treat myself for dropsy and my back was so sore and lame I could not raise my arms above my head. I was finally induced to take Doan's Kidney Pills and in six weeks I was well. My cure was made in 1899 and I have enjoyed excellent health ever since."

Politician and Preacher.

A politician in a western state, long suspected of crookedness and noted for his shifty ways, was finally indicted and tried. The jury was out a long time, but eventually acquitted him. After the verdict was in and the politician was leaving the courtroom, a minister who had been in part responsible for the indictment and trial approached the politician and said: "Well, my friend, you have escaped; but you had a close shave. I trust this will be a warning to you to lead a better life and deal more fairly with your fellow men."

"That may be," the politician replied. "That may be; but I ain't pledged to any one."—Saturday Evening Post.

Who She Was.

"Well," laughed Squiggles, "some men never know when they are snubbed! That lady you just spoke to was about as distant as they make 'em in her greeting."

"Well, why shouldn't she be?" retorted Jabbers. "She's a distant relative of mine."

"By marriage?"

"No—by divorce. She got rid of me at Sioux Falls back in 1898."—Harper's Weekly.

FEED YOU MONEY

Feed Your Brain, and It Will Feed You Money and Fame.

"Ever since boyhood I have been especially fond of meats, and I am convinced I ate too rapidly, and failed to masticate my food properly.

"The result was that I found myself, a few years ago, afflicted with ailments of the stomach, and kidneys, which interfered seriously with my business.

"At last I took the advice of friends and began to eat Grape-Nuts instead of the heavy meats, etc., that had constituted my former diet.

"I found that I was at once benefited by the change, that I was soon relieved from the heartburn and indigestion that used to follow my meals, that the pains in my back from my kidney affection had ceased.

"My nerves, which used to be unsteady, and my brain, which was slow and lethargic from a heavy diet of meats and greasy foods, h d, not in a moment, but gradually, and none the less surely, been restored to normal efficiency.

"Now every nerve is steady and my brain and thinking faculties are quicker and more acute than for years past.

"After my old style breakfasts I used to suffer during the forenoon from a feeling of weakness which hindered me seriously in my work, but since I began to use Grape-Nuts food I can work till dinner time with all ease and comfort." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Ready for Duty

Personal Exploits in the Great Civil War, Told by Veterans

FAMOUS examples of courage under arms are usually those displayed in some desperate sortie or some very spirited, if brief, action. The courage demanded to face imminent danger for days or weeks without faltering, though less celebrated, is certainly of as high an order. It was courage such as this which made possible the long, tedious siege of Petersburg, perhaps the most trying campaign in its way of the entire war. The life behind the bombproofs is vividly recalled by J. H. Campbell.

"We were for three months under continuous fire. Our position was well within range of the enemy, who kept up their fire almost without cessation.

"There are a number of bombproofs and a series of sheltered roads connecting them, so that we could pass from one to another. It is one thing to make a charge or meet one, but quite another to work day after day, night after night, and not know what instant will be your last. One gets accustomed to anything, and curiously enough one of the greatest dangers was that we would grow so familiar with our danger that we would ignore it. Familiarity breeds contempt for bursting shells and sharpshooters, as for anything else, but to relax for a moment and step for an instant beyond the shelter might cost one his life."

AT the battle of Lookout Mountain a New York regiment was in tthe front rank and contributed greatly in determining the issue. The work of the 215th New York in this famous engagement is by no means as familiar as it should be. James Schmidling, who fought in this regiment, now the commander of J. L. Riker Post, and who incidentally fought in seventeen pitched battles, in recalling the fight above the clouds, said:

"Our regiment was early on the scene, and this promptness had an important effect on the fortunes of the day. The battle, it will be remembered, was fought above the clouds. Now, in fighting, the position of the troops at the beginning often decides the battle in advance. Since this battle was fought practically on a mountain top, on very high ground, the troops holding an elevated position naturally had an immense advantage. Our regiment held an important vantage point, but we were ahead of the main army and faced a force vastly superior in numbers. It was a question of hours before our reinforcements could come in. I think every man realized what depended upon us. We lost heavily, but we held our ground until the main army arrived, a nine-pound howitzer. When they got too hot we would try to disiodge them with our cannon and, failing this, we would go ashore and chase them, but they always came back.

"In our patrol we had of course to pass the forts, when we would be raked by their heavier guns. We seemed to be always in trouble. With both sides of the river against us, we would sometimes be raked by a cross fire from two or more forts at the same time. Even on the quietest day one was afraid to show himself on deck, for the minie balls would cut us down when we least expected them. I was a soldier before the war, having served in the Crimea. I had been captured by the British and spent six months in a tread mill jail in London, but those minie balls were the most insidious danger I have ever met."

As Galsworthy Saw Life.

The wisdom of John Galsworthy: Like flies caught among the impalpable and smoky threads of cobwebs, so men struggle in the webs of their own natures, giving here a start, there a pitiful small jerking, long sustained, and falling into stillness

On the Mississippi

THE most continuous fighting in the navy during the war was probably encountered by the smaller boats engaged in keeping the lower Mississippi open to Union expeditions. The river was of course well supplied with forts, many of them very powerful ones, but the banks were in addition lined almost continuously with small guns, cannon and sharpshooters. Charles Just, commander of Rowles Post, New York, who spent the greater part of the war in this region, in recalling these days, said:

"We didn't so much mind the forts, although they were bad enough, as the bushwhackers. Any southerner with a gun or a pistol could fire at us with comparative safety from the shore trees and bushes. As a result there was a continuous peppering of shots from off shore day and night. One was never safe for an instant. The bullets raked our decks from several quarters at once, no matter what our position. They used minie balls and occasionally they would bring up

IOWA MUST PAY BILL

Strike In The Button Factories Will Be Charged Up to State

CITY WILL PAY PART OF IT

Muscatine Pays Expenses Incurred by Local and Fairfield Companies and State Takes Care of the Rest.

Des Moines, May 22.—The taxpayers of the state of Iowa must bear the brunt of the expense incident to the calling out of the national guard last month to suppress the disorders at Muscatine, which occurred during the trouble between the button manufacturers at that place and their employes. Of the five companies ordered out by the governor while the trouble was in progress the state must foot the bills for three and Muscatine county the other two, according to an opinion which has been rendered in the office of the attorney general.

Claims filed thus far with Adj. Gen. Guy E. Logan for expenses incident to the sojourn of the soldiers indicate that the state treasurer will be called upon to pay in the neighborhood of $10,000. It was generally understood at the time the troops were ordered out that Muscatine county would be held for the entire expense, and it was for that reason that many of the citizens there objected so strongly to their being retained. Later it was discovered, however, that the county could only be called upon for such expense as was entailed by the local company, which was called out by the sheriff.

IOWANS GET MONEY BACK

Colorado Land Companies Must Refund $300,000 by Virtue of Appeal Court Ruling.

Iowa City, May 22.—Iowans who invested $300,000 in Colorado land companies will get their money back, by virtue of a decision of the United States circuit court of appeals, which reversed Judge Phillips of the United States district court.

Property including 20,000 acres of coal lands will be divided up among the stockholders in the Union Land Co., and the Denver & Northwestern Fuel Co.

HIGH JURISTS WILL COME

Judge of Supreme Court and U. S. Circuit Court Judge to Help Pass on Rate Cases.

Des Moines, May 22.—An associate justice of the supreme court, together with one of the United States circuit judges, may come to Des Moines to assist Judge Smith McPherson of the federal court in the trial of the injunction suits brought against the state railroad commission by the express companies. A recent act of congress provides that one judge cannot grant an injunction where the validity of a state law is assailed and where the injunction is asked against a state officer.

The act states that two high court officials shall assist the presiding judge and that the injunction shall not be granted without their consent. Judge McPherson is awaiting a recent opinion.

Murder at Ottumwa.

Ottumwa, May 22.—With a treachery that exceeded even the brutal murder of Miss Clara Rosen by John Junkin in Ottumwa two years ago, was the murder of Thomas McGrath, an Eddyville farmer, according to the written confession of Charles Young now awaiting trial here.

Mason City, May 22.—Lewis Ritten, druggist, was fined $300 and had his permit revoked by Judge J. E. Clyde today after being convicted of violating the liquor laws.

REPATRIATED.

HE HAD $400.00 IN CASH IN 1903 NOW WORTH $8,000.00.

My parents were originally Canadians from Essex County, Ontario. I was born in Monroe County, Michigan from which place I moved to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, where I farmed for 22 years. I sold my farm there in the summer of 1903 and in September of that year came to Canada with my wife and eight children. I had about $400 in cash, team of horses, a cow, a few sheep and some chickens. I took up a quarter section of land near Jack Fish Lake, Meota P. O., and later on purchased for $2,000.00 an adjoining quarter section. I have now 48 head of cattle, a number of horses, good buildings and consider my holding is worth at least $8,000.00. My children have raised from $300 to $500 worth of garden truck each year since we have been here. I have never had a poor crop and have never had one frosted. My wheat has averaged from 25 to 30 bushels per acre with one or two years considerably more. My oats have always yielded well up to 85 bushels per acre and once or twice as high as 85. My cattle have never been stabled in winter, and do not need to. I consider that this country offers better opportunities for settlers than any where I have ever been. I am sure that almost any person can come here and buy land at say $15.00 per acre and pay for it in one crop. My experience is that if a man farms his land in the right way he is not likely to have his crop frosted.

Most of the settlers in my district are Americans and Canadians and I know lots of them who came here with little or no capital who are now doing well, but I do not know of any who have left through disappointment, or becoming discouraged, have returned to their former homes.

OLDEN VS. MOORE

LAIMS CAN PROVE CHARGE

oard of Educational Control May Consider the Situation at Cedar Rapids—Holden Not Minding Well.

Des Moines.—The Moore-Holden ontroversy over the conduct of Pro- ssor Holden's department may me before the state board of edu- tion for action when that body eets in Cedar Rapids, May 26 and .

It was stated in the office of the nance committee of the board that rofessor Holden has refused to abide the rules which Professor Curtiss d Professor Kennedy and heads of her departments comply with. They y that the finance committee can- ot get him to adopt the financial stem which is successfully used in e other departments at Ames.

It is also claimed by members of e finance committee that on April t Professor Holden's department as $1,100 in the hole. As a result, s department will get no money un- l July 1st.

The situation is becoming acute. Representative Moore is challeng- g Professor Holden to demand an vestigation. He claims that he can ove every charge which he has ade.

On the other hand, it is charged y Professor Holden's friends that e entire controversy was started in rder to get Holden out of the way r the benefit of the state education- l board.

arning to Dairymen.

Notices have been sent out from e office of State Food and Dairy ommissioner Barney to creameries nd cream buyers over the state giv- g the standard and grading of eam which the department will in- ist upon.

Special grade cream is designated s hand separated showing not more an 15 per cent acidity, free from d odors and not over two days old warm weather. First grade cream equires practically the same quali- cations with the exception that one ore day's age is permitted, and sec- nd grade cream is described as eam not reasonably sweet or of ood flavor.

s Law Retroactive.

Will the law which goes into effect uly 1 providing against the procrea- on of habitual criminals, drunkards, ilots, criminal insane, and victims f veneral diseases apply only to the mates in state prisons or include very prisoner in custody of the tate? This question, which will be ecided by the interpretation of At- orney General Cosson, is arousing reat anxiety, especially among the mates of the inebriate asylum at Knoxville. The interpretation will epend upon the intention of the gen- ral assembly. Coming under police egulations, the law may be applied o everyone within its meaning now n custody of the state.

ead of Tax Commission.

M. H. Cohen, of Des Moines, was amed as chairman of the tax com- ission by Governor Carroll in his nnouncement of the personnel of the oard for which the last general as- embly made provision for an inves- gation of the revenue laws of the tate and a recodification of the tax- ion laws for submission to the next egislature.

The other members of the commis- on are B. E. Stonebraker, of Rock- ell City, A. C. Ripley, of Garner, J. . McConlogue of Mason City, and harles Vose of Davenport.

iolated Pure Food Law.

The Marshalltown Syrup company leaded guilty to two counts in the ederal court charging it with viola- ion of the pure food laws.

Judge McPherson of the federal ourt reserved pronouncing sentence or the present.

It is charged in one count against he company that one shipment of s product was short in weight, and n the other it is alleged that the abel failed to state that the product ontained benzoic of soda.

r. Decker Resigns.

Governor Carroll received the an- ouncement of the resignation of Dr. eorge E. Decker of Davenport as member of the state board of ealth and stated that it would be ccepted. He refused to make any omment on the resignation or to in- icate at what time the vacancy ould be filled.

WHAT IS THERE IN IOWA?

Governor Carroll Asked to Answer That Question at Convention In Baltimore.

"What is there in Iowa which would interest me as a sightseer and a tourist?"

Governor Carroll has been invited to present this proposition to the "See Europe if you will, but see America first" convention, which will be held in Baltimore January 27, 1912.

The convention will be held under the auspices of the Greater Baltimore committee.

Governor Crothers of Maryland urges Governor Carroll to send a delegation of twenty-five Iowans to the convention to present Iowa's claim to distinction as a sightseeing and tourist state.

The proposition will do much to boost the Hawkeye state by presenting to a large American gathering data which will show that Iowa has points of interest which have never been advertised, but which will compete with many much advertised points in foreign lands.

New Iowa Corporations.

The Fort Dodge Messenger Printing company has increased its capital stock from $30,000 to $100,000. Amendments to the articles of incorporation were filed with Secretary of State Hayward. Other articles filed were:

Perry Nursery company, Perry; capital stock, $10,000; incorporators, E. F. Edmundson, S. M. Sdmundson, Ralph Edmundson, C. E. Wilson, E. B. Wilson.

Great Western Poultry association, Council Bluffs; capital stock, $10,000; incorporators, C. W. Atwood, J. B. Kelline, F. A. Barker, I. N. Minnick, G. H. Jackson.

Lake Park State bank, Lake Park; capital stock, $35,000; president, August Sindt; vice president, J. Denkman; cashier, A. C. Robertson.

Farmers' State bank, Bernard; capital stock, $10,000; W. R. Flemming, president; D. C. Shields, vice president; no cashier.

Articles were filed by the Burlington Garage company with a capitalization of $10,000, and the following organizers: C. H. Tiedge, Max Wave, Ed Rheinschmidt and William Rheinschmidt.

New Accountant for State.

F. H. Paul of Des Moines, formerly in charge of the insurance department in the office of the auditor of state, was elected state accountant at a meeting of the executive council to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Charles Heer some months ago.

Henry A. Nichols, in charge of the supply department for the state board of control, was elected by the executive council as assistant to Mr. Paul and Capt. J. N. Gadd, an employe of the department of parks of the city of Des Moines was elected to the vacancy in the supply department occassioned by the retirement of Mr. Nichols.

Mr. Paul, the new state accountant, came to Des Moines from Manchester, Iowa, some years ago to work in the office of the auditor of the district court at that place.

Money and Credits Decision.

Nels Lee, special counsel in the office of Attorney General Cosson, answering inquiries from bankers over the state, has ruled that government bonds cannot be deducted when returning property for assessment under the monies and credits tax.

His ruling raises the direct issue of the constitutionality of the entire law.

He says that the state can tax government bonds for state purposes under the provisions of the monies and credits tax law.

The question will probably be thrashed out in the courts. The decision sustains City Assessor Parker, who assessed the government bonds held by Des Moines banks and thus increased their assessments over $2,000,000.

Parole Board Denies Pardon.

The state board of parole denied the application of L. J. Tjernagle for a parole. This ends all hope that he will be released from prison before the end of his term. It alsa closes the chapter in one of the most interesting cases which has been before the board in years.

The supreme court confirmed the conviction of the district court. Tjernagle then appealed to Governor Carroll to prevent his commitment. That failed. He entered Fort Madison and then appealed to the parole board for a parole. That has failed. He must now serve his three and a half years for embezzlement.

Bank Charter Renewed.

Articles of incorporation for the renewal of the charter of the Woodbine Savings bank were filed in the office of the secretary of state. The capitalization of that bank was placed at $30,000. H. A. Kinney, Lewis Haas, S. R. De Cou and W. E. O'Connor were named as the directors.

CURED ITCHING AND BURNING

"I was taken with the itch in April, 1904, and used most everything. I had a friend pay me a visit from Cumberland, and she advised me to use Cuticura Remedies which I did. The cure was certainly quick, and I use them to this day. I had it terribly under my knees. I only used one box of pills, but two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, and I use the Cuticura Soap all the time. I hope this will benefit others, as it has me, after Dr. ——— and others could do nothing for me." (Signed) Miss Lu Johnson, 1523 Ninth St., N. W., Washington, D. C., April 3, 1910.

In a later letter Miss Johnson adds: "The trouble began with an eruption under my knees, and extended upwards toward my waist, until I was not able to sit down. It kept a constant itching and burning all the time, night and day. I went to my doctor, but he could do me no good after I do not know how many medicines he gave me, and then told me I would be compelled to go to a skin specialist, which I positively refused to do. I cried all the time. Finally I made up my mind to try Cuticura Remedies, and tried Cuticura Pills, Ointment and Soap, and was entirely cured of the itching three days after I started using them. The healing took about eight days. I consider Cuticura Remedies marvelous, and would recommend them everywhere."

Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, for free book on skin afflictions.

A very good natured broker, who is very much larger than his wife, and who likes his little joke at someone else's expense, was sitting in the theater. A man behind him, not knowing who he was, leaned forward and whispered, "Will you please ask your wife to remove her hat?"

"You'd better do it yourself. I'm afraid."

Whereupon the man behind became angry, arose, protested and left the theater.

Her Qualifications.

Pat and his little brown mare were familiar sights to the people of the town of Garry. The mare was lean, blind and lame, but by dint of much coaxing Pat kept her to the harness. One day while leading her to water he had to pass a corner where a crowd of would-be sports had congregated. Thinking to have some amusement at Pat's expense, one called out:

"Hullo, there, Pat. I'm looking for the real goods. How much is that mare of yours able to draw?"

"Begora," said Pat, "I can't say exactly, but she seems to be able to drawh the attenshun of ivery fool in town."—The Housekeeper.

Just Hopes.

A gentleman never snatches his trousers away from his wife when he discovers her going through his pockets. He only hopes she will leave him enough with which to go downtown in the morning. He is perfectly welcome to go through her purse any time and help himself to anything he can find. That is what married life means. A man should not allow his feelings to be hurt when his wife runs across loose change or a roll in his pockets; he ought to play the game and take such little conjugal pastimes for granted.

Pettit's Eye Salve RELIEF FOR WEAK SORE EYES

IF YOU HAVE A SICKLY YOUNGSTER TRY THIS FREE

The family with young children that is without sickness in the house now and then is rare, and so it is important that the head of the house should know what to do in the little emergencies that arise. A child with a serious ailment needs a doctor, it is true, but in the majority of instances, as any doctor knows, the child suffers from some intestinal trouble, usually constipation.

There is no sense in giving it a pill or a remedy containing an opiate, nor is flushing of the bowels to be always recommended. Rather give it a small dose of a mild, gentle laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which, by cleaning out the bowels and strengthening the little stomach muscles, will immediately correct the trouble.

This is not alone our opinion but that of Mrs. N. H. Mead of Freeport, Kans., whose granddaughter has been taking it successfully and of Mrs. J. R. Whiting of Lena, Wis., who gives it to her children and takes it herself. It is sold in fifty cent and one dollar bottles at every drug store, but if you want to test it in your family before you buy it send your address to Dr. Caldwell and he will forward a supply free of charge.

Backache

Is only one of many symptoms which some women endure through weakness or displacement of the womanly organs. Mrs. Lizzie White of Memphis, Tenn., wrote Dr. R. V. Pierce, as follows:

"At times I was hardly able to be on my feet. I believe I had every pain and ache a woman could have. Had a very bad case. Internal organs were very much diseased and my back was very weak. I suffered a great deal with nervous headaches, in fact, I suffered all over. This was my condition when I wrote to you for advice. After taking your 'Favorite Prescription' for about three months can say that my health was never better."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. Tones and builds up the nerves. Do not permit a dishonest dealer to substitute for this medicine which has a record of 40 years of cures. "No, thank you, I want what I ask for."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets induce mild natural bowel movement once a day.

GUMPTION ON THE FARM

Named your farm yet?

Any shade in the pasture? Why not?

The golden text for June is: "Keep the soil stirred."

If you want to kill weeds, cultivate or hoe them when the sun shines hot.

The trouble with the honey bee is that it doesn't carry honey at both ends.

No, lime is not good for potatoes; it favors scab. So does too much stable manure.

Now, please, don't let the mower rattle all to pieces. Keep it well oiled and every nut screwed up tightly, and don't let the knives or guards get dull.

Remember, brother farmer, that the hot weather and hard work tax the strength of your wife. She will enjoy going to the store with you and riding slowly home in the cool of the evening.

Cut clover hay when about half the blossoms are brown; cut timothy just as the bloom is falling. Curing clover: Cut it as soon as the dew is off in the morning. At noon shake out the bunches, rake into windrows before evening dews get on it, and let it lie until next day. Next day shake out the hay as soon as the dew is off. You ought to be ready to haul, on a hot day, by eleven o'clock, or certainly after dinner. It spoils clover hay to get too dry. It should never be put into the barn when wet with rain or dew; but a little sap won't hurt it. Curing timothy: If the crop is not too heavy and rank, cut as soon as the dew is off, let it cure a few hours, rake into windrows, and haul to the barn the same day. If crop is rank, cut it in the afternoon; it will wilt some during the night and dew will not hurt it. Next day's sun will dry it in a few hours, when it can be raked into windrows; haul it to the barn in the early afternoon. —From June Farm Journal.

Run, run! Mr. Alan, for that's the to catch Miss Evelyn on the tch—she oughter be here now in minutes. Come on, Bennie, and all the children in line! Tell rybody to come here to the grocery and listen to the speech first g—there's Mr. Bradford now. My, Miss Cynthie, don't everybody fine? Mis' Kinney's pink cotton pe goes so nice with Mis' Dobbs' rple, and if Mis' Tyne ain't fixed up beat the band." Miss Selina Lue her guests at the foot of the steps welcomed them with enthusiasm. s Cynthia helped do the honors shared in the general excitement. "Howdy everybody!" said Miss Se- a Lue. "We sure make a fine show. e is going to shake hands right here th us all and then go and see the tures before it gits dark, and then me the refreshments. Miss Cynthie, u hadn't oughter hold Blossom, but u jest will do it and muss your ess. Now, Ethel Maud, hold Clem- e careful till her mother gits here, d I will carry the twins as we go wn to meet her. I feel like the ba- es oughter see it all—you can't be- n on manners fer entertainments o young."

And so the honored guest found em, an exotic-colored aggregation of lpitating excitement in gala attire d more gala humor. It often hap- ns in the world that the coin of hu- an intercourse stamped entertain- ent does not buy for tenderer or bar- rer much in the way of real pleas- re, but on the Bluff it was otherwise. oy, real, effervescent, sparkling joy lled every cup to the brim and ran ver.

The Bluff took Miss Evelyn to its rms and caressed and admired and bbilated over her to its heart's con- ent. She was greeted in flowery hrases by Mr. Si Bradford, whose ratorical acrobatic feats were as as- onishing as the triple handsprings hat Bennie Dobbs turned in her path t every possible opportunity. It was ell that her fund of enthusiasm was dequate to supply long drafts. Miss Cynthia stood by and watched her ith awed pride and delight. She nthused over young Jim Peters in tiff and uncomfortable attire, and his osy, blushing young mother in soft lue muslin. She admired all six Tyneses and was especially interested n Ethel Maud's little barked nose. She expressed starvation at the aroma of Mrs. Kinney's pies and listened ith rapt attention to Luella recite a choice piece in nine verses, nor did she fail to handle the heirloom teapot with becoming reverence when it was transported into her presence wrapped in an old flannel petticoat.

"My, my!" said Miss Selina Lue in an aside to Mr. Alan, who had taken his stand by her at the grocery door just one step below that on which stood Miss Cynthia with Blossom in her arms. "Ain't they having a good time? I do hate to break it up by asking her to look at pictures, but Mr. Leeks is a-going to play her a tune on his meggyphone, and as soon as it's over I am going to send her right up to the barn and keep the crowd down here to help me set out the refreshments. S'posen, Miss Cynthie, you run on up there now so as to be there when Mr. Alan gits her up. I am sorry you won't let me take Blossom away from you, though I know if I try there will be a hollering, and it do seem a pity to mix any tears in this party." At the mention of her name Blossom gurgled and clung to Miss Cynthia as if she understood that the suggestion of her possible dislodgment was being negated strenuously by the lady of her adorations.

"Well, Mr. Alan, you'd better go 'long with 'em and hand her up the ladder to Miss Cynthie. Then hurry back so you will be here when the piece is finished. Now he's tuning up!"

And obedient to instructions and the exigencies of the case, Mr. Alan did hurry—only one minute—was—long. Miss Cynthia knelt on the loft floor and reached down for the Blossom he held to her from the ladder and her face was the hue of the roses and her eyes were twin stars—and tender. A moment she held the rapturous baby to her breast and smiled down at him over the golden head—and as Mr. Alan ran for the grocery to the last strains of "Won't You Come Home, Bill Bailey?" as executed by Mr. Leeks, his heart lent wings to his feet.

The hour the four of them spent in the studio with the pictures was delightful, for Evelyn looked into Miss Cynthia's eyes for a moment, then kissed her on both cheeks and—was merciful and charming.

And So the Honored Guest Found Them.

The pictures so absorbed all three—nay, all four, for from the first time Blossom had been transported to the studio she had gazed at them with wide-eyed wonder that had overjoyed the artist—that when Miss Selina Lue's beaming face appeared above the ladder they could scarcely realize how the time had flown.

"Well, well, what a nice time you all do seem to be having! Such a day as never was on the Bluff before, and everybody so happy! I declare, Mr. Alan have smiled so much since morning that he's gitting fat. They ain't nobody said a cuss word or slapped a child since sunup. But come down everybody, for the crowd has sung and laughed itself hungry and I can't hold 'em back no longer. Miss Cynthie, honey, did you notice the wreath of larkspur Mr. Alan and Bennie Dobbs tied around Charity's neck? Don't she look dressy and proud? And she's kinder switching her tail perky. Trust a woman, if she is jest a cow, to skitter some in finery. But I'll go on, and you follow as fast as you can."

The refreshments were appreciated to their limit, and so enticing were their appearance and flavor that Miss Evelyn first chose "cross-barred," then accepted "open-faced," and finally begged for "kivered," to Mrs. Kinney's manifest delight. In fact, when the tale was told, there remained only one of each persuasion, which Miss Selina Lue had packed in a basket to send to Mrs. Jackson Page, whose regrets had been profuse though formal.

"You walk on up the hill with the girls, Mr. Alan, and carry the basket," said Miss Selina Lue as they began after unnumbered farewells to take their departure. "Come back often, Miss Evelyn. You've got friends here on the Bluff as'll stand to you the rest of your life, and fer them you can't come too often. Now, Mr. Alan, hand them pies to Mis' Page yourself and don't trust 'em to the girls, for they are having so much good time I am skeered to risk 'em."

And so Mr. Kent appeared for the first time before Mrs. Jackson Page bearing a gift of rare spices; and though at first welcomed icily, after an hour's conversation in which transpired, by her adroit maneuvering, his parentage, and the social and financial standing thereof, he was invited most cordially to dine.

"Law, Miss Seliny Lue, where can Mr. Alan be?" questioned Mrs. Kinney, as she sat for a few minutes on the grocery steps in the moonlight. "It's after ten o'clock, and he ain't never showed up since he took them girls home. He must have on his tar-pants fer settin! Co'ting oughtn't to be gave in sich hunks; broken doses is better."

"Well, now, Mis' Kinney, honey," answered Miss Selina Lue dreamily, her eyes resting in the long shadows the hackberry cast across the street, "you know folks git married fer a long time, and it do seem like co'ting oughter go on quite a spell 'fore they goes through the door from which they ain't no returning unless by death—or divorce, which is wusser. And then, too, ain't it jest one of the best times they is to life? So I fear one say let it be drawed out into fine strands, though strong as number forty cotton."

CHAPTER VIII.

The Wilted Blossom.

"Don't nothing put the heart in a broke-down woman like a little loving."
—Miss Selina Lue.

"Bennie, honey, run up the hill and tell Miss Cynthie that I wish't she would come right down, fer Blossom ain't so well; and stop in and ask Mis' Kinney to come and sell the suppers fer me, 'cause I don't want to leave the baby."

"Oh, Miss Seliny Lue, is she much sick?" Bennie's freckled face drew up into a knot with anxiety, for Blossom was the core of the green apple that at his age passes for a heart.

"Yes, honey, she's pretty bad, and I feel I must see Miss Cynthie a bit. Now run along; and if you see Mr. Alan, send him to me, too." Miss Seline Lue's strong face was grave and sweet, but had none of the disfiguring marks with which anxiety ravages many countenances. As she turned Mr. Alan entered the back door.

"How's the Blossom?" he asked anxiously as he deposited his kit in the corner.

"Looks like I can't even want a thing in my heart without when I open my eyes there it is," said Miss Selina Lue softly. "The baby ain't so well, I am afeered, and I was jest mean and selfish enough to send fer Miss Cynthie to come down and worry with me. I never did hold with sharing worries, but I didn't expect you back till dark, and it jest seemed like I had to have one or t'other of you a while."

"What did the doctor say?" asked Mr. Alan as he came and stood by her in the door.

There was strength and comfort in the very sight of him, and Miss Selina Lue brightened visibly as she answered.

"Well, Mr. Alan, it do beat everything to me to see a man-doctor flounder around and hunt for what's the matter with a baby. It's plumb painful. But this young feller, what you and Miss Cynthie say is a specialer with babies, done pretty well, with my helping him along. He says it is pneumony with a long-named side issue to it, what I call jest plain being threatened with bad croup. If it was one of the Tyneses now, or Luella Kinney, I would think sure I could pull 'em through; but Blossom looks like she wasn't mixed outen the same ingrejints as the other children on the Bluff, and somehow—I—" Miss Selina Lue's voice faltered for a moment.

Mr. Alan took her hand in his and said gently: "She is a very special sort of flower is the Blossom, and we all feel that. Did the doctor say he would rather have the trained nurse?"

"I asked him faithful 'cause I promised you, but he jest looked at me and he said there wasn't no sich nursing as she had to be bought in the city. And course he knows about you walking her nights and Miss Cynthie a-spelling of us both. Looks like to me, too, that they ain't no nursing in the world that can do as well as what comes from the hand of love—if it is guided by common sense."

"Yes, but skill sometimes is needed in some—"

"Well, ain't skill another name fer common sense? I've done had experience with the lack of 'em both. When Ethel Maud was six months old, Mis' Dobbs fed her a little strawberry preserves, and I thought her time had come when I seed the spasm she went into. After a spell when I got her emptied out and full of hot ginger tea, she woulder quieted down but her mother set her afire with a candle she was holding to see if she was a-breathing. And, lands alive, the child was most burned to death 'fore I could put her out! And what with the strawberry poison working on her at the same time she almost passed from us. And there she is alive and a-setting by Blossom as quiet as a mouse to call me if she stirs—baby-loving and tending was borned in that child."

"Miss Seliny Lue," called a small frightened voice, which was followed by a hoarse cough.

"Watch fer Miss Cynthie and bring her back to my room. There comes Mis' Kinney to sell the suppers! Can't you kinder keep her talking out here? She do make the baby jump so."

Longevous Geese.

Geese will live to a great age, and some few years ago I came across a very venerable goose (male or female I cannot now say) in Wesmoreland in unexpected circumstances. I was walking from Milnthorpe to Arnside, and at Ganaside found an acquaintance sitting on a seashore bench feeding a pet goose with biscuits steeped in ale. He told me that this goose had been in his family for over forty years and was partial to beer stout, and even gin. One of the most of geese with which I am acquainted remarkable records of the longevity is to be found in an old book entitled "Travels in Scotland," by the Rev. James Hall, M. A., London, two volumes, 1907. On a visit to a Mr. Charles Grant of Elchies, Stirlingshire, the author was informed of a gander that had been killed by accident after living at the same place for "above eighty years."—G. W. M. in the Field.

Old Custom Survives.

Uckfield has just held its annual pea supper, a function which owes its origin to a practical joke. Fifteen years ago a plot of land belonging to a resident became, on account of its neglected state, such an eyesore to his fellow-townsmen that they took the matter into their own hands and dug it up. The owner resolved to profit by their labor and plant the field, but on his next visit to the spot he found to his annoyance, that it had already been sown with peas.

Soon, however, anger gave place to amusement, and he laughingly told the perpetrators of the joke that they would have to eat the peas, says London Titbits. This in due course they did, and from that day the celebration has grown yearly in popularity. Over 50 sat down a week back to a capital repast of peas, bacon and other excellent fare.

The Wall of True Art.

All who have seen the newly erected statue to Sir Henry Irving, by Mr. Brock, R. A., have spoken of it in the highest praise. The pose is splendid and the facial expression is lifelike, and yet from the tailor's point of view there are one or two points that call for thought. Is there one law for the artist and sculptor and another for the tailor?—Tailor and Cutter.

MENTAL ACCURACY

Greatly Improved by Leaving Off Coffee

The manager of an extensive creamery in Wis. states that while a regular coffee drinker, he found it injurious to his health and a hindrance to the performance of his business duties.

"It impaired my digestion, gave me a distressing sense of fullness in the region of the stomach, causing a most painful and disquieting palpitation of the heart, and what is worse, it muddled my mental faculties so as to seriously injure my business efficiency.

"I finally concluded that something would have to be done. I quit the use of coffee, short off, and began to drink Postum. The cook didn't make it right at first. She didn't boil it long enough, and I did not find it palatable and quit using it and went back to coffee and to the stomach trouble again.

"Then my wife took the matter in hand, and by following the directions on the box, faithfully, she had me drinking Postum for several days before I knew it.

"When I happened to remark that I was feeling much better than I had for a long time, she told me that I had been drinking Postum, and that accounted for it. Now we have no coffee on our table.

"My digestion has been restored, and with this improvement has come relief from the oppressive sense of fullness and palpitation of the heart that used to bother me so. I note such a gain in mental strength and acuteness that I can attend to my office work with ease and pleasure and without making the mistakes that were so annoying to me while I was using coffee.

"Postum is the greatest table drink of the times, in my humble estimation." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

SAVING HER RECORD

If there is anything Mrs. Jenkinson prides herself on it is being on time. In fact, her superhuman punctuality becomes as intolerable at times as the moral courage of the person who takes cold plunges in the morning and boasts of the fact. Her satisfaction rises to its sublimest height when she can show off before some unfortunate mortal who is invariably late.

Therefore she beamed condescendingly upon Mrs. Loffett and said: "Oh, cer—tainly, I'll be able to meet you at the State street entrance of Longcloth's at 12:30. It will be perfectly easy!"

"Well, I didn't know," apologized Mrs. Loffett. "There are always so many things to do around the house mornings that it's hard—"

"Not if you use the proper system," interrupted Mrs. Jenkinson firmly.

The Jenkinsons had just taken a small flat after a long siege of boarding and were not entirely adjusted. The worst trouble was that there were four bells which rang and Mrs. Jenkinson's ear had not had time to be trained to the difference between them. When one rang she invariably answered all four, as always it was the last one she answered. This gave her plenty of exercise.

The morning she was to meet Mrs. Loffett at 12:30 Mrs. Jenkinson was aroused from a late slumber by the ringing of a bell. She sprang up blinking and puzzled and then consciousness came.

"My packages from downtown!" she murmured. "The back door bell, of course!"

Slipping into a dressing gown, she rushed to the back door. There was nobody there. She opened the front door with the same results. Then she attacked the speaking tube leading to the front entrance downstairs. There was no response to her hellos.

"Oh!" she said shortly a few seconds later, as she gazed from the front window where she had wandered and got a view of the postman sigzagging across the street below. "It was his ring! I might have known!"

Mrs. Jenkinson proceeded to turn the faucets in the bathtub and let it fill with water. As she splashed a bell rang. "My goodness!" she moaned. It rang again peremptorily, and finally some one pounded on the front door.

"Well, you just pound!" she muttered, hysterically. "The idea!"

A little later she opened the door and stared upon the vacant hall searching for a clue. There was no clue.

"Who on earth could that have been?" she asked herself. "Mercy—it's after ten o'clock!"

As she was making coffee a bell rang and it sounded like the one downstairs. When she had shrieked "hello" into the tube till her throat hurt it rang again and some one pounded on the back door. The icy and infuriated individual who stood there snorted as he brushed by her.

"Telephone c'llection," he explained briefly. "I climbed three flights of front stairs once this morning an now I've climbed three flights of back ones and it's no fun, I can tell you!

Mrs Jenkinson, wildly searching for her purse, found it at last in the shoe bag, where she had hidden it. Her head was thumping as she ushered out the telephone man and hurried back to her coffee. It had boiled over. She dropped the toast she was making to answer the next bell.

"Dress from the cleaner's for Smith," announced a voice through the tube.

"Smiths don't live here," called back Mrs. Jenkinson. Presently there was a ring at the front door and she found a boy holding out the cleaner's box.

"It isn't mine," insisted Mrs. Jenkinson.

The boy regarded her reproachfully. "This is the number an' I've climbed three flights of stairs an' it's two fifty."

"Take it away!" ordered Mrs. Jenkinson, indignantly. "I don't know anything about it!" She banged the door on the boy's protests and tore to the kitchen, which was full of smoke. The toast was cinders.

"I'd—I'd like to cry!" moaned Mrs Jenkinson.

She discarded her kimono and started to dress for downtown, accelerated by the last glance at the clock, which said 11:15. She had 45 minutes before the suburban train was due. Things hid themselves with that maddening ingenuity they always develop when one is in a hurry. In ten minutes the bedroom and closet looked like Culebra cut in the process of excavation. Then the telephone rang.

She missed her train and raged for 20 minutes waiting for the next one. When, breathless and disheveled, she dashed into the entrance to Longcloth's, she was trying to conceal her humiliation. To be late with Alice Loffett was intolerable. To her unbelievable amazement, Mrs. Loffett was not waiting with triumph in her eyes and during the ensuing 15 minutes Mrs. Jenkinson repaired damages to her toilet.

"Oh," cried Mrs. Loffett, rushing up at last, "I'm so sorry! Have you been waiting all this time?"

The glance Mrs. Jenkinson turned upon her would have made her fortune on the stage. It was calm, reproachful, condescending and patient.

"Oh," said Mrs. Jenkinson without the quiver of an eyelash, "one gets used to waiting when one is systematic."

MARVEL OF CINEMATOGRAPHY

Wonderful Apparatus Invented by Dr. Cranz of the Military Academy of Berlin.

A cinematograph apparatus which takes pictures with intervals of one five-thousandth of a second has been invented by Dr. Cranz of the Military Academy of Berlin. A striking example of the power of the apparatus shows a bullet fired at a bladder of water that is hung on a string.

The eye only sees a little smoke from the pistol and a couple of holes in the bladder, from which the water runs; but when this is cinematographed and the film is shown slowly a very interesting series of operations can be watched.

First the bullet is seen approaching. It is traveling 1,000 feet a second, but it seems to move quite deliberately. In front of it and extending a long way above and below it is a dim line, bent sharply immediately before the bullet. A bullet can no more pass through air than a vessel can through water without making a wave; and this is the air wave. It is made visible on account of its different density, just as the waves in air are seen above a chimney or over hot ground.

Behind the bullet come scattered grains of the powder that have not been burned, and traveling more slowly still comes the wad. The bullet enters the bladder and disappears inside, a little water spurting out of the hole it makes. Then it reaches the other side, but it no longer cuts through at once, as it did when the bladder was backed up by the water.

Something like a finger seems to push the bladder outward into a long tube, then the tube opens and lets out the bullet, which gradually travels away.—London correspondence New York Sun.

Walking Safe and Sane.

Taking it for granted that your heart is sound and normal, eight or ten miles' walk a day can only do a young man good; is the safest, sanest, best of all exercises, especially if the walker uses his powers of observation and thought on the way to cheer up and freshen brain, heart, appetite and nervous system. Forced long tramps for the mere glory of the thing are N. G.; are sometimes positively injurious. Walking should always take the form of a gay excursion, and not a stunt—where possible. Such walks are unusual these days, but long ago were everyday affairs, like hunting and sparking. One thing today is different; the roads are much harder; you know, in the old days there were no asphalt streets, gravel roads or other nongiving foot and leg killers. Every man ought to take one or two long walks a week and he ought to have three or four pairs of good shoes just for that purpose, so that while he is breaking in and softening up a new pair there are a couple of easy pairs to fall back on. Walking does not hurt the heart, and if there are no baggy veins or vein bags, walking hardly ever hurts a man.

Where Lord Byron Lived.

The late Lord Glenesk's house in Piccadilly, London, England, which is up for sale, has had several notable occupants, but none more notable than Lord Byron. Most of his brief and tempestuous married life was passed there, his daughter, Lady Lovelace, was born there, he was living there when he parted from his wife forever and in the library at the back of the house overlooking the stables—Lord Glenesk also used it as his library—he wrote "The Siege of Corinth." The apartment remains pretty much the same as it was in 1816.

There are several memorials of the poet in the house. His bust stands in a recess in the overmantel of the entrance hall. There is an oil painting of him framed by the overmantel of the library and the secret stairs in the lobby at the back of the morning room are said to have been used by him as a means of gaining access unobserved through the still existing trapdoor to the room above. He used, it is said, the latter room as a bedchamber, though in Lord and Lady Glenesk's time it was a drawing room.

IOWA MUST PAY BILL

Strike In The Button Factories Will Be Charged Up to State

CITY WILL PAY PART OF IT

Muscatine Pays Expenses Incurred by Local and Fairfield Companies and State Takes Care of the Rest.

Des Moines, Iowa. — The taxpayers of the state of Iowa must bear the brunt of the expense incident to the calling out of the national guard last month to suppress the disorders at Muscatine, which occurred during the trouble between the button manufacturers at that place and their employes. Of the five companies ordered out by the governor while the trouble was in progress the state must foot the bills for three and Muscatine county the other two, according to an opinion which has been rendered in the office of the attorney general.

Claims filed thus far with Adj. Gen. Guy E. Logan for expenses incident to the sojourn of the soldiers indicate that the state treasurer will be called upon to pay in the neighborhood of $10,000. It was generally understood at the time the troops were ordered out that Muscatine county would be held for the entire expense, and it was for that reason that many of the citizens there objected so strongly to their being retained. Later it was discovered, however, that the county could only be called upon for such expense as was entailed by the local company, which was called out by the sheriff.

Attorney General to Decide.

Governor Carroll and Auditor of State Bleakley have appealed to Attorney General Cosson for an opinion as to what fund the state shall draw on to meet the expenses of the state militia at Muscatine while on riot duty there.

On the vouchers prepared by Adjutant General Guy E. Logan and approved by the governor the general treasury account is specified for payment while the auditor insists that the money should be drawn from the special appropriation of $50,000 provided biennially by the legislature as an emergency measure to meet the expenses incident to riots and disturbances of that nature.

Under the ruling contended for by the auditor the executive council must approve of the accounts before they can be paid.

State School Budget.

The executive committee of the state board of education completed the budget for the various state schools for the ensuing year, which will be submitted to the board for approval at the meeting at Cedar Rapids. It is stated that the entire session of the board will be given over to the consideration of the budget and provisions for the ensuing year in the state schools, and that the faculty would remain practically the same as last year.

Members of the board deny that there is any truth to the report given circulation that charges against Professor Holden of Ames would be taken up at the session. It was stated that the reports had no foundation of fact whatsoever.

New Auto Law Now in Effect.

All of the assessments made against automobiles for the coming quarter must be revoked. Such was the substance of a statement from Auditor of State Bleakley. Henceforth automobiles will be taxed upon application for a number according to the horsepower of the car.

Eighty-five per cent of the funds will be divided equally among the counties and the other 15 per cent remains with the state.

The new law which is now in effect also limits the age of auto drivers. No person under 15 years of age will be allowed to run a car in the future.

Three Judges to Hear Rate Cases.

In an opinion of the United States supreme court received by Judge Smith McPherson, it is held that the hearing of suits for temporary injunctions brought in the federal court must be a judge of the circuit court.

Whether or not Judge McPherson will be compelled to call in associate judges to hear the express rate cases now pending will depend upon his decision of the arguments to be made by the attorneys for the litigants.

Nomination Papers.

The nomination papers of Judge W. R. Green of Audubon, republican candidate for congress in the Ninth congressional district, nominated at the recent convention at Council Bluffs, have been received in the office of Secretary of State Hayward.

THE OGDEN MINE TROUBLE

Controversy Now Is About Employment of Negroes All of Whom Bear Union Cards.

The dispute at the Ogden Coal company's mine at Ogden remains unsettled. At the conference in Des Moines between the representatives of the miners and the operators the participants were unable to reach any basis of agreement and Pres. W. H. Rodgers of the miners returned to his home at Ottumwa.

The difficulty at the mine dates from last November, when the miners, it is said, made a demand for mine run coal. The mine closed until April 1 when work was again commenced with practically all negro miners. At present, Mr. Smith of the operators says that 200 men are working there, practically all negroes.

The controversy now has to do with the employment of the negroes at the mine, all of whom, it is said, bear union cards. They came from other mines to the Ogden work.

It is said that the miners' board will attempt to bar them from the union.

Explains New Road Statute.

Nels Lee of the attorney general's office handed down an official interpretation of the Cunningham road dragging law, in which he holds that it is the duty of the road trustees to make the 1 mill drag levy this year, despite the fact that the annual levy for the year was made five days before the law became effective.

On the question of whether a trustee can also be elected dragging superintendent, the opinion says that he cannot. Mr. Lee says that the two positions are incompatible because as trustee he would assist in fixing his salry as drag superintendent.

He further rules that the trustees can use money for any road fund this year for road dragging.

He rules that it is the duty of the trustees to divide the township into permanent road drag districts this year and appoint a drag superintendent this year; that it is not the duty of the township clerk to call the meeting of the trustees, but that it would be a good thing if the clerk would take this duty upon himself.

Half Sister Not Legally a Sister.

Can a half sister be considered a man's sister within the meaning of the Iowa collateral inheritance tax law?

This is the question which Wilson, Grilk & Wilson, Davenport attorneys, have put up to Quincy Willis, deputy state treasurer and chief of the collateral inheritance tax division.

Mr. Willis rules that she cannot be so considered.

His ruling compels Elise Montenson, of Dalum, Denmark, to pay a 20 per cent tax on the property which she inherits from her brother, Peter H. Peterson of Scott county, instead of a 10 per cent tax if she could be considered a sister.

The collateral inheritance tax law provides that heirs, devisees and other beneficiaries, who are not residents of the United States, must pay 20 per cent tax on property inherited unless such non-resident be a brother or sister.

Tama Indians May Give Up School.

Iowa may obtain possession of the government Indian school at Toledo, Tama county, and convert it into a state epileptic colony.

The federal government has made a proposition to give the institution to the state, it is understood.

The Indians on the reservation in Tama county cannot be compelled to attend the school. The members of the tribe absolutely refuse to send their children to the school seeming to have no desire whatever to educate them.

The state has long been in need of an institution which can be used as an epileptic colony.

Negotiations are now pending between the federal government and the state officials for the transfer of the property.

Carroll's View Not Sustained.

In an opinion given by Attorney General Cosson, it is held that the funds for the payment of expenses occasioned by the calling out of the state militia recently for riot duty at Muscatine must be paid out of the contingent fund of $50,000 provided by the state legislature instead of the general treasury funds as has been contended by Governor Carroll.

The opinion also provides that the claims must be passed upon and approved by the entire executive council, it being held that the approval of the government was not sufficient to authorize their payment.

WORK OF FIRE BUGS

Dubuque Suffers Million Dollar Loss in Midnight Fire

MILL AND LUMBER DESTROYED

Plant of Standard Lumber Company Destroyed; That of Flick Box Company Mass of Flames at 2:30 O'clock.

Dubuque, May 27.—Fire, believed to be of incendiary origin, starting at midnight, destroyed the plant of the Standard Lumber company. At 2:30 o'clock the entire factory district was threatened and the flames were completely out of the control of the firemen. The damage already done is estimated at more than a million dollars. Two arrests have been made in connection with the blaze.

Four fires were started almost simultaneously in different parts of the city about midnight. One in the yards of the Carr-Ryder-Adams company, in the heart of the factory district, became uncontrolable and the firemen could do little toward checking the flames, which quickly spread to adjoining buildings.

The yards of the Carr-Ryder-Adams company were practically destroyed. Property of the Key City Lumber company was seriously damaged. The building and yards of the Frick Box company was burning fiercely and seemed doomed at 2:30 o'clock.

The entire fire department, reinforced by many citizen fighters, can do little with the blaze, and the area of ruined property is rapidly widening. More than 1,000,000 feet of white pine lumber, located in the yards of the Standard company, and other lumber concerns has been destroyed.

MAKES TOUGH STEAK TENDER

Meat Pressed Between Two Corrugated Metal Surfaces Is Rendered More Palatable.

The toughest piece of steak that ever loosened a boarder's teeth will be made tender by the machine invented by an Oregon man, who probably occupied a hall bedroom at some time in his life. A corrugated metal base is mounted on a roller, also of corrugated metal and adjustable at different distances from the base. The roller is loosened and one end of the steak thrust under it. It is then tightened till the meat will be well mangled when passing under it and the base portion is slid back and forth several times. The result is that the steak is crushed between these two ridged surfaces and all the spunk taken out of it. After it has been through this process it can be cooked and eaten without fear. The blood that is squeezed out can be made into delicious gravy.

USES FOR OLD NEWSPAPERS

Good Housekeeper Finds Many Ways of Utilizing Discarded Weeklies and Magazines.

I make use of all my newspapers, says a contributor to Suburban Life. First of all, they are good to wipe the bottoms of saucepans with, thus saving the grime of dish towels generally used for this purpose. I spread them on the shelves, both in the pantry and in the cellar, and it is very little work to change them when soiled. All papers that have become soiled, if not too badly, are twisted into a hard ball, then used as kindlings, with a little kerosene.

When the carpets are taken up, smooth papers are the very best thing to put under them when relaying. I line the barrels with newspapers, with several layers on the top, and apples keep enough longer to pay for the trouble. Papers are better than a brush to polish stoves with, and will "shine" the lamp chimneys and window glass better than a cloth. In fact, I find so many uses for them that I cannot think of them all at one time. Save the newspapers!

Little Economy.

There is nothing so small that you cannot save money on it. Make your pillow cases, for instance, of tubing. Then when they begin to get thin in the middle, you can rip the closed end and sew them again so that the creased edge of the pillow case will be now the middle of the flat side. The worn places are thus brought to the outer edge, where there is practically no wear upon them.

Corn Chowder.

Slice three or four medium-sized potatoes into a granite dish, cover with a layer of thinly sliced onion. Add a little water and simmer until tender. Add one-half can of corn, a little butter, salt and pepper and one and one-half cups of milk or thin cream. Bring gently almost to the boiling point and serve with crisp croutons.

Nut Bread.

Beat up one egg and beat into it one-quarter of a cupful of sugar; add one teaspoonful of salt and two cupfuls of milk. Mix four teaspoonfuls of baking powder with four cupfuls of flour and sift this into the other ingredients, adding at the same time one cupful of chopped nuts. Stir these all together until smooth and then make into two loaves; let them rise in pans for 20 minutes and then bake for 20 minutes in a hot oven.—Harper's Bazar.

Care of Woodenware.

Wooden utensils should always be washed directly after they are used, because if dirt and grease are allowed to soak into the substance of the wood it will be impossible to entirely remove them.

To Set Colors.

Before washing any article that will fade wet in strong salt water and let it dry—two coffee cupfuls of salt to ten quarts of water. After washing one in this way they can always be washed without this precaution.

EXCITING EXPERIENCE OF COBB, MULLIN AND DONOVAN IN PHILADELPHIA.

TESTS NERVES OF PLAYERS

Barney Oldfield Did Not Officiate on Return Trip—"Death Valley Jim" Scott's Hard Luck Story—Evans Stars as a Comedian.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

George Mullin, Bill Donovan and Ty Cobb, feeling rich because they were reporters instead of ball players during the world's series, decided to buy a touring car to take them to the game and back in Philadelphia on the second day of the series. They had employed a taxi cab the first day, and had tipped the driver liberally to wait for them and take them back to the hotel after the game. Of course he failed to be there and they wasted a couple of hours getting to the hotel in Philadelphia street cars, which like people from other cities quit walking on their transportation facilities. They decided not to be caught the second day, so for $25 they employed a young man who was peddling a touring car to take them to the game, wait and bring them back.

The three Tiger stars climbed into the tonneau and started. The driver threw on the high speed and the car raped down Chestnut street 40 miles an hour, swung into Twentieth on two wheels, scraped a hub against a post, scratched the side of a trolley car and shot toward the park. At the boulevard the auto ran straight at a street car, swerved just as the motorman reversed his car and jumped, went over the fender, swung onto the sidewalk and cleared a post by half an inch.

At Girard avenue the auto shot over the fender of a passing car, bumped an express wagon, righted itself and went on. At that time the driver had abandoned the wheel and was changing his gear so the car went half-way into the sidewalk, lurched back, scraped along the side of the street car, missed a wagon an inch and plowed on up the hill. At Ridge avenue the auto hit the head of a horse whose owner had jerked him back onto his haunches, swerved between two street cars, bumped a mail wagon squarely in the middle and tossed it onto the sidewalk, missed another car by a hair's breadth and tore on, the only damage being that the driver's hand was cut to pieces by flying glass. From there it was pretty clear sailing, except that the driver twice took the sidewalk to pass cars, and once bumped a horse out of the way, raced at 30 miles an hour through the crowd crossing the bridge to the ball park and pulled up at the entrance.

Neither Cobb nor Mullin had spoken a word during the wild ride, but Donovan had leaned over a couple of times to remind the driver that he was a married man and his family might miss him. The trio climbed out a little bit nervous and much relieved.

"Say, you loafer, are you drunk or trying to kill us?" demanded Donovan.

"Pal," remarked Mullin, "if I had your speed and curves I'd be the greatest pitcher in the world."

They lined up facing the driver, who calmly removed his goggles and grinned. He was Barney Oldfield and had borrowed the driver's car and taken his place at the wheel to test the nerves of the players. He tested them all right. They got another driver to take them back.

"The toughest game of ball I ever lost," remarked Jim Scott, "Death Valley Jim" the White Sox call him, "was up at Bisbee when I was pitching for the Imperial team in the Desert league. It was a hot day and I was going fine until along in the fifth inning they had a couple of men on bases and some one hit a long fly to the center fielder. He was standing under the ball ready to catch it, when a rattlesnake commenced rattling, and he turned and ran for a club to kill it with. Before he killed the snake three runs had scored and we were two behind. We tied them up in the seventh and in the eighth, with a man on bases the batter hit a little bounder right at the short stop. Just as it was going to bound into his hand the ball hit a horned toad and bounded crooked and they tied up the score. We got another run in the ninth, and in their half a man was on second, two strikes on the batter, and it looked as if we had the game won. I pitched a spit ball that cut the plate in half and the batter swung at it. Instead of catching the ball the catcher jumped ten feet and let out a yell, for just as I pitched a big tarantula crawled over his wrist and onto his mit. He was so scared he didn't even chase the ball so I had to do it. One run had counted, evening up the score, and the batter was running wild. I reached the ball and started to pick it up, but didn't—and the run counted and beat us out of the game."

"Why didn't you pick up the ball, Jim?" asked an interested listener.

"Pick it up?" he demanded. "I should say not. There was a centipede crawling up one side of it and a scorpion perched right on top. I let that game go."

Henry O'Day, the umpire, and Johnny Evers of the Cubs are the dearest enemies. The pair would feel lost if they didn't have each other to fight, and yet between the player and the umpire there exists a deep-seated admiration. Somehow they recall Leevers' (Charles not Sam) song about the Irish:

"Fightin' aich other for the sake of peace,
And hatin' aich other for the love of God."

If anyone remarks to Evers that O'Day is a bad umpire he is likely to get a hard call, and no one can tell O'Day Evers is a bad ball player.

When Evers broke his leg at Cincinnati late in the season—an accident which wrecked a lot of Chicago's hope for the world's championship, O'Day was one of the most sorrowful of the gang.

"It's pretty tough on me," remarked Hank that evening, speaking of the accident to Evers. "I suppose he'll be in an ambulance out by the club house all during the world's series, and I'll have to stop the game and go out there and chase the ambulance off the field."

Steve Evans of the St. Louis Cardinals is one of the comedians of the game, besides being quite a ball player. When the Cards were going to pieces during the latter part of last season and everything was turning against them, a rabid writer, displeased because the opposing batters kept hitting balls just where Steve couldn't reach them, spoke sarcastically of him as belonging to the "Shady corner club." Meaning that Steve played far out in order to get into the shade of the fence and escape the broiling sun.

The following day, along in the middle of the game, Evans appeared in the outfield with a huge Japanese umbrella and a camp stool. Unfolding the parasol he seated himself on the stool, lighted a cigarette and tried to get away with it. The appreciative roar of the crowd warned the umpire that something was going on, and he banished the outfit from the field and forced Steve to stand in the broiling sun—which is some broil in St. Louis.

Evans is irrepressible. One evening in New York during last season he was invited, with several other players, to dine at one of the most exclusive clubs in the city. The club is one composed almost entirely of millionaires, among them some of the most prominent figures in Wall street. The host was a man of great wealth, and also a great baseball fan, and perhaps he thought that the players would be a trifle awed and have a better realization of his own importance if they were entertained at the club, so he took them there.

As the party entered the club the lounging room was filled with millionaires, some of them in the multi class. Evans stopped just inside the doorway and surveyed the throng; men whose names will start a panic or boom a stock, sitting in deep chairs, most of them in evening clothes. Then he raised his voice and remarked so as to be heard all over the room:

"Look at them. Just finished a day's work, taken off the overalls, hung up the spade and picks, and are here wasting their dollar and a half in riotous living. I suppose they'll sit here and rush the can until they've spent their wages. It's a sad sight."

And he passed, mournfully shaking his head through the room, leaving a speechless bunch of autocrats gazing after him.

No Need.

"Do you allow your wife to have the last word?"

"No."

"How do you prevent her?"

"I don't. She takes it."

WHY SHE DID NOT SEND HER PICTURE

What They Did About It.

The reason was beeause her face was so disfigured by a skin eruption that she couldn't have it taken. Just make a note of this fact if you know anyone who suffers from disfiguring skin eruptions. Resinol ointment cures eruptive skin diseases. It restores the skin to normal health and clears the complexion. "I take pleasure in testifying to the most excellent results from the use of Resinol, both ointment and soap," writes Miss Opal Lilley, Camp Creek, W. Va. "I had been troubled for four or five years with a very disfiguring eruption on my face, and Resinol has helped it so much." Resinol ointment should be used for all skin eruptions, eczema, erythema, herpes, barber's itch, psoriasis, etc. It stops itching instantly. Resinol promptly allays irritation and is the best dressing for burns, scalds, boils, felons, carbuncles, etc. It is a comforting, healing preparation, which can be used freely on the tenderest skin. Resinol ointment is put up in opal jars in two sizes, price fifty cents and one dollar. At all druggists. Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

A Wily Judge.

At an assize court, according to the London Times, a juror claimed exemption from serving on the ground that he was deaf. The judge held a conversation with the clerk of arraigns on the subject, and then, turning to the man, at whom he looked intently, he asked in a whisper: "Are you very deaf?" "Very," was the unguarded reply. "So I perceive," was the rejoinder of the judge, "but not whisper deaf. You had better go into the box. The witness shall speak low."—Case and Comment.

WELCOMED BY MEN WHO SMOKE

Particular men who smoke realize how offensive to people of refinement is a strong tobacco breath, and how objectionable to themselves is that "dark brown taste" in the mouth after smoking.

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic is worth its weight in gold for this purpose alone. Just a little in a glass of water—rinse the mouth and brush the teeth. The mouth is thoroughly deodorized, the breath becomes pure and sweet and a delightful sense of mouth cleanliness replaces that dark brown tobacco taste.

Paxtine is far superior to liquid antiseptics and Peroxide for all toilet and hygienic uses and may be obtained at any drug store 25 and 50c a box or sent postpaid upon receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass. Send for a free sample.

A Tame Substitute.

"It begins to look as if those adventurous young men who went to Mexico in hopes of seeing some real fighting will be denied that pleasure."

"Yes. There is nothing left for them to do now but to come back home and jump on the umpire."

TO QUENCH A SUMMER THIRST.

Don't pour a lot of ice water into you in order to quench the thirst for the moment—not only does it not produce the desired result, but it is bad for you.

There is just one beverage that fits all conditions of heat and thirst—COCA-COLA.

Next time you're hot, tired or thirsty drink a glass or a bottle of this one best beverage—delicious, refreshing, thirst-quenching. At soda-fountains or carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Write to the COCA-COLA CO., Atlanta, Ga., for a copy of their booklet, "The Truth About COCA-COLA"—you will find it interesting.

Used to It.

Thompson—Wouldn't you hate to have death staring you in the face?

Johnson—No. If you'd seen my wife's stare, you'd realize that death's has no terror to me.—Harper's Bazar.

The Tragic Difference.

William was lying on his bed, face downward, sobbing desolately His mother took him in her arms, the whole eight years of him. In a few minutes she learned all. It was a girl, and she had sent him a note.

It read:

"Dere Willyum:

"I luv yu the best But Henery givs me the most kandy.—Isabel."—Success Magazine.

Clean Sanitary Floors.

Varnish, which is commonly regarded only as a beautifier, is an efficient sanitary agent. Varnished surfaces can be cleaned by wiping, and the microbe-laden dust is thus kept out of the air. A varnished floor is therefore not only up to date, beautiful and easily cleaned, but is wholesome. The National Association of Varnish Manufacturers, 636 The Bourse, Philadelphia, Penn., are distributing free a booklet entitled "Modern Floors," which tells how floors may be made and kept wholesome and attractive. Send for one. Varnish is cheaper than carpet and far more satisfactory.

A Drop of Blood

Or a little water from the human system when thoroughly tested by the chief chemist at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., tells the story of impoverished blood—nervous exhaustion or some kidney trouble. Such examinations are made without cost and is only a small part of the work of the staff of physicians and surgeons under the direction of Dr. R. V. Pierce giving the best medical advice possible without cost to those who wish to write and make a full statement of symptoms. An imitation of natures method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative and glyceric extract of roots, without the use of alcohol, such as

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

Which makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgment. Get what you ask for!

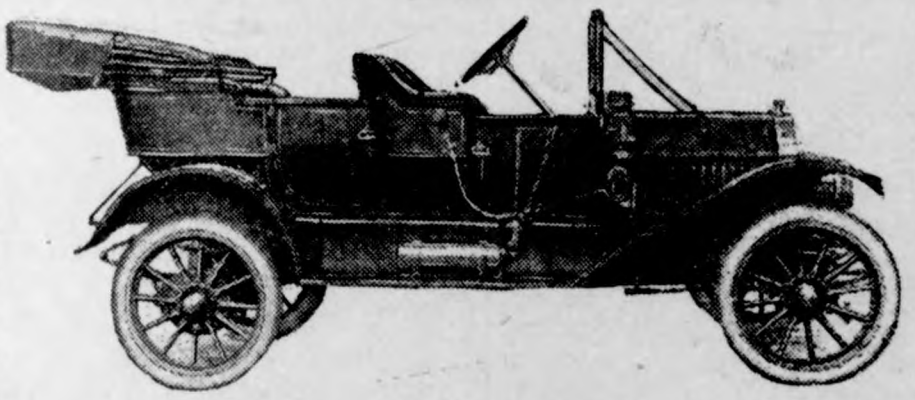
"THE GET THERE KIND"



It is with pleasure that we advertise the IMPERIAL. When so doing it is hard to say too much in favor of this line of IMPERIAL Automobiles. They have the record up-to-date for running and covering more miles of hard road-going, with the least expense, least adjustments.

The Burd Auto Co., Waterloo, Iowa, says: "The Imperial Automobile has not been equaled yet regardless of price." They run out 37 last season. Up to date there hasn't been one adjustment made. Their contract calls for 100 Imperials for 1911.

The Imperial is built in ten models, from a 35 H. P. two-passenger gentleman's Roadster, to a 60 H. P. seven passenger touring car. Buy the car that bears the name IMPERIAL, and get a dollar's worth of automobile for every dollar you invest.

E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation directorate, told the house committee investigating the steel industry that enforced publicity and government control of corporations must come, even as to prices. The senate of the United States passed the resolution offered by Senator Martin of Virginia, directing the standing committee on privileges and elections for the second time to ascertain if corrupt methods were used in the election of William Lorimer as senator from Illinois, and to probe into the world-famous "jack-pot" fund of the Illinois assembly. The vote was 48 to 20.

QUICKER AND BETTER SERVICE

Surveys Strip Providing for Line Between Indianola and Norwalk—Will Better the Freight Conditions.

Des Moines.—Quicker and better freight and passenger service between Des Moines and southern Iowa via the Burlington lines is the aim of a new line already surveyed by the Burlington. This new line is a connecting link between the Burlington at Indianola and the Keokuk & Western line of the same road at Norwalk.

Under present conditions the Burlington line north from Chariton extends only to Indianola. The Keokuk & Western lines reach Des Moines from Osceola by a devious course. By building a line from Indianola to Norwalk, only seven miles, the Burlington will have a direct route from its main line to Des Moines.

I think the neighbors oughter be allowed to git some comfort outen setting up with the sick. Why, when Ethel Maud 'most had that lockjaw from the tack in her heel, there never was less than six friends in the room with me all the time; and they certainly helpt me up a lot."

"Well, I'm thankful I've got mine all safe," answered Mrs. Simmons as she hugged Clemmie closer, "though of course Miss Seliny Lue won't take it as hard as if Blossom was her own."

"No, course not," answered Mrs. Kinney as she took her way home to find Luella asleep on the doorstep, and all the other little Kinneys piled on the floor of the stoop, awaiting her motherly ministrations.

The waning moon that climbed over the Bluff at midnight shone softly across the sill of the wide window in the lean-to and found the wilted Blossom white and suffering, each labored breath shaking the little body with pain; but as the minutes ticked themselves away she lay more quietly and was able to keep back the cough.

Miss Cynthia crouched by the bed on a low stool, her hand still clasped by the tiny fingers, and Miss Selina Lue sat brooding over them both. Her face in the dim light seemed to Mr. Alan, who kept watch from his post by the door, the personification of all the strength and wisdom and love of motherhood, whose heritage is pain. In the hollow of her strong hand she seemed to hold the frail life, and with the humbleness of a woman, and the faith of a child in her eyes, she was asking for it from One who listens. Once she laid a light covering over the tiny feet, and once she bent and drew Miss Cynthia's bowed head to her breast for a second.

Then came the dawn, quiet and gray. As the soft light shone into the room the baby turned on her side and filled her lungs deep with a breath, then fell asleep, every muscle relaxed, and a faint rose flush on her pale cheeks.

For a few breathless minutes they watched her and then Miss Selina Lue bent her head on her hand and Mr. Alan covered his eyes while Miss Cynthia sobbed:

"He's done made us a present of her, children; and I've got his promise to help me git her ready against the time he calls her again," said Miss Selina Lue after a moment, with shining face, and eyes wet for the first time. "Now I must go heat the milk for her before she wakes; she oughter be strengthened as soon as can be." And she slipped quietly out of the room.

But with her head bent on her arms, Miss Cynthia quivered with suppressed sobs; the agony had been too long for her endurance and she was completely prostrated in the reaction. Then a very wonderful thing happened. She found herself lifted in strong arms, her head laid down on a broad shoulder and warm lips pressed to her tear-flushed cheek. And the strangest part of it was that it didn't seem at all strange—only comforting—and restful—and right.

"Now, that's jest the thing, Mr. Alan," said Miss Selina Lue in a smiling whisper from the doorway. "Pet her up, for she is plumb wore out. Don't nothing put heart in a broke-down woman like a little loving, and that's a rule to act by fer the rest of your life."

Miss Cynthia turned in the strong arms and with a blush that matched the dawn across the river she stretched out her hand to Miss Selina Lue. And then Mr. Alan reached out his disengaged arm and together they drew her into their embrace. "Now, you're getting the benefit of your own advice," said Mr. Alan, as he shyly kissed her on the exact spot on the cheek that Miss Cynthia had finished caressing in the same manner.

"Well, I don't see how the old roof on the grocery is going to hold down so much loving happiness, with the baby gitting well and you two fixed up so satisfying-like. They ain't nothing in the world to draw loving to a head like a pinch of trouble, and love what's felt such a pinch is likely to stay by you fer a spell."

"Oh, Miss Selina Lue—" began Mr. Alan, but suddenly Miss Selina Lue remembered a fact of most material importance.

"Land alive, Mr. Alan," she said, "I come to tell you if we didn't both fergit to feed and water Charity last night! What will the critter think of our being so keerless of her comfort? Run and tend to her, please, while I open the grocery. Blossom is deep asleep, so you can go with him, Miss Cynthie, fer Charity will be glad to see you two so smiling together."

As Miss Selina Lue softly drew the shutters together to keep out the light, Miss Cynthia followed in the wake of Mr. Alan and the bucket of bran through the garden and up to the barn. It is to his credit that he served the aggrieved though complacent old lady before he threw down the bucket and drew Miss Cynthia to him.

"Tell me," he questioned, "when it happened to you? It was all over for me that first minute when I saw you, past Carrot's red head, standing in the grocery door."

"That dinner—you didn't laugh!" Miss Cynthia hid her head on his convenient shoulder.

"Ah, but I loved you so I could have—"

"Then?"

"Yes, then—and before—since the world was young—"

"Moo—moo," said Charity patiently, for dry bran is not an agreeable breakfast, and the water barrel stood convenient.

"Do finish feeding the dear thing," insisted Miss Cynthia sympathetically. "Then you can walk up the Hill with me. I want to freshen up a little and come right back to watch by Blossom. She will need very particular care today, and Miss Selina Lue has so much she must do. Oh, what if she hadn't weathered the night! I think my heart would have broken—watching her struggle—if—if you hadn't been there! Will you always be—there—when things hurt—me?"

"Yes," he answered her quietly, with a deep look into her eyes. "Now let me take you home, for you are hardly able to stand. Promise me to get a good rest, and I will help Miss Selina Lue, until you can come back."

And through the early sunlight he walked up the river path with her to the Hill Mansion and left her at the garden gate among her roses that were no fresher or fairer than herself. She was the incarnation of dawn, and his love encompassed her as the fragrance of dew-wet flowers.

Below at the grocery, Miss Selina Lue was busy with her preparations for the day, and as she worked she smiled to herself and lightly brushed her fingers over the cheek that had felt the twofold kiss.

Soon, however, her pleasant thoughts were interrupted by the apparition of Mrs. Kinney at the door. Miss Selina Lue regarded her with astonishment. She was enveloped in the folds of an old black shawl and in her hand she carried a large cross of white tissue-paper roses. The expression on her face was one of sympathy and chastened sorrow.

"Miss Seliny Lue," she said in a correctly funereal voice, "I come over as soon as I could. It took almost all night to git roses enough made to fix a design fer everybody. We all wanted a fitten expression of our sympathy."

"Why, Mis' Kinney, honey, I don't need no sympathy on 'count of—"

"Well, of course she wasn't your own child, and so you can't feel the same as a mother; but a death in the family is always sad, though sometimes a great relief. You seemed so fond of—"

"Oh, Mis' Kinney, honey, stop before you go any farther and let me tell you Blossom ain't dead, but gitting well by the Lord's mercy. Still, I do thank you fer your kind feelings and—"

"Well, I wish I coulder knowed she wasn't a-going to die before I set up all night and wasted the tissue-paper. I woulder rather made— There come the Dobbses now! Won't they be surprised! Mary Ellen have got her wreath done, but it looks kinder wobbly."

Mr. Dobbs had put his black Sunday coat on over his overalls, and on his way to work was stopping for a visit of condolence. Mrs. Dobbs had on a black muslin skirt and waist and had tied a piece of that same material on the arm of Bennie, whose eyes were swollen with crying and whose appearance denoted real heart anguish.

"Oh, Miss Seliny Lue, me and Dobbs come to say—we— Speak up, Dobbs!" Mrs. Dobbs' voice broke and her chubby face began to work with grief.

House Haunted? Low Rent!

When alien immigrants arrive in this country they often bring with them a stock of misapplied ingenuity. The tenant with a ghost is a game that is being played by foreigners in various parts of the United States, and, what is more, it is being played successfully.

The newcomer takes a house, and, after one or two payments of rent, complains that the premises are haunted. Quaking with simulated fear, he tells a tale of horror—of a headless man seen stalking from the coal cellar, a lady in white or of something invisible but groaning. Now, a ghost is the average landlord's prime aversion. Spectral visitors afford splendid subjects for gossip in the neighborhood, and prospective tenants seldom fail to hear and be warned off by the story.

Anxious that the report shall not get about, landlord confers with tenant, and in several such instances the result has been this—the tenant agrees to stay on, to say nothing about the matters to others and to put up with the ghost, providing the rent is substantially reduced.

Primitive School Books.

The horn book invented in 1450 and used considerably up to the close of the eighteenth century was the usual text-book of the elementary school. A thin slab of hard wood was covered with parchment, on which were printed the capital and small letters, numerals and some elementary syllables and words.

Over this a thin sheet of transparent cow's horn was placed and firmly bound so that no moisture could penetrate. To this the Bible and the sampler on which little girls painfully stitched the letters of the alphabet, some "Godly saying" and a border of herring stitch, or some conventional pattern of impossible flowers and foliage and the legend, "Mary Smith, her sampler," or the like, were about all that the children used up to the beginning of the eighteenth century.

Counter Diplomacy.

"I think you will like this goods, madam," urged a salesman in a Euclid avenue shop. "It is just the thing for a stout, middle-aged lady."

"Sir!" squealed the customer in a rage. The clerk saw his faux pas and recovered himself quickly.

"Pardon me," he smiled, "I mistook you for the young lady who was in here yesterday looking for something for her grandmother. Now that I look at you again, I see that this was an older person. Now, if you are buying for yourself, we have something over here that —"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THREE CURED OF ECZEMA

"When a child, I suffered eight years with eczema. I could not sleep at night, and had sores all over my chest. We had doctors and none could do any good, until my mother saw the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies in the paper. We used the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, and they cured me of eczema. I also used them on my five children. Two of them had eczema very badly. When my children had eczema, I was not worried at all, as I knew the Cuticura Remedies would do their work. They had sores all over their heads, their hair would fall out, and they would scratch all night and day. They had it on their heads, face, and in back of the ears so that I thought their ears would drop off. I washed their heads and bodies with Cuticura Soap and they are as clean as the driven snow. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my children of ringworm. I would not be without the Cuticura Remedies. They are wonderful." (Signed) Mrs. Violet Cole, 26 S. Must Levy for Road Dragging

Opinion of Attorney General

Following up the opinion rendered by his department last week Attorney General Cosson has mailed out a letter to every county attorney in the state informing him that the road dragging law passed by the last legislature requires all township trustees to levy a one mill tax for a road dragging fund this year.

His purpose in so doing was to make certain that every county attorney and township trustee in the state knows the ruling of the department, that the one mill levy may be made and the fund provided.

Reports have come from some quarters of the state that township trustees have interpreted the law otherwise from the attorney general and are of the opinion that the levy shall not be made until next year.

Where township trustees assume this attitude mandamus proceedings to require them to make the levy is recommended.

For the use of the county attorneys and the township trustees the attorney general has prepared a summary of the opinion rendered by his department last week, as follows:

It is the duty of the township trustees, under the so-called road drag law enacted by the Thirty-fourth general assembly, to levy the one mill tax for road dragging fund in the year 1911, in time to be certified to the board of supervisors before the making of the annual levy of taxes by it. It is also the duty of the township trustees to divide the township into permanent road dragging districts, appoint a superintendent of dragging and to cause the roads therein to be dragged in the year 1911 in accordance with said act, and they are authorized to pay the expense thereof out of any road funds of the township.

The township trustees have authority, aside from the said act of the Thirty-fourth general assembly, to expend road funds of the township in the dragging of roads.

The one mill tax for dragging fund provided for in said act, is not included in but is in addition to the maximum levy that the trustees may make for road purposes under section 1528 of the Supplement to the Code, 1907, as amended.

A township trustee may not accept the position of and act as superintendent of dragging, but there is no objection to the superintendent of roads doing so.

The said act took effect in all of its provisions April 8, 1911, and on that date chapter 101, acts of the Thirty-third general assembly were repealed and superseded thereby.

IOWA FARMS NAMED

New Law Protecting Distinctive Titles In Effect July 4

MANY ARE NOW FILING CLAIMS

The names of Many Farms Are Being Sent In For Registration In the Recorders Office of the County.

Des Moines.—Iowa farms may be transformed into estates designated by euphonious and distinctive titles under the law passed by the last general assembly which the various county recorders in the state are making arrangements to conform with when it takes effect on July 4.

Under the provisions of the law land owners may by the payment of a $1 filing fee have the name of a farm registered with the assurance that the name will remain with the property forever or so long as the owner wills without infringement on its use by any land owner in the same county.

Hundreds of Iowa farms have carried names suggesting some native peculiarity or reminiscence of pioneer days since their earliest settlement, being handed down from generation to generation and remaining despite various transfers, while others have been changed from time to time as the land passed from one owner to another.

The purpose of the legislature in providing the law was to fix a name permanently designating the tract of land without regard for its ownership or the changes which time might effect.

It is a well established custom in many of the older countries, and a very pretty one. It is also practiced in the east to a considerable extent.

Big Fund From Famous Iowan.

The Allison monument is assured. State Treasurer Morrow has received from Gen. Grenville M. Dodge the two thousand dollars needed to complete the fund in order to make available the appropriation made by the Thirty-third general assembly.

The total amount of money in the fund is now $31,586. This includes the interest due from the banks which have been used as depositories. The Central State of Des Moines carries $31,374 and the Ottumwa State of Ottumwa carries $212.

In his letter of transmittal General Dodge sent $2,028 and wrote that he will make an effort to bring the fund up to $50,000. He is going east this week and there will solicit subscriptions from eastern business men who were raised in Iowa.

Clothes For Wards Costs Money.

The state board of control closed contracts for $27,844 worth of winter clothing to be delivered next fall for the inmates of the various state institutions. With the exception of one item, which totalled $475, the entire amount will go to Iowa manufacturers. That one article, uniform caps for inmates, could not be purchased in the state, and the award was necessarily given to an outside firm.

The woolen piece goods for penitentiary and hospital suits cost the board $3,465, and for overcoats and heavy outside clothing the state will be taxed the sum of $8,490. Gloves and mittens add to this item of expense $766.

Underclothing is shown as the next heaviest item in the award, necessitating an outlay of $5,628.

Articles of Incorporation.

The following articles of incorporation were filed with Secretary of State Hayward.

Witt & Lembrecht, inc., of Davenport, capital stock, $7,500; incorporators, Otto Witt, Theodore H. Lembrecht and John C. Witt.

Conroy Building & Improvement company, of Conroy, capital stock, $3,500; incorporators, Fred Espenlaub, H. W. Burger, G. H. Plagman, Albert Olson, H. H. Pundt, S. H. Stanerson and H. E. Oldhaker.

The Magic Chemical company of Davenport, capital stock, $10,000; incorporators, Harry Pfabe, J. J. Green and Henry J. Klauer.

Permission to operate in this state was granted to McArthur Brothers company, of New Jersey, a mining corporation with a capital stock of $6,000,000.

Urick Called to Waterloo.

Al Urick, president of the Iowa Federation of Labor, was called to Waterloo this week to settle the strike now in progress at the Nauman mill in that city. It is believed that some settlement will be reached. The strike has been in progress in that city for over three months. It was feared some violent action might be taken by the strikers.

PRAISES LAST ASSEMBLY

Says Last Legislature Intended To Deal Fairly With Public Health Questions.

"There has been much criticism of the last legislature for the niggardly manner in which it dealt with the state board of health in the matter of appropriations," said Secretary Sumner of the board. "I must confess that the last legislature showed a most encouraging change of opinion regarding public health matters as compared with the legislature preceding it. It is true that the state board of health has not been dealt with liberally in the matter of appropriations, but I believe that the last legislature purposed to deal fairly with public health questions and as secretary of the board I have no criticism to offer. The development of a system of public health work which will enable a state board or commission to do the greatest good to the greatest number is the work of years. The Thirty-fourth General Assembly has given that work a good boost and I believe that we should take the good things we can get and not find fault because we don't get more."

Will Levy Tax for Roads.

County attorneys of Iowa will all receive circular letters from Attorney General Cosson advising them of the ruling of his department to the effect that the road dragging bill passed by the last legislature is effective now and that the one mill levy for the creation of a road fund should be levied this year.

The purpose of the attorney general in doing this was to inform all the county attorneys that township trustees will not fail to make the levy.

In some quarters of the state township trustees have interpreted the law to mean that the levy is not to be made until next year.

The attorney general sent with each letter, the official opinion of the department on the law, together with the following synopsis of the opinion:

It is also the duty of the township trustees to divide the township into permanent road dragging districts, appoint a superintendent of dragging and to cause the roads therein to be dragged in the year 1911, in accordance with said act, and they are authorized to pay the expense thereof out of any road funds of the township.

The township trustees have authority aside from the said act of the Thirty-fourth general assembly, to expend road funds of the township in the dragging of roads.

The one mill tax for dragging fund provided for in said act, is not included in but is in addition to the maximum levy that the trustees may make for road purposes under section 1,528 of the Supplement to the code of 1907, as amended.

A township trustee may not accept the position of and act as superintendent of dragging, but there is no objection to the superintendent of roads doing so.

The said act took effect in all of its provisions April 8, 1911, and on that date chapter 101, acts of the Thirty-third general assembly was repealed and superseded thereby.

Praises Board of Control.

R. E. Stewart, superintendent of the Nebraska school for the deaf, praised the Iowa board of control system in the management of state institutions at a meeting of the heads of the different Iowa institutions in Des Moines.

"Year by year the wisdom of adopting a centralized authority is being demonstrated by the harmony, the economy, the practical efficiency with which Iowa's state institutions are managed," said Mr. Stewart. "Other states are following the example of Iowa by the enactment of similar boards of control laws and it is fast becoming the generally accepted method."

Many Seek Hayward's Job.

Information is that there will not be a lack of candidates for secretary of state on the republican ticket before the primaries next year. E. D. Chassell, state binder, is an avowed candidate and reports from Harlan are to the effect that "Rush" Benedict, chief clerk of the house of representatives, is really a candidate and will be in the contest. E. H. Cunningham, a prominent member of the lower house of the Iowa legislature and a resident of Buena Vista county is also being mentioned. The latest reports also state that E. W. Van Duyn, state labor commissioner, has been looking over the field preparatory to entering the contest.

Articles of Incorporation.

Articles of incorporation of the Lucas Coal and Supply company of Lucas, Ia., were filed in the office of Secretary of State Hayward. The capitalization was placed at $250,000. C. N. Atkinson, S. H. Beverforden and H. L. Byers were named as the officers.

SKULL IS CRUSHED

Unknown Man is Assaulted at Valley Junction

VICTIMOF MYSTERIOUS INJURY

Lies at Mercy Hospital In Precarious Condition—Report Says That Charges Will Be Made Against Prominent Man.

Des Moines, June 5.—Mystery surrounds the injuries of a man supposed to be Leonard Wilson of Evanston, Ill., who lies at Mercy hospital with a fractured skull. The injuries are said to have been the result of a murderous attack made upon him in Kilpatrick's saloon in Valley Junction and it is probable the Polk county grand jury will investigate the charges which will be made against a prominent Valley Junction man.

Wilson is an absolute stranger in Valley Junction. It is alleged by witnesses that he was drinking quietly at the bar when the assault was made upon him. He was dealt a crushing blow in the face and as he fell to the floor, his head hit the rail at the base of the bar. He sustained a fractured skull.

The injured man is about 50 years of age, fully six feet tall and has iron gray hair. The authorities at the hospital pronounce him to be in a critical condition. In his pockets were found several blank checks and a draft made payable to and indorsed by F. E. Hudson.

CHAS. THOMAS ASKS PAROLE

Now Serving Life Sentence In the Penitentiary for the Murder of Mabel Scofield.

Des Moines, June 5.—An application for a parole of Charles Thomas, serving a life sentence in the Fort Madison penitentiary for the murder of Mabel Scofield, has been filed with Governor Carroll. Attached to it is a slip in which the reasons for asking the parole are given. Some sensational statements are made in it, which may have considerable influence on the chief executive and members of the board of parole.

A petition for a parole was also filed. It is signed by many prominent Des Moines men. The list is headed by United States Senator Albert B. Cummins.

Thomas was convicted and sentenced imposed at the culmination of a trial of three weeks duration held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, in this city, said trial being attended daily by more than twenty-five hundred people and the proceedings therein held being of a turbulent and demonstrative character.

Cease to Operate Mill.

Dubuque, June 5.—Officials of the Standard Lumber company, the concern which sustained a $600,000 fire loss within a week, including a $20,000 loss on approaches to the mill, has announced that the company will cease to operate the mill. This throws 300 men out of employment and marks the passing of the last lumber mill on the upper river.

Work Begins on Tuesday.

Dubuque, June 5.—Word was received in Dubuque today announcing the fact that J. W. Snyder of Chicago has been awarded the contract for the erection of the buildings of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender company, which when installed in Dubuque likely will be the largest manufacturing concern from the standpoint of employes in the city.

Burlington Wins Next Meeting.

Clinton, June 5.—Burlington won the 1912 convention of the Iowa United Commercial Travelers association over Des Moines at the meeting this afternoon. The following officers were elected: Grand councillor, Hugh Doran of Ottumwa; grand junior councillor, D. P. Thomson of Burlington.

Railroad Settles Claims for Deaths.

Mason City, June 5.—It cost the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway company $3,340 to settle with Henry Becker and Peter Kollash for the death of their children, which occurred recently. The wagon in which the children were riding was struck by a train at Whittemore on May 3.

State Medical Board Meeting.

Des Moines, June 5.—The state board of medical examiners meet in the offices of the state board of health today, and at Iowa City Wednesday. In the Des Moines examination ninety-nine persons will take the tests and at Iowa City fifty-four will be examined.

WESTERN CANADA BEYOND THE PIONEER STAGE

Liberty-Loving People Have All the Liberty the Heart Can Desire Under Canadian Laws.

The New York Commercial of April 19th contained an interesting article on conditions in Western Canada. The following extracts will prove instructive reading to those who contemplate moving to Canada. The writer speaks of land at $8 to $18 an acre. As a matter of fact, there is very little land that can be had now at less than $18 per acre, but when one considers the productive qualities of this land it is safe to say that in two years' time there will be little available land to be had at less than $30 an acre. Already the free grant lands in the open prairie districts are becoming exhausted and the homesteader has to go farther back to the partially wooded areas. This is no drawback, however. Some prefer this land to the open prairie. A recent publication, issued by the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, Canada, and which is forwarded free to applicants by mail by any of the Canadian government agents throughout the United States, says of the newly-opened districts:

Water is always abundant, wood and fuel are plentiful and the soil that can grow the poplar and the willow as well as the rich grasses that are to be found there can be relied upon to produce all the small varieties of grain with equal success. The New York Commercial article referred to deals more particularly with conditions along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific, but what is said of one line of railway may with truth be said of the land and the conditions along both the Canadian Northern and the Canadian Pacific. The article says:

"It would be no exaggeration to say that practically all the land along the entire distance traversed by the Grand Trunk Pacific system is capable of furnishing homes to those who engage in farming. The lands are of three classes. They may be designated, first, as having special adaptation to the production of grain; second, as having such adaptation to mixed farming, of which live stock will form an important feature, and third, as being mainly adapted to the production of live stock only. On the third class of lands the area is not very large, of the second it is much larger and of the first it is by far the largest.

"As soon as mixed farming shall be generally adopted, land that may now be obtained for from $8 to $18 per acre, and even lands open now to free homesteads, will sell for $50 to $100 per acre. This is not an extravagant statement. In natural fertility these lands fully equal those of the American corn belt. In variety of production they excel them, and yet the latter sell for $100 to $200 per acre. In addition to the grain crops now grown of wheat, oats, barley and rye, much of the land will grow winter wheat when properly prepared. Eighty per cent, of the land will grow clover and alfalfa. A still larger percentage will grow field peas, and the entire tillable area will grow good crops of the cultivated grasses, timothy, brome grass and western rye grass. With these elements what can prevent this region from becoming the main source of food supply of the Empire and Imperial dominions?"

Special stress is laid upon the educational conditions. The writer says:

"The foundation of the social fabric of the agricultural country may be said to rest on the efficiency of its school system. Liberty-loving people have all the liberty the heart can desire under Canadian laws. In this regard Western Canada has a system of education based upon the best that can be obtained from the United States or Eastern Canada. Its school system and regulations are second to none. Every boy or girl has a school house brought to his or her doorway. The government is most liberal in its support of higher education. In Winnipeg, Saskatoon and Edmonton are to be found excellent colleges and universities, so that the problem of higher education is solved. The provincial agricultural schools, located at Winnipeg and Saskatoon, give practical courses in scientific farming, preparing graduates to take up the responsibilities of farm life.

"The newcomer settling in this favored section will find the social conditions far beyond a pioneer stage. He will find helps on every hand. Instead of his going to the 'jumping-off place,' as is often supposed when thinking of Western Canada, he will find himself surrounded by wonderful opportunities for social advancement in a new country fraught with promise."

Flattery is praise we hear of others.

An Astonished Boy.

In February of this year a Wisconsin farmer took his twelve-year-old boy to a village for the first time, and there the lad saw a train of cars. He was so astonished at the sight that he lost the power of speech for three weeks.

If that youngster is ever taken to a circus or a zoological garden he'll surely be struck dumb for the rest of his life. His father's farm must be hidden away in a hole in the ground.

TRAP NEST EASILY WORKED

Simple Contrivance Is Operated by Weight of Hen—Fowl Is Removed From the Top.

In the illustration herewith is shown the simplest form of trap nest imaginable, says the Orange Judd Farmer. The hen alights on the running board and walks toward the nest. When she approaches the point E her weight depresses that end of the board and disconnects the support D, which falls of its own weight. Then when she steps into the nest, the board being heavier on the outside and hinged at A, tips until the opening to the nest is closed. The hen is removed from the top of the nest, which is then set as shown in the cut.

COOP FOR HENS AND CHICKS

Common A-Shaped Affair Is Easily Constructed and Can Be Made Without Any Floor.

The accompanying illustration shows a common A-shaped coop used for hen and chickens. It is quickly and easily made, says the Homestead. As shown in the illustration it is three feet wide, two feet from front to back and two feet high. The cross-pieces nailed on the front side are three inches apart. Ordinarily a coop of this kind is made with a floor, although this is not absolutely necessary. If it is not floored care must be taken to have it placed where water will not enter in case of heavy rains.

Capons Pay Best.

A few years ago capons were seldom found on sale except in some of the more exclusive markets, in the largest cities. This was largely because poultry raisers have only in recent years learned that caponizing insures not only a higher price per pound for their fowls, but an increase in weight for each bird. A capon not infrequently attains a weight of from fourteen to sixteen pounds, or practically twice that of the ordinary rooster of the same breed. And with other conditions similar the meat is always sweeter, always tender and usually just fat enough to make a good appearance and readily salable at from four to six cents a pound above that of ordinary poultry.

Feeding Whole Grain.

The whole grain should be strewn among some light litter, like leaves or cut straw, so that the birds must scratch for all they get. This exercise is needed. The grain should be given at least an hour before time for them to go to their roost, so that ample time is given them to hunt. If thus fed in a scratching shed the fowls will continue their search the next morning at break of day, and the attendant will find them hard at work when he comes around to give them their breakfast.

Precaution Means Much.

Precaution in all things means much in the successful raising of poultry. If the hen house door is left open, even for one night, a mink or weasel may make a clean-up and slaughter the entire flock.

Cure for Limberneck.

It is claimed that gum asafoetida will cure limberneck. Give four or five doses a day about as large as the end of the little finger, force the dose down the fowl's throat. In a day or so the fowl should be well.

CLEAN WATER FOR POULTRY

Drinking Fountain So Arranged That Hens Cannot Scratch Litter and Dirt Into Pan.

When the hens are shut up in the house, they are very apt to scratch dirt into the drinking pan and also to muddy up same, by standing in it with their feet. By using about twelve 11-inch lengths of heavy wire, the wire protector shown in illustration can be easily and simply made. The wire is joined together at the top by winding with a piece of malleable wire, and the wires are then bent outward in the form shown at the bottom, bent so as to fit into the drinking water pan and remain upright. This leaves ample room for the hens to reach the water to drink, but prevents their getting into the pan. By setting the pan on a platform about ten inches above the floor it will be out of the way of litter when the hens are scratching.

Fountain Kept Clean.

TWO CAUSES OF LIMBERNECK

Usually Brought by Fowls Eating Decayed Meat Full of Maggots—Also by Ptomaine Poison.

Limberneck is an infliction that is usually caused by fowl eating decayed meat full of maggots. Some assert it is also a result of ptomaine poisoning. The remedy is turpentine, and the following is a good treatment: Mix a tablespoonful in an equal amount of warm water, and pour into the crop. Follow by filling the crop nearly full with warm water, and then, holding the fowl by the feet, head down, gently work out the entire contents. When thoroughly cleaned give a tablespoon of castor oil and allow the fowl to remain quiet by itself until recovered. To prevent this trouble, at least once a week make a careful inspection of the range to see that no dead, decaying animal bodies are laying about breeding maggots.

Corn and Plymouth Rocks.

A hen should not have a very great quantity of corn. It soon makes her too fat. This is especially true of the larger fowls. The Leghorn is more of a runabout and seldom gets too far for good laying, but Plymouth Rocks are not to be trusted with too much corn before them.

POULTRY NOTES

Regularity in feeding should be the plan.

The hen that will not scratch is not a well one.

It is generally estimated that broilers shrink about a half pound when dressed.

Poultrymen make a regular practice of raising roots, cabbage and lettuce for their laying hens.

The best food for sitting hens is whole corn, with plenty of pure water, grit and charcoal.

A loafer in the hen house is not a desirable companion for good, strong, healthy, busy hens.

If there are two toms in the flock and they don't agree, shut up one one day and the other the next.

Nothing gives a chick a worse setback than pining for food.

Duck raisers pack 40 dressed ducklings in a barrel for shipment.

The turkey hen that ranges far from the barn is likely to steal her nest a long ways from home.

Costly houses for the poultry are not essential, but they should be warm, dry and free from drafts.

Caponizing is performed when the birds are about two or three months old—before the comb develops.

Make friends of your turkeys, so far as you can, and it will aid you considerably in caring for them.

Capons weighing six pounds command earliest sales, but best prices are paid for nine and ten pound birds.

The manager of one of the largest duck farms says that an expert can scald and dress a duckling in ten minutes.

The critical period of the turkey is the first eight weeks of its life. About 48 eggs is the average yearly record of the hen.

Be sure that the turkeys have enough, but not too much food during the breeding season—just enough to keep them in good flesh.

Begin Right and Don't Put It Off for Another Day.

Eruptive skin diseases of many years' standing have been cured by the application of Resinol ointment and the use of Resinol soap in a few weeks. Begin with Resinol and you begin your cure. If you've tried everything without benefit, try Resinol, and you will no doubt see improvement from the start. Resinol ointment cures all forms of skin eruptions, as acne, eczema, herpes, erysipelas, erythema, barber's itch, poison ivy, ringworm, etc. Resinol ointment is the best dressing for boils, carbuncles, felons, cuts and all abrasions of the skin. DON'T NEGLECT YOUR KIDNEYS.

Kidney troubles are too serious to neglect. Slight ailments are often fore-runners of dangerous kidney illness and should be treated without delay. J. L. Richardson, Red Key, Ind., says: "My back ached as though it would break. I could not move without intense pain. My kidneys were in such bad shape that it was necessary to draw the secretions. The doctors said I was beyond help. I began the use of Doan's Kidney Pills and gradually improved until completely cured. I have not had the slightest trouble since."

SHE GOT WHAT SHE WANTED

This Woman Had to Insist Strongly, but it Paid

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a female weakness and stomach trouble, and I went to the store to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but the clerk did not want to let me have it—he said it was no good and wanted me to try something else, but knowing all about it I insisted and finally got it, and I am so glad I did, for it has cured me.

"I know of so many cases where women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I can say to every suffering woman if that medicine does not help her, there is nothing that will."—Mrs. JANETZKI, 2963 Arch St., Chicago, Ill.

This is the age of substitution, and women who want a cure should insist upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound just as this woman did, and not accept something else on which the druggist can make a little more profit.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity

Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.

Now's the Time

Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 60 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year.

Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

WILL DEVELOP MUCH POWER

Company Already Has Opened Negotiations to Furnish Current for Commercial Use to Several Cities On Circuit.

Mount Pleasant. — Electricity for both light and power in three or four counties of southeastern Iowa from power stations erected along Skunk river, seems assured. Three dams are being built along that stream, one at Augusta, one at Lowell and one at Oakland Mills. Already wire is being strung from Oakland Mills to this city, where the company has begun negotiations to furnish the current to the state hospital for the insane and also for city use.

When the three dams are completed a circuit will be established which will take in Burlington, Mount Pleasant, Wapello, where a dam will be built on the Iowa river, as well as other towns. A steam plant will be built here to supplement the water power in case of accident to any of the stations and for use in times of low water.

Your communication will be treated in strict confidence and your case will be diagnosed carefully as though you had a personal interview.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by natural methods. They do not scour, they do not gripe, they do not weaken, but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon restores these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. In my opinion constipation is responsible for more ailments. There are 26 feet of intestines or bowels, which is really a sewer for the body. When this pipe becomes clogged the whole system becomes poisoned, resulting biliousness, indigestion and impure blood, which often produce rheumatism and kidney ailments. No woman who suffers with constipation or any form of ailment can expect to have a clear complexion or enjoy good health. If I had my way I would prohibit the sale of nine-tenths of the cathartics now being sold for the reason that they soon destroy the lining of the bowels, setting up serious forms of indigestion and so paralyze the bowels that they refuse to act unless forced by strong purgatives.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of thinning it; they enable the stomach to get the nourishment from food that is in it.

These pills contain no calomel or dope; they are soothing, healing and stimulating. They school the liver to act without physic.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

All you've got to say, Mr. Dobbs, is glad you are that my baby is ing well, and then give your coat Mary Ellen and go on to your work, icing fer me," said Miss Selina , coming quickly to the rescue of floundering condoler. "How did all ever git the notion that things t against Blossom last night?" asked.

We seen the doctor—and then you ed the front blinds—that's always ign—and—"answered Mrs. Dobbs, llowing a sob.

Well, ain't that too bad fer you to be so upsot about a mistake! d if here ain't all the Tyneses! cy, Mis' Tyne, Blossom ain't dead likely to be, and, please, ma'am, them black bombazine strips the children's necks. It's so h it'll rub 'em raw."

low, Mrs. Tyne was a person of idea at a time, and her mind set on a speech to go with the -looking star she tendered Miss na Lue, so out it came, regardless the fact that it was not at all ded.

Miss Seliny Lue," she said with and practised emotion, "though have gone from our sight and we t bury in the c-o-l-d, col-d ground, let us look up!" At the word d" Mrs. Tyne gave a realistic ver, and at the word "up" she cast eyes skyward, though the expres- was in some degree marred by a nt caused by the rays of the morn- sun striking her full in the face.

That's a real comforting thought, Tyne, and I am thankful fer the ech and the star, too. Bennie, ey, run all up and down the street tell everybody Blossom is a heap tter and they needn't git ready fer funeral."

Now, you know there ain't been a th on the Bluff fer four years, nce Mr. Si Bradford's ma died, and e was preparing to have as nice a neral as ever was fer you, Miss liny Lue," said Mrs. Kinney in a e that might have been construed reproachful.

Well, I wanter say one thing; and 's that I am glad me and Blossom ve found out how many friends we ve while we are still alive and can reciate them all. It never did seem t right to hold back all the flowers d tears and white robes until peo- e are gone where they can't enjoy m none. And 'specially about fu- ral sermons—looks like if the rpses coulder heard all the praise oke over them they mighter got the mbition to go on living a spell longer. ands alive, did you all know it's even o'clock, and not a breakfast ish washed on the Bluff?"

Miss Selina Lue's call to duty sent em all hurrying in different direc- ons.

Mrs. Dobbs was slow in getting tarted, and as she descended the teps she said: "I do declare I am neasy about Ethel Maud. I couldn't ind her nowheres this morning. I was jest so sorrowful about your trou- le I clean forgot to worry."

"Oh, Mis' Dobbs, honey, when I opened the door this morning at day- break there was Ethel Maud scrouch- ed down on the steps with nothing on but her nightgown, and a-moaning like something hurt. She shot past me into the room, and when she seen Blossom so much better she jest laid down on the floor and cried herself to sleep plumb pitiful. Mr. Alan lifted her on the foot of the bed, and I know if Blossom stirs she will wake up and call me. Her little heart is that loving she can watch even while she sleeps. I feel this morning more than ever how we are all watched over in loving kindness that never sleeps and He ain't ever going to forgit a single one of us. Ain't it a blessed thought, and pertecting and comforting in times of trouble?"

"That's true, Miss Seliny Lue," answered Mrs. Dobbs thoughtfully. "And we all oughter be mighty happy with so much good being done to us."

"And ain't we? Why, it jest butters my bread of life with happiness. Look like some folks likes ter swoller they bread dry. but you and me want a little sprinkle of happy-sugar a-top of our'n. How's Mr. Dobbs a-holding out?"

"He ain't cussed a word since our trip, Miss Seliny Lue. Sometimes I sees him jest a-chawing the swears and—"

"Don't notice it, Mary Ellen. Jest hold to the thought that he ain't a-going ter do it no more, and that'll help—"

"But look yonder, Miss Seliny Lue. Ain't—that—cute?" And Mrs. Dobbs turned Miss Selina Lue around bodily.

It was Carrots standing in the grocery door. He was crowing and gurgling and wobbling, but he stood his ground determinedly—alone. One flaming lock at the back of his head rose straight up with excitement, and he stretched his hand and ducked his head to Miss Selina Lue in evident triumph over his achievement.

"Jest Hold to the Thought of His Fergiveness, and Don't Never Give It Up."

"Honey, I jest can't a-bear to look. A mother oughter be the one ter see her baby take his first steps, and poor Mis' Flarity is—" Miss Selina Lue faltered as she started toward the tottering baby.

"Pick him up quick," answered Mrs. Dobbs. "They ain't nobody in the world got a better right to any baby's first steps than you has, Miss Seliny Lue."

CHAPTER IX.

Smiling Through Tears.

"Looks like a man must think his own life have been a grand success if he goes to a-directing of his son's."
—Miss Selina Lue.

"Blossom," said Miss Selina Lue, as she seated herself in the grocery door for a breathing spell after all the Bluff dinners had been discussed, bought, paid for, and started on their ways to the different pots, "looks like women oughter think up something different onct in a while to feed to they families. The Dobbses have had boiled cabbage fer dinner now four months hand-running, and the Kinneys have et so many fried eggs that I begin to look fer the children to show pin-feathers. If I was a-tending to a husband, I would feel like it was kinder disrespectful to his stomik to offer it the same truck every day and Sunday too."

Blossom looked up from the china doll she was busily licking with her small red tongue in a sudden access of affection. The Blossom was once more abloom and abob with enthusiasm.

"If the men folks have to put all of they lives into making of the money to live on, looks like the women oughter put a little common sense and elbow grease into helping 'em get some comfort outen it as they go 'long. Instead of stretching a dollar some, most of 'em handle it so keerless it shrinks up to fifty cents before it buys anything. Why, honey-bunch, wherever did you come from? I didn't see you up the Hill." And Miss Selina Lue's face fairly beamed on Miss Cynthia, who came in from the back of the store.

"I came down the path and through the garden," answered Miss Cynthia.

"Well, I hope you noticed how fine the garden is a-growing. There never was sich a digger as Mr. Alan before. Now, them winter beets, couldn't you tell he had been a-hoeing of 'em faithful?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cynthia with a shy smile that she hid in the back of Blossom's neck, "they look like his artistic work."

"Well, you ain't so far wrong," answered Miss Selina Lue with an admiring glance at the soft blush behind Blossom's curls. "If a man have got it inside him to do one kind of work big, everything else in him have got to measure up to it; and with Mr. Alan it do, pictures and beets."

"You like his pictures as much as I do, Miss Selina Lue," said Miss Cynthia, her eyes shining with excitement at the bare mention of the treasures over in the barn.

"Child, them pictures jest feeds me. Looks like all my life I've been living on the plain every-day eating of things and he have handed me a plate of chalock-roos fer my spirit."

"I wish he could hear from the three he sent on to Chicago. They ought to be mounted and on the guild hall walls by this time." Miss Cynthia's voice was impatiently excited, for she knew how Mr. Alan longed for approval of his great commission, and for a very special reason, which she also knew.

"Miss Cynthia, honey, don't you git impatient about the letter, too. Don't never fergit that it is the man's part to champ the bit, but a woman must pull at life steady-like. There's the postman now; run, child, run!" And directly in the face of her wise counsels for serenity, Miss Selina Lue hurried after Miss Cynthia's flying figure.

"Oh," said Miss Cynthia as she stood with a letter clasped to her breast, "here it is, Miss Selina Lue, here it is! What do you suppose is in it?"

"Honey, I know what he is a-hoping fer, though not letting hisself expect it much. His father being one of the men to build the big hall, Mr. Alan have jest got his heart set on his seeing the pictures—and forgiving him fer painting 'em."

"Oh, I know, Miss Selina Lue, and I am so afraid—"

"You mustn't be afraid, honey, child, but you must pray and have faith to soften his heart towards the boy. Jest hold to the thought of his fergiveness, and don't never give it up, whether it's in that letter or not."

"Why, that sounds like we were sending 'thought waves' to him, Miss Selina Lue" And Miss Cynthia smiled even in her anxiety.

"Yes, I remember you told me about them 'waves' when I held to it that Mr. Kinney would come on back from town that time he got mad and tried to leave his family. Though you explained it fine to me, I didn't understand it at all and I jest kept on a-praying—old-fashioned prayers with no new-fangled fancy label on 'em. They are jest as good today as they was in Moses'— Lands alive, what's the trouble over at the Dobbses now!"

A shrill shriek rose from the interior of the Dobbs residence a few houses up the street, which was followed by a quick exclamation, at which Ethel Maud shot out of the front door, wriggled over the gate, and darted through a cloud of white dust to precipitate herself bodily into Miss Selina Lue's lap.

"They ain't a thing in the world the matter with her, Miss Seliny Lue," called the mother from the front window. "She burned her fingers a-lifting hot ginger-cake from the pan while my back were turned. She muster thought she deserved a smack, fer she cut and run to you 'fore I made a motion at her."

"Ethel Maud," said Miss Selina Lue sternly, as she lifted the touseled head out of her skirts, "go right back and ask your mother can you have that piece of cake before you eat one mouthful. Then you can bring another piece for me and Miss Cynthia and one to divide with the babies. She always puts me and the babies' names in her cake bowl," Miss Selina Lue added as Ethel Maud departed hurriedly to apologize and forage. "Mary Ellen makes her cake like she lives—kinder haphazard—but it comes out all right, mostly from being mixed with sich good intentions," Miss Selina Lue further remarked, just before Ethel Maud returned with three generous slices on a fluted china plate of amazing design.

"Miss Selina Lue, may I take part of mine over—to the river bank—he's sketching, and I promised—"

"Take the plate, child, and two pieces. Mis' Dobbs will admire to send it to him. One's more'n enough fer the babies and me. And, Miss Cynthie, don't never hold back from feeding men little attentions, even if they is dumb about showing as they likes 'em. Too many women treats husbands like hitching-posts. Now, hurry while it's hot." And Miss Selina Lue fairly shooed Miss Cynthia on to her tryst.

"Now," she said, "I must git to my—"

"Miss Seliny Lue, come look what's coming up the hill! Come quick!" called Bennie Dobbs from down the street, his face shining with excitement until the freckles fairly stood out on the surface.

"Lands alive!" said Miss Selina Lue as she went out to the middle of the street, "if it ain't a ottermobile! From the way the poor thing's breathing looks like it might be going to stald. They hadn't oughter push the critter up that hill, it's too steep fer anything but a squirrel or a trolley-car to climb. Run, Bennie, and ask him if he would like us to bring our clothes-line and help him a bit." But as she spoke, the huge red machine gave a puff, pulled over the brow of the hill, and stopped with a shudder at the very grocery door.

HOW SHE WAS SQUELCHED

English Traveler Tells of His Silencing of Obnoxious Woman on the Atlantic Liner.

He was an English world traveler, and he had written a book, but there was a certain dame he had never forgotten. He had met her on a voyage from New York to Liverpool. Said he:

"She became obnoxious from the moment we put out to sea. Her constant references to her husband, Cyrus, who had made his pile very quickly—too quickly for the lady to do more than buy fine feathers for the adornment of a very ordinary bird—were nauseating. I shouldn't have cared if she hadn't sat at my table—right opposite me.

"The mutton was brought on as we were nearing England. It was cut in generous slices—and very delicious. 'Why,' she said, cutting into a slice, 'this mutton is too thick. Cyrus cuts mutton thin as a wafer.'

"No one paid any attention, apparently, but I heard—and was disgusted. She repeated, 'Cyrus cuts mutton thin as a wafer, Cyrus cuts mutton thin as a wafer,' so many times that I could stand it no longer. Such ignorance needed to be dealt with. I leaned forward, looked her squarely in the eye, and then said, deliberately:

"'Madam, in England—mutton is cut thick.' And she didn't mention Cyrus again."

It was great to hear him tell it. How he had squelched her with those six words, uttered slowly and impressively. No wonder they had silenced her!

Epidemics Carefully Watched.

The port of New York, through its health officer, keeps its official eye on the entire world to guard against importing contagious disease. By means of a huge globe of the earth, in which are stuck different colored pins, the presence of epidemics in all lands is noted.

STONE IN BLADDER REMOVED IN REMARKABLE WAY

A year and a half ago I was taken with a severe attack of kidney trouble that pained me to such an extent that morphine had to be given me. Was attended by a doctor who pronounced it as stone in the bladder and prescribed Lithia Water. I took Lithia Water and tablets for some time and received no relief from them. I stopped taking medicines for some time and having some Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root in the house, I decided to try it and felt much relieved; while taking the second bottle commenced to pass gravel in urine until I had passed in all at least a half a dozen or more and have not suffered the slightest since and in all have taken one bottle and a half and feel very grateful to Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

Yours very truly,

POOR RETURN FOR CHIVALRY

Incident That Probably Has Forever Discouraged Kind-Hearted Mr. Jones.

Chivalrous Mr. Jones purposely dropped a 50-cent piece at the foot of a poorly dressed woman who passed through the subday turnstile loudly lamenting that the ticket agent had cheated her out of half a dollar, then he picked the money up and gave it to her.

"Excuse me, madam," said Mr. Jones, "I think you dropped this."

"Oh, no," she said, "it can't be mine. Perhaps you dropped it, yourself."

"Oh, no," said Mr. Jones. "It is yours, I am sure. I picked it up just as you passed."

"She took the money, and hurried after another man who had passed at the time the money dropped.

"Excuse me, sir," she said, "I think you lost this."

"Thanks," said the other man, and jumped aboard a train that was ready to start.

"— — — —!" said chivalrous Mr. Jones.—New York Times.

Should Report Tuberculosis Cases.

The National Association for the study and Prevention of Tuberculosis says that the first requisite for a comprehensive campaign for the elimination of tuberculosis in a state or city is well-enforced law, requiring that every living case of tuberculosis be reported to the health authorities. Such reporting is now required by law or health regulations in 25 states, while in 28 states and territories no provision whatever is made for keeping records of cases of this infectious disease. Several cities in non-registration states, as for instance, Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis and New Orleans, have local ordinances requiring that tuberculosis be reported. In all, there are about 100 cities in the United States which have ordinances of this nature.

"Why, I only had my Easter hatbox handy, and that wasn't big enough," said Miss Wrathy.—Harper's Weekly.

The Best Family Newspaper

One of the modern problems that confront the conscientious homemaker is the wise choice of a daily newspaper. The ideal family paper must be clean, free from vulgarity and sensationalism, yet must offer something of interest to every member of the household, besides printing the latest news of the whole world in reliable and attractive form. A large contract, you will say. Yes, but an increasing number of readers seem to be convinced that the Chicago Record-Herald fairly comes up to the specifications. This great daily has made tremendous strides in the last year without lowering its standards one iota.

Business and professional men have long regarded the Record-Herald as the best paper for their own reading, because of its splendid news service and the reliability of its financial, agricultural and market reports. Young men perhaps find its greatest attraction in its excellent sporting supplement—four entire pages every day in the week. Wives and mothers emphatically prefer the Record-Herald on account of its feminine departments—its daily recipes and menus, its daily fashion hints, Marion Harland's famous page and the rest of the good things in the illustrated Woman's Section in the Sunday paper. Children enjoy the Little Nemo and other clean comic pictures, with the bright stories for boys and girls every Sunday. And all the family together can enjoy the interesting travels and special articles of William E. Curtis, Mr. Kiser's humor and verse, Ralph Wilder's cartoons and other daily features outside the news columns.

The Chicago Record Herald has every right to call itself the best all around family newspaper in the west.

Lewis Barth of Ellington Township Attempts to Carry a Balky Kerosene Stove Out of Doors

Endeavoring to carry an obstreperous kerosene stove from his farm home in Ellington township, Lewis Barth was quite badly burned about the face and hands. The stove was acting badly and threatened to set fire to the kitchen. He siezed the stove but as soon as he opened the door the flames flashed into his face and he was badly burned.

The Texas of Europe.

Mrs. T. P. O'Connor in her recent volume of reminiscence tells of her first meeting with Henry James, the novelist: "I sat next him at a dinner. I had just come to London, and he asked me if I liked it. I said I hadn't made up my mind, and he said I would—that in London you were allowed every independence of opinion and action, only you must contribute something socially—beauty (and he bowed very courteously to me, and I bowed very prettily to him) or wit or agreeableness—and then London accepted you. I said, 'History repeats itself. In Texas, where I was born, they say a man is not asked his nationality, his religion, or his politics, but only if he is a good fellow.' 'Ah,' said Mr. James, 'then London is the Texas of Europe.'"

Princely Hospitality.

The new King of Siam Vajiravudh, was educated at Oxford university, England. The Washington Star has an anecdote from the lips of one who knew him there.

"Vajiravudh was a pleasant, hospitable lad, but not a very brilliant student. I remember him saying to me one night:

"'Dine with me tomorrow at the Mitre, will you?'

"'Can't old man,' I answered. 'I'm going to see "Hamlet."'

"'Bring him along,' said Vajiravudh."

Julius Priebe was a business visitor to Garner, Tuesday.

Nearly everybody is going to celebrate the Fourth in Klemme.

Aug. Lau and W. R. Bloom each shipped a car of hogs Sunday morning.

C. L. Yahnke has purchased a new Ford car for use in his auto livery.

Wm. Stork is beautifying his residence by applying a new coat of paint.

Dr. Samuel E. Dittmer was here last Thursday and Friday visiting with friends. He left Saturday morning to visit his folks at Colesburg, Iowa.

E. H. Lenz sold his faithful old gray team last week. These animals had been in the family all their lives, and we predict that Ernest will be lost without them.

M. Palmby, Wm. Katter and Frank Rosendahl returned on Tuesday morning from their trip to Colorado. We understand that Mr. Palmby purchased some land while out there.

In a card to the writer recently received, Rev. H Hubber states that he is feeling fine, has gained materially in weight and is making rapid improvement, which news will be gladly received by his Klemme friends.

Chas. Kraus was the victim of an accident one day last week. The rats had been getting his chickens, so he and the boys were engineering a crusade against the pests. Charley attempted to step on a rat at the same time one of the boys shot at it with a rifle and the bullet struck Charley in the foot, causing him much pain and inconvenience for a few days.

Belmond Press: A party of 35 autoists from Clear Lake and Mason City passed through town this morning. They were blazing the way for a new trail from Clear Lake to Des Moines. Their plan is to go west to Garner, then south through Klemme, Goodell, Belmond and Clarion to Webster City. They were piloted to Clarion by a number of Belmond autoists.

The Klemme automobile tour last Thursday for the purpose of advertising our big Fourth of July celebration was a pronounced success. Goodell, Belmond, Thornton, Meservey, Clear Lake, Ventura and Garner were the towns visited and the boys got the glad hand at every place. It seemed to be the prevailing opinion that nearly everybody was coming to Klemme to celebrate.

Tell all your friends that the biggest celebration ever pulled off in Hancock county is due to happen here in Klemme on the 4th day of July, 1911.

Don't forget the visit of the Des Moines jobbers to Klemme next Thursday, June 22nd. The special train will arrive at 1:14 p. m. Everybody who possibly can should be on hand to greet these boosters. The Iowa State Band will give a concert while they are in our city. It will be worth coming to hear, we can assure you.

The Lawhorn Reunion

A reunion of the Lawhorn families, and some families related, was held at Ventura Heights last week Tuesday in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lawhorn, Sr., of Lena, Illinois. Their children were all present except one son who lives at Kent, Ill. Mrs. Lawhorn's aged sister, Mrs. Cannon, of Richland Center, Wis., was present, as were also all of Mrs. Cannon's children, and all of her grandchildren except two. There was also four generations of the Lawhorn family present, viz: Wm. Lawhorn, G. B. Lawhorn, Clarence Lawhorn and little Miss Gladys Lawhorn

A picnic dinner was served and there was plenty to eat that would please both old and young. The day will long be remembered by those present, and it is certainly a fine way to bring scattered families and relatives together. Besides the immediate Lawhorn families, those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Cannon and two children, Ira Cannon and daughter Essel—Storm Lake, Iowa.

Mrs. E. E. Byrum and son Clair, Mrs. B. Flahart—White Lake, S. D.

Mrs. Catherine Cannon, Miss Nora Cannon, Hattie and Glae Scholl—Richland Center, Wis.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gilbert and son Herald. Mr. and Mrs. A. Kelly, Mrs. E. Stoker and family, Rev. and Mrs. Keck and son, Capt. Barnes, Fred, Charley and Clarence Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gilbert—Garner, Ia.

Mrs. Robt. Skene, Walter Skene, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Skene, Ferdinand Grell, Mr. Kluver—Ventura, Iowa—Contributed.

Arthur Wellemeyer went to Charles City, Sunday evening, returning yesterday.

The Garner and Klemme base ball teams will play here July 4th for a purse of $75.

Rev. Zabilka arrived in Klemme last week and will be pastor of the English Methodist church the balance of the year.

Klemme leads and sets the pace and the other towns try to follow. After Klemme's booster auto trip, Belmond followed with a joy ride on Tuesday. They neglected to stop at Klemme, however.

Fred G. Fenninger, a highly respected citizen and an old settler, died at his home near Garner last Monday. Death was due to heart failure. He retired Sunday night in his usual good health and was found dead in bed Sunday morning.

Our Fourth of July committees are all working hard completing all the details for Klemme's big celebration. We hope to be able to publish a complete program next week. Meanwhile, make arrangements to attend the biggest celebration ever held in the county—at Klemme.

WOMEN MAY AVOID OPERATIONS

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for seven months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women. Why don't you try it?

Death may love a shining mark—but shining marks are scarce.

His Instinct.

"I see the family dog slinking out of the room. What's the matter with him?"

"Prescience. Presently there will be a tremendous family row on."

"But how did the dog know that?"

"Well, so to speak, his nose is something of a storm center.

HIS VIEW OF IT.

Smart—Do you think the colleges turn out the best men?

Wise—Sure. I was turned out in my sophomore year.

COMES A TIME
When Coffee Shows What It Has Been Doing.

"Of late years coffee has disagreed with me," writes a matron from Rome, N. Y.

"Its lightest punishment being to make me 'logy' and dizzy, and it seemed to thicken up my blood.

"The heaviest was when it upset my stomach completely, destroying my appetite and making me nervous and irritable, and sent me to my bed. After one of these attacks, in which I nearly lost my life, I concluded to quit the coffee and try Postum.

"It went right to the spot! I found it not only a most palatable and refreshing beverage, but a food as well.

"All my ailments, the 'loginess' and dizziness, the unsatisfactory condition of my blood, my nervousness and irritability disappeared in short order and my sorely afflicted stomach began quickly to recover. I began to rebuild and have steadily continued until now. Have a good appetite and am rejoicing in sound health which I owe to the use of Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Will Compel Foreign Corporations To File Their Articles

W. U. TELEGRAPH AN OUTLAW

Santa Fe and Western Union Will Be Made to "Come Across Under Provisions of New Corporation Law.

Des Moines.—Secretary of State Hayward is going to compel the foreign corporations, doing business in Iowa without having filed their articles and paid the filing fee to "come across" even if it is necessary to invoke the power of the department of justice.

The last legislature so amended the foreign corporations law that these concerns no longer have any excuse for refusing to file their articles in this state and pay the fee.

Under the old law they were compelled to pay a fee based on the entire capital stock of the company, no matter where that capital stock was employed.

Under the amendment made by the last legislature they pay a filing fee on only the actual amount of capital which is in use in Iowa.

Several big concerns persistently refused to pay the fee under the old law. The Santa Fe Railroad company, which has but 26 miles of line in the state, thought it unjust to be compelled to pay a filing fee on its entire capital stock. Had the law been enforced the company would have paid a $300,000 fee. The Western Union Telegraph company is also an outlaw corporation so far as Iowa is concerned. Its articles have never been filed and it has paid no filing fee. It must now file its articles and pay the fee on its capital stock actually in use in the state. If not it will be up to the department of justice to enforce the law.

Articles of Incorporation.

The following articles of incorporation have been filed with Secretary of State Hayward:

The Iowa Sand and Gravel company, Oskaloosa, capital stock, $10,000; incorporators, George H. Carlon and Harry F. Carlon.

Viking Pump company, Cedar Falls, capital stock, $20,000; incorporators, W. L. Hearst, Jens Nielson, J. G. Wytte, W. N. Hostrop and William Laurence.

Ottumwa Queensware company, Ottumwa, capital stock, $10,000; incorporators, G. D. Pocock, J. Wilbur Johnson.

Flugstad Farmers' Grain company, Flugstad, capita stock, $10,000; incorporators, Allen J. Rhoades, Hugh Navin, Charles L. Boynton, H. E. Cooter, U. G. Jones, John G. Heffner and G. H. Huff.

Farley Creamery company, Farley, capital stock, $3,500; incorporators, S. L. Strief, J. N. Cropp, F. H. Ensign, G. W. Cropp, E. W. Glew and C. J. Duffy.

Eastern Iowa Developing.

Eastern Iowa is developing rapidly in manufacturing. This is the report brought back by G. A. Wrightman, secretary of the Iowa State Manufacturers' association, after a ten-day trip to eight of the leading industrial centers in the eastern part of the state. "Manufacturing establishments which were just starting when I visited them a year ago have grown far beyond my expectations," said Mr. Wrightman. "I am optimistic and expected a good deal, too. The industries are expanding in a surprising manner. They are reaching out for new trade, increasing their force of employes and adopting progressive tactics all around."

Mr. Wrightman added twelve new members to the association on this trip. The larger manufacturing centers he visited were Davenport, Waterloo and Marshalltown. He will take trips to the northwestern and southeastern parts of the state later.

Railroad Can Condemn Depot Sites.

The state railroad commission has given the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad company authority to condemn enough land at Chariton and Corydon on which to build depots and depot terminals. This is on the connecting link of the Rock Island's through line between El Paso, Texas., and the Twin Cities by way of Kansas City and Des Moines.

High Tribute for L. W. Eaton.

The state board of railway commissioners passed and spread upon the records of the commission, a high tribute to L. W. Eaton of Osage, former member of the commission, who died recently. The offices of the board closed and all the members attended the funeral.

MANY VIOLATE PURE FOOD LAW

Bulletin Will Be Issued With Statistics Covering the Period From January 1 to May.

Des Moines.—In the regular bulletin of the state dairy and food department, now being prepared, Commissioner Barney will give statistics and figures showing that from Jan. 1, 1910 up to May 1 of this year, there have been 388 persons and firms convicted in the courts of the state for violations of the pure food and dairy laws.

But few actions instituted by the department during the same period were failures. The commissioner puts in the bulletin considerable information concerning new laws enacted by the last legislature.

He calls attention especially to the new food and dairy laws with his intentions as to enforcement. He puts particular stress on the law making it possible for his department to inspect all shops and places in which food is prepared or handled and require sanitary conditions.

"This department will send inspectors through your shop from cellar to roof and absolutely sanitary conditions will be demanded," says the bulletin.

He also warns grocers and others that food put out on counters and shelves must be covered to keep off dust and flies. This will be insisted upon, he says.

First Levy Under New Law.

The first assessment for 1911 under the new tax laws of the state was reported to Auditor of State Bleakly from Benton county.

It shows that corporation stock, under the new moneys and credit law passed by the last legislature, has a drop of 25 per cent in value, while the new law made provision for its taxation at but 20 per cent of its actual value.

Real estate shows a big gain, sufficient to even up revenue for the loss on other kinds of property.

Joe Wall, revenue clerk in the auditor's office, states that Benton is a representative county and its returns indicate what may be expected from over the state.

Figures of interest in the report, compared with statements from the same county last year, follow:

Corporation stock—1910, $404,650; 1911, $308,599; loss, $96.051.

oney and credits—1910, $3,741,888; 1911, $3,629,710; loss, $112,178 (assessed under old law).

Real estate—1910, $6,989,399; 1911, $7,029,711; gain, $40,312.

Personal property—1910, $2,096,706; 1911, $2,057,428; loss, $39,368.

All horses—1910, $1,586,642; 1911, $1,590,376; gain, $96,266.

All cattle—1910, $1,114,429; 1911, $957,078; loss, $157,351.

All hogs—1910, $388,276; 1911, $517,049; gain, $128,773.

Room in Polk for World's Population.

There is enough land in Polk county to hold every man, woman and child in the world, according to figures compiled by John Backman, one of the deputies and expert accountants in the Polk county treasurer's office. Not only would every living person in the world have a place in Polk county, but there would be enough room for every old maid to have her parrot and cat, if she so desired and every male member of the population his dog, for according to Backman's figures, each person would be allowed eight square feet of land to move about in.

If the world was gradually eaten away by water, leaving Polk county an island and all the inhabitants were forced to take refuge here, there would be room for all. Deputy Backman figures it out something like this: Polk county is 24x24 miles, which gives 576 square miles in the county. There are 640 acres in a square mile, and 4,356 square feet to an acre. In Polk county there are 16,057,958,400 square feet of land.

"Now then," says the compiler of the figures, "figuring on a basis of two billion inhabitants in the world, you see each would have about eight square feet for himself in Polk county."

Rates Agitate Millers.

Millers in Iowa are agitated over the threatened withdrawal of the milling transit privileges on shipments of grain. If the railroads follow this policy the shippers claim it will put hundreds of the smaller mills in this state out of business.

In the last issue of the Traffic World & Traffic Bulletin, an article is printed which discusses the subject fully and which advocates the substitution of a different method of rate publication which will simplify the re-shipment of grain and will not prove unreasonably expensive to the shippers.

A complaint has been made by a Cedar Rapids firm on this point as a railroad refused this concern a milling transit privilege on a shipment.

DOCTOR PRESCRIBES CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I wish to let you know of a couple of recent cures which I have made by the use of the Cuticura Remedies. Last August, Mr. ——— of this city came to my office, troubled with a severe skin eruption. It was dermatitis in its worst form. It started with a slight eruption and would affect most parts of his body, thighs, elbows, chest, back and abdomen—and would terminate in little pustules. The itching and burning was dreadful and he would almost tear his skin apart, trying to get relief. I recommended all the various treatments I could think of and he spent about fifteen dollars on prescriptions, but nothing seemed to help him.

"In the meantime my wife, who was continually suffering with a slight skin trouble and who had been trying different prescriptions and methods with my assistance, told me she was going to get some of the Cuticura Remedies and give them a fair trial. But as I did not know much about Cuticura at that time I was doubtful whether it would help her. Her skin would thicken, break and bleed, especially on the fingers, wrists and arms. I could do nothing to relieve her permanently. When she first applied the warm baths of Cuticura Soap and applications of Cuticura Ointment she saw a decided improvement and in a few days she was completely cured.

"I lost no time in recommending the Cuticura Remedies to Mr. ———, and this was two months ago. I told him to wash with warm baths of the Cuticura Soap and to apply the Cuticura Ointment generously. Believe me, from the very first day's use of the Cuticura Remedies he was greatly relieved and today he is completely cured through their use. I have great faith in the Cuticura Remedies and shall always have a good word for them now that I am convinced of their wonderful merits." (Signed) B. L. Whitehead, M. D., 108 Dartmouth St., Boston, Mass., July 22, 1910.

She Is Qualified.

"So you are sure your wife could vote with proper discrimination?"

"Certainly. If a woman can learn to score a bridge game she ought to have no trouble in marking a ballot."

A Compliment.

Senator Depew, at a dinner in honor, said of his notable oratorical gift:

"I have received many compliments on my skill at after-dinner speaking, but the naivest compliment of all came from an up-state farmer.

"'Senator,' said he, 'you might have typhoid and recover, you might have pneumonia and recover, you might have yellow fever and recover, but if you ever have lockjaw you'd bust.'"

JAMES BRAID SAYS

No Athlete can do himself justice if his feet hurt. Many thousands are using it abroad and in this country, Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes. All the prominent Golf and Tennis Players at Augusta, Pinehurst and Palm Beach got much satisfaction from its use this Spring. It gives instant fulness and a springy feeling that makes you forget you have feet. Allen's Foot-Ease is the greatest comfort discovery of the age and so easy to use. It positively cures soreness, blisters or puffing and gives relief from tired, tender or swollen feet. TO MAKE GOOD CAKE

SOME RULES THAT SIMPLY MUST BE OBSERVED.

Proper Temperature of Oven One of the Most Important Points—Different Confections Require Varying Degrees of Heat.

First attention should be given to the oven, making sure that the fire is not too hot, and will remain even until the baking is done. Unless you have control of your fire do not attempt to bake cake.

Loaf cake requires less heat than thin cakes. If the oven is too hot at first or is suddenly cooled while the cake is baking the cake will be heavy. Loaf cake should bake as long again as thin cake. Divide the time of baking into quarters. The first quarter should show a rising, with the edges higher than the center; the second a continued even rising, with a slight brown tint; the third a deeper brown, and the last a shrinking and settling. If your cake rises and cracks in the center you are using too much flour; when it browns before rising, the oven is too hot.

How to Put Butter Cake Mixture Together—Cream the butter with hand or a large spoon, add sugar and cream again until very light. When the proportion of butter is small it may be put in with the eggs and sugar. Beat the yolks until light yellow, add to butter and sugar and beat again. Add flavoring and then a little milk, then a little flour, a little milk again, and so on until the milk and flour are all used, and beat vigorously until your mixture is smooth. Add lastly the beaten whites. Fruit should be added last, and fruit cake mixtures should be a little stiffer with flour.

Sponge Cake Mixtures—Beat the yolks until they are a light yellow and creamy and slowly beat in the sugar. Add flavoring and liquid and beat again. Beat the whites until stiff and fold it without beating. Add flour lastly with as little stirring as possible, as it makes the cake tough. Always follow these directions and cake failures will never be known.

Care of Metal Utensils.

Utensils must be kept polished. For copper use soap applied with a damp cloth, then sprinkle thickly with borax, if you have no regular copper polish. ened with kerosene, then rubbed with ened with kerosene, then rubbed with a paste of powdered chalk and lemon juice, and polished with chamois. Boil tin utensils occasionally in strong soda water, and if rusted rub with lard and let stand before washing.

Turpentine will remove tar from any kind of fabric.

To remove iron rust from white goods moisten spot, cover with cream of tartar, put in a basin of water, simmer gently for an hour. Rinse and dry.

To clean linoleum, place some fresh skim milk in a basin, and with a clean cloth dipped in the milk wipe over the floor, and the linoleum will look as good as new.

To effectually clean a dirty bottle, half fill the bottle with slack coal, add just enough water to cover, and shake vigorously. Then empty out, and rinse in several waters.

Glass is an ideal shelfing for a kitchen closet, as it can be kept clean so easily. If this is too costly paint the shelves white and give a coat of enamel. This is easily scrubbed, and does away with the necessity of papers.

Sweep your carpets thoroughly to remove all dust and dirt. After an hour slightly dampen a broom, and again sweep over the whole surface. In this way an old carpet will look clean and fresh, however faded it may be.

The walls of a kitchen quickly look dingy and for this reason should be painted or have a washable paper. When gray with soot dust with a soft brush covered with cheesecloth, then wipe with a cloth wet in cold water. Hot water has a yellowish effect.

An Expert in Pepper.

Fashion is fickle in table service as well as in other things. The dinner table of today is not what it was a few years ago.

Odd little novelties for the table have crept in recently. One of the newest is small cruet frames for each guest, and of different kinds. Cayenne, Nepaul, Aji (from Peru), Hungarian, paprika and Chile powder are used so that each guest may flavor his food to his taste. The really up-to-date person nowadays pretends to be an expert in pepper.

THEIR BUSINESS.

Smith (at matrimonial agent's, looking for a wife)—From this picture she appears as a woman with a high temper. 'Fraid we couldn't get along together.

Agent—That's all right, sir. With every wife we furnish complete directions for getting along with her.

An Unlaureled Hero.

Here is a niche in the Hall of Fame for Seth A. Eaton, a rural mail carrier from the Middleboro post office, who, surrounded by woodland fire, his horse lying on the ground stifled with smoke, his own hair singed, his hat burned and one side of his face and hands blistered, was still mindful of duty and saved the mail he was carrying by burying it in the sand, before he fought through the line of fire to safety. Not all the heroes tread the battlefields.—Fall River Herald.

Grateful.

"How does Slithers feel about that chauffeur who ran off with his car and his daughter?" asked Wilkes.

"He's mighty grateful," said Bildad. "He says the poor idiot relieved him of his two most expensive possessions."—Harper's Weekly.

NOT A KNOCKER

Thornton Enterprise: Klemme will celebrate July 4th in the most patriotic style and on Thursday of last week she showed off some of her metropolitan spirit by making an auto tour of the surrounding towns, covering the territory well. There were seven autos in the party carrying about 35 people. The Klemme band enlivened things in the different towns with their music while the advertising committee "peddled the bills." They came our way and Thornton and Meservey citizens had the pleasure of their music. The "stunt" was well carried out and Klemme will long be remembered, even by people who will not see their celebration.

The woman of today who has good health, good temper, good sense, bright eyes and a lovely complexion, the result of correct living and good digestion, wins the admiration of the world. If your digestion is faulty Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will correct it. For sale by all dealers.

It is with pleasure that we advertise the IMPERIAL. When so doing it is hard to say too much in favor of this line of IMPERIAL Automobiles. They have the record up-to-date for running and covering more miles of hard road-going, with the least expense, least adjustments.

The Burd Auto Co., Waterloo, Iowa, says: "The Imperial Automobile has not been equaled yet regardless of price." They run out 37 last season. Up to date there hasn't been one adjustment made. Their contract calls for 100 Imperials for 1911.

LOEHRE WILL QUIT

Head of Jewell Lutheran College Expected To Resign

SERIOUS TROUBLE SURMISED

College Has Grown During Fifteen Years Loehre Has Been at Head and is Widely Known Among the Lutherans.

Webster City.—It is expected that the resignation of President Loehre of Jewell Lutheran college will be in the hands of the synod, which now is in session.

Professor Loehre has been at the head of Jewel Lutheran college fifteen years, and has done much to build it up and make it one of the leading colleges in his denomination in Iowa. The president's home is a magnificent residence, built by Professor Loehre's father with the understanding that his son should remain at Jewell Lutheran college for life should he wish to do so.

The present trouble at the school arose over Professor Eake, an instructor and former graduate of the college. He is a relative of Professor Loehre. The townspeople are bitterly against him. President Loehre stood by Eake. This brought forth some strong protests. The matter has been brought to the attention of the synod and it is confidently predicted that President Loehre will resign.

Professor Loehre is a finely educated man and one of the ablest and most successful college men working in this denomination anywhere in the country. The college at Jewell is a prosperous one with a large enrollment, excellent faculty and a wide reputation among Lutherans throughout Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska and other nearby states. Its curriculum is complete and its work everywhere recognized as of college and university standard.

FREED FROM SKIN DISEASE

"Our boy was born in Toronto Oct. 13, 1908, and when three weeks old a slight rash appeared on cheek. What appeared to be a water blister would form. When broke, matter would run out, and new blisters until his entire head and shoulders were a mass of scabs and you could not see a particle of clear skin. Other parts of his body were affected, but not to such an extent. We tried about every advertised remedy without avail. Indeed some of them only added to the suffering and one in particular ——— Remedy, almost put the baby into convulsions. The family physician prescribed for him and told us to bathe the baby in buttermilk. This did not do any good, so we took him to a hospital. He was treated as an out-patient twice a week and grew worse, if anything. We then called in another doctor and inside of a week the boy was, to all appearances, cured and the doctor said his work was done. But the very next day he broke out as bad as ever.

"We decided that it could not be cured and must run its course, so we just kept his arms bandaged to his side to prevent his tearing the flesh. We left Toronto and shortly after our arrival in Duluth, the Cuticura Remedies were recommended. We started using them in May, 1909, and soon the cure was complete. You would not think he was the same child for Cuticura made his skin perfectly clear and he is entirely free from the skin disease. There has been no return this time. We always use only Cuticura Soap for the bath. Robert Mann, Proctor, Minn., May 3, 1910."

WANTED TO SLEEP

Curious That a Tired Preacher Should Have Such Desire.

A minister speaks of the curious effect of Grape-Nuts food on him and how it has relieved him.

"You will doubtless understand the suffering from indigestion which I used to be troubled with, work an almost unendurable burden and why it was that after my Sabbath duties had been performed, sleep was a stranger to my pillow till near daylight.

"I had to be very careful as to what I ate, and even with all my care experienced poignant physical distress after meals, and my food never satisfied me.

"Since I began the use of Grape-Nuts the benefits I have derived from it are very definite, I no longer suffer from indigestion, and I began to improve from the time Grape-Nuts appeared on our table.

"I find that by eating a dish of Grape-Nuts food after my Sabbath work is done (and I always do so now) my nerves are quieted and rest and refreshing sleep are ensured me.

"I feel that I could not possibly do without Grape-Nuts food, now that I know its value. It is invariably on the table—we feel that we need it to make the meal complete and our children will eat Grape-Nuts when they could be persuaded to touch anything else. CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

beetle-browed, fierce, white-whis- ed old gentleman sat in the ton- and berated in a most astonish- way a very meek young chauffeur. w, you'll have to walk back to garage and get one and leave me to burn up in this unmitigated you numskull—d'you hear?— skull!"

he meek young man answered kly, but not at all as if terrified, there was something comic in the gentleman's rage and there was winkle under the bushy eyebrows. Now, don't be bothered, mister," d Miss Selina Lue from the gro- y steps, where she stood sur- nded by all the small fry on the ff, none of whom had ever before d the opportunity of such a close quaintance with the mysterious ani- l known as the "ottermobile." "The ng man can go in on the next car d be back in no time with the key-wrench or whatever you need fix it with. And you come right and set here in the shade of the ckberry where you can git the river eze. Bennie, set out the big chair. d, Ethel Maud, you and Luella run the well and draw a bucket of fresh ter and hand some in that new rd hanging by my door. Just come r here and be comfortable, mister; will admire to have you."

Miss Selina Lue's bustling, hospit- le enthusiasm had the old gentle- an out of the machine and seated by e grocery door before he knew it mself.

"Upon my word, madam, this is pleasant after the hot sun," he said in a booming voice, "very pleasant—d'you hear?—very pleasant!" and his brows drew up in an arch of amusement as Ethel Maud and Luella presented themselves before him with a dripping gourd held in two pairs of small hands, for not for worlds would either of them have relinquished a part in the presentation of the cooling draft.

"My, my, what a nice pair of little girls we have here! A very interesting family, all of them—d'you hear?—a very interesting family—and large—eh?"

"Lands alive, mister, this is all the children on the Bluff; they don't none of 'em belong to me," said Miss Selina Lue, as she took the gourd from him and began to water the children one at a time, according to size.

"Now, that's too bad, madam—d'you hear?—too bad. Such a fine lot! But, bless my soul, I think you are lucky not to own a single one! I—I've got the most outrageous pig-headed child myself and I—well, I just can't express myself about him; outrageous pig-head—d'you hear?—outrageous pig-head!"

"My, now, ain't that a pity!" said Miss Selina Lue sympathetically. "Did the poor boy take to drink?"

"Drink? No, madam, he did not! He's everything a gentleman ought to be, and more, the pig-head—d'you hear?—the pig-head!"

"Couldn't you do nothing with him?" asked Miss Selina Lue with interest. "You have to make allowances fer young men-folks; looks like jest they youngness goes to they heads. Where did he break out?" Miss Selina Lue seated herself on the step beside his chair, keeping a watchful eye on the children, who stood as close as possible to the red marvel and discussed its wonders in the highest-pitched voices at their command. As usual, her sympathetic and interested way had its effect of irresistibly inviting confidence.

"In a most unexpected—pig-headedness—left me and the business to go to the dogs and went trailing off after moonshine—d'you hear—moonshine!"

"Well, now, I expect he thought you could take mighty good keer of yourself and the business, too; you seem so strong fer any age at all," said Miss Selina Lue soothingly. The old gentleman drew himself up in his chair as I looked quite rejuvenated by the mention of his obvious youthfulness.

"Oh, I could pull the business through well enough, but it was his leaving it for moonshine nonsense—d'you hear?—moonshine nonsense!"

"Well, things do happen strange in this world, and it looks like they can't nobody weigh out anybody else's cake fer 'em. Boys and fathers lots of times don't want to bite offen the same slice of life." Miss Selina Lue's eyes had a far-away look in them and she spoke very softly.

"But what's a man to do? Build a great business and have a son come along and scorn it—d'you hear?—scorn it?"

"It might be that what a man thought was a great thing to do in life would look like small potatoes to his son. I certainly am sorrowful fer you about being so disappointed in your boy, and hurting as it is to me to talk about it, I want to tell you about how it was with Adoniram and Elder Millsaps, fer maybe it will help you to git comfort." Miss Selina Lue paused as if the task was too great for her, then looked at the old gentleman gently and began again to speak.

"You see, Elder spoke Adoniram out in meeting and asked fer prayers fer him 'cause he wouldn't take to the farm he had worked all his life to leave to him. Looked like a plow give Adoniram a pain, and farm-chores set heavy on him all over. After his father spoke him out and all the Twin Creek Circuit sistern and brethren got to stopping, when they met him, to exhort, Adoniram lit out and it was many a day 'fore they seen him again. I had the little horsehair ring he made me and faith enough to hold him up anywhere. Lands alive, but it was funny when everybody went to the meeting-house to hear him speak when he come home! He had done studied and found out all about rocks and things and was in the government employ, and he had come home to tell all the neighbors that maybe they had a fortune in phosphate right under their potato-patches and orchards. And all of them was a-cheering of him and the Squire a-calling him our leading citizen. It do seem strange how some folks will order out the music fer they boys after they have done fit the hard fight and don't need no cheering on, instead of starting 'em out on the road of life with a little whooping up. It's then they needs it. I am mighty glad I've got that night at the meeting-house to look back on, fer he was blowed up by the first rock crusher that was set going."

The old gentleman looked fiercer than ever, but the tips of his white mustache trembled and he drew his brows together as if in pain. "He's an ungrateful pig-head," he muttered, but a good part of the explosiveness was gone from his tone.

"Oh, maybe he ain't now," said Miss Selina Lue persuasively. "There's the case of Mr. Alan and his father—the poor old man's pretty nigh broke his son's heart and is acting fer all the world like you say your boy is, pig-headed. But we excuse him."

"Mr. Alan?" The old gentleman sat up, but Miss Selina Lue failed to notice the spark in his eyes.

"Yes, that's a young man artist I've got boarding here with me. His name is Kent, but he is jest sich friends with everybody on the Bluff that we all call him by his first name. His father is a big rich man, but it seems like with all his money he can't afford to let his son be happy and do the world good by painting beautiful pictures that are a regular call to goodness fer anybody as sees 'em. He never said a word about his troubles, but Miss Evelyn Branch told us about it, fer she got acquainted with him last winter some place she went. The poor boy grieves so over his father that I feel I could do jest anything to help make 'em up. He has painted some beautiful pictures to go in a hall for workmen to see how beautiful work can be painted about, and he hopes his father will see 'em and maybe forgive him fer painting. I never close my eyes at night without making it a subject of prayer to soften that old man's heart." Miss Selina Lue's voice was deep with emotion and her eyes shone with wistfulness.

"Did he say his father was a hard-headed, old pig-head?" asked the old gentleman fiercely.

"No, indeed; he never!" exclaimed Miss Selina Lue hastily. "You don't know Mr. Alan! Why, he's jest that tender and good that you would know he loved his father hard. But how his father could not know him enough to trust him to do his man's work in the world, I don't see. Looks like a man must think his own life have been a grand success if he goes to a-directing of his son's."

"And this Mr. Alan—er—er—you say he lives here? Been here long?"

"Long enough to git into the good feeling of every man, woman, child and puppy on the Bluff, and to git Miss Cynthia to loving him enough to marry him as soon as he finishes the pictures and gits paid fer 'em, which she wouldn't wait fer, but he thinks they better."

"Married!" the old gentleman exploded the word and lay back in the chair and fanned himself with the palm-leaf fan Miss Selina Lue had handed him when he came.

"Yes, Mis' Jackson Page's daughter, and a blessed angel of light she is, too pretty and stylish fer any use. It's jest one of the most beautiful and happiest things in the world, if it wasn't for the mortgage and the father."

"Mortgage—father?"

"It ain't his father's mortgage; it's Mis' Jackson Page's, and she ain't resigned about selling her home to the Golf Club. Poor Miss Cynthia has to spend all this love-time of her life a-persuading of her ma to be contented. I am one that holds that contentment oughter be taught early in life—with a peach-tree switch if need be. The poor child is all drug out with worrying, and it nearly kills Mr. Alan not to be able to help her none. He sets here 'way into the night with me a-talking and a-studying what to do to keep it from being sold Saturday."

"Well, where is this young man, may I ask? I would like—er—to see him—er where is he—d'you hear?—where is he?"

"Le'me see! Him and Miss Cynthie is off sketching, but I have plumb forgot where they said they would be. But he'll be coming back in a little while now, and I want you to stay and have dinner with us and git a chanct to talk to him and maybe see his pictures, too. Just pot-luck, if you don't mind. I would admire to have you. Seems like I have seen you before somewheres, your face have sich a friendly favor, and here I've been a-telling you family affairs like I had knowed you all my life."

"I thank you, madam; it will be a pleasure to accept your hospitality—d'you hear?—a great pleasure!" And the old gentleman smiled so pleasantly that Ethel Maud sidled up to him and grasped the corner of his coat.

"Say, mister," she ventured, "do a ottermobile feel like flying in the air? Bennie says it ain't no better than a 'lectric, but a 'lectric is hitched down top and bottom and it don't look so free."

"Naw, mister, I said I knowed it was stylisher, but I bet it can't go no faster," said Bennie, anxious to be quoted correctly.

"Well, I tell you what we will do," said the old gentleman with a delightful smile as he patted Ethel Maud's little hand. "There comes Wilkins and as soon as he fixes things up we will all take a little spin up the road before dinner, and you can decide for yourself how near it comes to flying. May I have the pleasure of your company, madam—d'you hear?—that great pleasure?"

"Oh, please, Miss Selina Lu, oh, please!" came in a chorus from every small mouth, and excitement reigned.

"Well, it do look like I oughtn't ter let my skeer keep the children from sich a educating thing as a ottermobile ride, which they never will maybe git again. Thank you kindly, mister. And you can git 'em all in, do you think? They is three more in the back of the grocery what you haven't seed, and I will have to pick up young Jim Peters, fer his mother have gone to town, and I promised to listen across the street fer him to wake up."

"Oh, yes, Miss Seliny Lue, you can pack in all the littlest ones, and me and Sam Tyne and Ethel Maud and Luella can hang on behind," urged Bennie with dancing eyes.

"Then, I thank you, sir, we'll all go," said Miss Selina Lue, with courage in her face and voice, but quaking in her shoes. "Now run to the pump, all of you, to wash your faces and hands while I git my hat and the babies. You big ones wash the little ones good, fer clean faces is the best way to show appreciation fer sich a invitation."

FAMILY BIBLE OBSOLESCENT

Publisher Says the Trade In That Once Popular Form of the Sacred Book Is Dying Out.

A Philadelphia publishing house that makes a specialty of the sacred book says the family Bible trade is languishing. The Bible continues to be the best seller, but it is no longer the immense volume that stood on the parlor center table, and contained marvelous steel engravings of the tower of Babel and the fall of Nineveh and had room for all the family records. The thing now is a thin paper student edition with flexible covers, concordance and notes and all suited to the overcoat pocket. It hasn't room for any family history, but it can be introduced into a stingy city flat without crowding the family.

The passing of the family Bible is significant of an interesting change in the keeping of vital statistics. Records of births, deaths and marriages have ceased to be a family and become a state function. It is done better and more completely than in the old days and the records are more useful to the public. That fact need not prevent our dropping a tear at the passing of an old cherished institution.—Success Magazine.

Fletcher's Folly.

The late Levi Fletcher of Hollis left behind an automobile of his own manufacture that was known throughout the countryside as "Fletcher's folly." He was perhaps the first man in New England to start to perfect and build a power vehicle. The builder was handicapped by lack of means and tools, and as ordinary tires were used on the machine it was impossible to move it up the hills.—Kennebec Journal.

FREE ADVICE TO WOMEN

Women suffering from any form of illness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Mrs. Pinkham, care of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Big Free Open Air Attraction Secured for July 4th

Billy and Eva Merriam in Three High Class Gymnastic Acts---Other Attractions.

The committee on attractions for Klemme's big Fourth of July celebration have been busy and have been fortunate enough to secure "The Merriams" for three big free open air acts on that day. This is a guaranteed attraction and is secured at a big expense, but nothing is too good for Klemme's visitors on the big day. This feature alone is worth coming miles to see. Act One consists of flying trapeze and walking the loops upside down, by gentleman. Act Two—Double Roman Ring Act by lady and gentleman. Act Three—Balancing and Contortion act by lady and gentleman.

Besides these features there will be good band music, a fine parade, ball game between Garner and Klemme for a purse of $75, street races, big display of fireworks, dances, and other things too numerous for one man to remember.

If you don't come to Klemme July 4th you will be sorry. That's sure.

Mrs. John Thompson Passes Away

The people of this community were shocked last Sunday night when word was passed that Mrs. John Thompson had died very suddenly at her home in this place. She with her husband and little babe had been out driving until quite late Sunday evening and had only been home a short time when her death occurred. Medical aid was summoned just as soon as Mr. Thompson noticed that she was sick but before the doctors could get to the home she was beyond all human aid. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband and little son, besides her father and mother, three brothers and five sisters.

Mrs. Lillie Josephine Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Freie, was born in Klemme, Iowa, October 21, 1890. She was married to John Thompson July 7, 1909, to which union one child, Raymond, was born. Funeral services were held Wednesday, July 21st, at two o'clock from the English Methodist church, conducted by Rev. Wm. Zabilka. Interment was made in Klemme cemetery

Mrs. W. R. Bloom drove down to Belmond last Thursday afternoon. Miss Bess Ely accompanied her.

Three Klemme fellows hired an auto for $6 00 to take them to Clear Lake. Sunday, and it only cost them $1.50 apiece. Here is a mathematical problem for you. If you can't figure it out, ask Fred Henschen, Harry Ell or Lude Fuller.

Herman Miller came down from Garner on Tuesday, having finished his work for the Farmers' Elevator at Garner. He has leased the North Elevator in Klemme from August Lau for a term of years and will take possession on July 1st. Herman needs no introduction to our readers and all know him to be an experienced man at the grain business. We wish him success in his undertaking.

A Close Call

On a dark and rainy night last week Arthur Wellemeyer and family were returning from a visit in German township driving a foolish pony team. At the same time Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kraus were speeding home with their auto; their lights were not working well and were not quite as bright as usual. All of a sudden these two parties met on a narrow grade east of Center school and before the pony team could be persuaded to slide into the ditch, and with all breaks set, the auto struck the buggy, smashing one buggy wheel and throwing little Ethel Wellemeyer from the rig. All were more or less frightened, but luckily no one was injured.

Since this accident Mr Kraus has fitted his auto with the famous Presto lights and hereafter will be able to see a long distance ahead of his car. And Mr. Wellemeyer declares that for the safety of all, each buggy should be fitted with small side lights or at least a dash board lantern for night use, so that an auto could see a buggy coming and slow down in time to avoid collision.

FARMERS BUNCOED

Men Claiming to be Deputies Are Working the Iowa Public

NO AUTHORITY FROM STATE

Pure Food Commissioner Barney Issues Warning to Those Who Are Expecting to Form Co-operative Creameries.

Des Moines, Iowa. — The farming communities in Iowa are being flimflammed out of $2,000 in the erection of co-operative creameries by persons claiming to represent the state food and dairy department, according to Commissioner Barney. He declines to make public the names of the fake deputies who have been working the farmers.

Their plan is to go into the community and represent themselves as deputy food and dairy commissioners and suggest the organization of a co-operative creamery. This done their confederates get the contract for building the plant. They charge $7,000 and assure the victims that the state is assisting them. The creameries can be erected anywhere in Iowa for not over $5,000. Commissioner Barney has given to the press a signed warning against the fakers and urging them to notify the department when they are ready to organize co-operative companies. His warning is as fallows: "It has come to the notice of this department that certain parties are working in the state organizing co-operative creameries under alleged authority and endorsement of the dairy and food commissioner. No one not in the employ of this department as an assistant commissioner has authority to do such work. The department at this time has five assistant commissioners, and will place one or more of these men at the disposal of any community wishing to organize a creamery. All of these men are competent to do this work, and their services may be secured without expense. We can furnish copy of the constitution and by-laws with plans when they are wanted. By following this plan a community can procure a creamery for actual cost, and not be put to the extra expense that a promoter must add to the price of building and equipment."

Deyoe Interprets New School Law.

A. M. Deyoe, state superintendent of public instruction, sent to every county superintendent an interpretation of the Cowles-Ritter bill. The question of the abolishment of the county institute is involved by the fight which is being made by him as a test case of the bill. July 4 is the date when the paper is published.

"I have received information from the office of the attorney general that his interpretation of the registration fee for the support of the normal institutes as found in section 2738 of the school laws will be in substance as follows:

"The time for the collection of the fee may not be limited to the dates of the institutes, but may be extended throughout the year. It will be perfectly proper to ascertain at the time of the institute from those in attendance whether they desire to secure a certificate or teach for the ensuing year and collect a fee of $1.00 from each person answering in the affirmative.

"This registration fee of $1.00 shall be collected annually from each person desiring to secure a certificate in addition to the regular examination fee, and from each person who may teach in his county during the year, but not more than $1.00 shall be so collected annually from any one person.

"This method of collecting the $1.00 registration fee does not apply prior to July 4, 1911."

Leading Hotel Managers Agreed.

The recent liquor decision of the supreme court means the death of drinking in Des Moines hotels. This statement, made by W. L. Brown, shows the attitude local hotels will take in regard to the recent decision forbidding the sale or dispensation of liquor in hotel cafes. Manager Brown said the decision would also mean that guests could not even order liquor delivered to their rooms.

The managers of the leading hotels in Des Moines agreed that liquor drinking of any kind, or in any form is doomed for guests of their hotels. The managers of the Savery, Elliott and Chamberlain, when asked about the matter unanimously agreed that the custom must cease. The custom has been in vogue in this city since large hotels began operation. It prevailed throughout the reign of the drys and the decision is the most rigid prohibition rule ever laid down in Des Moines.

BOARD IS FIRM; JUDGES SCORED

Chairman Howe Advises Jurists To Observe Indeterminate Sentence Law As It Appears in Code.

Des Moines.—Chairman Howe, of the state board of parole, has served notice on those district judges who pay no attention to the indeterminate sentence law, that the board will not give consideration to the sentences which they provide.

"This board of parole will give no attention to determinate sentences fixed by district judges," said Chairman Howe. "The new law fixes the maximum limit for practically all crimes and that alone will guide the board. For instance, in robbery cases the law fixes not to exceed ten years in jail. If a district judge sentences a man to six years that man will stay the full ten years if the board thinks he ought to stay. The district judges have absolutely no authority to fix sentences definitely and they ought to stop the practice. It only tends to create trouble with prisoners who are given determinate sentences."

Increases Cost to State.

The policy of the state board of parole in making prisoners in the penitentiary and the reformatory serve longer sentences, now than they did under the old determinate sentence law, has increased cost of keeping prisoners by $37,488 in four years. In those same four years the number of committments to the two institutions have been decreasing at the rate of forty per year.

The sum of $108 per year is allowed by the legislature for the keep of each prisoner. This is the minimum. With the increase in the number of prisoners in the institutions each year, it is seen that a continuance of the policy of the board means a proportionate increase in the total cost each year.

Added to this expense is the $10 per day which the board receives, $1,800 per year for the secretary's salary, $125 per month for the state parole agent, and $75 per month for each of two stenographers. Then there are office expenses and traveling expenses. The board of parole meets four times a year to pass on applications for parole. The state board of control has entire charge of purchasing the supplies for the two institutions, buying the clothing for the inmates, hiring the help at the institutions and working the properties. The parole board has nothing to do but pass on cases.

It has been suggested that the parole board be abolished and that the board of control be given power to parole prisoners the same as they do the inmates of the industrial schools and insane hospitals. The control board does everything else about the prisons but parole the inmates.

Opposes Blodgett's Release.

John Fletcher, assistant attorney general, is in Fort Dodge to contest the application of D. T. Blodgett for release from the state penitentiary at Fort Madison. Blodgett filed with the United States district court application for a writ of habeas corpus. He has raised a novel question for the attorney general's office to meet. He declares that he was put twice in jeopardy for the same crime and is therefore entitled to release because his imprisonment is a violation of the United States constitution.

He was tried at Boone on the charge of uttering a forged instrument and in Des Moines on the charge of forging the instrument. They were the same instrument but the crimes are separate and distinct. Federal Judge Reed will hear the cas.

Van Tassel Must Serve Out Sentence.

Hopes of an imprisoned man were blasted when the parole board refused to parole L. R. Van Tassel, serving a life sentence for killing his young wife fifteen years ago. The crime was committed near Ionia, in Chickasaw county. A skilled Chicago detective claimed to have secured a confession from Van Tassel (who always claimed his innocence), and upon the evidence of the detective and circumstantial evidence, Van Tassel was convicted. The parole board, reviewing the case, says that the evidence shows that Van Tassel committed the murder, disregarding the alleged confession, and that "the law is the law." The board refuses to show mercy on the theory that Van Tassel has suffered enough and should be allowed to enter the world and live a life of usefulness.

Tom Watson Case Continued.

The state parole board announced that it will not take the Tom Watson case under consideration until the July term. This is the case which has excited Editor Brant of the Iowa City Republican. Additional evidence has come to the attention of the board and the members desire time in which to investigate that evidence.

I refer to the condition the mind is in, just before, at the time, or just following the taking of food.

If he has been properly educated (the majority have) he will help you understand the curious machinery of digestion.

To start you thinking on this interesting subject, I will try to lay out the plan in a general way and you can then follow into more minute details.

Pawlow (pronounce Pavloff) a famous Russian Physician and Chemist, experimenting on some dogs, cut into the tube leading from the throat to the stomach.

They were first put under chloroform or some other anaesthetic and the operation was painless. They were kept for months in very good condition.

When quite hungry some unappetizing food was placed before them and, although hunger forced them to eat, it was shown by analysis of the contents of the stomach that little if any of the digestive juices were found.

Then, in contrast, some raw meat was put where they couldn't reach it at once, and a little time allowed for the minds of the dogs to "anticipate" and create an appetite. When the food was finally given them, they devoured it ravenously and with every evidence of satisfaction. The food was passed out into a dish through the opening before it reached the stomach. It was found to be mixed with "Ptyalin" the alkaline juice of the mouth, which is important for the first step in digestion. Then an analysis was made of the contents of the stomach, into which no food had entered. It shown that the digestive fluids of stomach were flo freely, exactly as if the desirable food had entere

This proved that it was not the presence of which caused the digestive juices to flow, but the was caused entirely and alone as a result of the of the mind, from "anticipation."

One dog continued to eat the food he liked for an hour believing he was getting it into his sto whereas, not an ounce went there; every particle out through the opening and yet all this time t gestive juices flowed to the stomach, prepare quickly digest food, in response to the curious ord the mind.

Do you pick up the lesson?

Unappetizing food, that which fails to create anticipation, does not cause the necessary dig juices to flow, whereas, food that is pleasing sight, and hence to the mind, will cause the compl machinery of the body to prepare in a wonderfu for its digestion.

How natural, then, to reason that one should sit to a meal in a peaceful, happy state of mind and off the breakfast, say with some ripe delicious then follow with a bowl of crisp, lightly browned bits of corn like Post Toasties, add a sprinkle of and some good yellow cream and the attractive, a ing picture cannot escape your eye and will produ condition of mind which causes the digestive nature has hidden in mouth and stomach, to come and do their work.

These digestive juices can be driven back by a oppressed with worry, hate, anger or dislike of th agreeable appearance of food placed before one.

Solid facts that are worthy the attention of a who esteems prime health and human happiness valuable asset in the game of life.

"There's a Reason" for saying "The Memory Lingers" when breakfa started with POST TOASTIES.

Old Superstition.

It was prescribed by an old superstition that if those who were affected with ague would visit at dead of night the nearest crossroad five different times and then bury a new laid egg, the disease would be buried. If the experiment failed, they attributed it to some unlucky accident that may have befallen them on the way.

GOVERNOR ANSWERS

Carroll Makes Second Reply To Iowa City Editor

ASKS FOR PROOF OF CHARGES

Says Brant Has Undoubtedly Come Into Possession of a Lot of Information From Unreliable Sources.

Des Moines, June 19.—Governor Carroll has seen fit to make another reply to the attacks of Editor David Brant of the Iowa City Republican on the state board of parole, the control board and the management of the state institutions.

In a letter given out by the governor, he gives a detailed explanation of the part he has taken in the cases of prisoners who Editor Brant says have been neglected in their applications for release.

The governor also pays attention to the charge that able bodied prisoners are denied parole because prison contractors want to keep them there and at work at 60 cents a day.

The governor declares that such a charge as this is serious, and he calls upon Editor Brant to "furnish the proof if you have it."

Editor Brant has also charged that prison contractors and state officials are "close," and that an accurate account of a recent banquet would be interesting to hear.

"Here again I ask for such information as you may have regarding the subject referred to," says Governor Carroll. "If there is something wrong and you know it, you will certainly not hesitate. Do not cast reflections on all the officials of the state and both the board of parole and board of control, but make your charges specific."

The governor states at the conclusion of one paragraph that Editor Brant has undoubtedly come into possession of a lot of information from thoroughly unreliable sources.

WILL SELL AGAR PLANT TODAY

Referee In Bankruptcy Will Have Charge of Sale Which Will Be In Chicago Today.

Des Moines, June 19.—On order of the federal court, the Agar Packing company plant, Des Moines, will be sold to the highest bidder at 9:30 o'clock today in Chicago.

The sale will include the packing house here and all its equipment, comprising seventy-eight refrigerator cars, horses, vehicles, meat in storage and the good will of the concern.

The sale is the direct result of financial difficulties which threw the local plant into bankruptcy on August 13, 1910. The liabilities are estimated at $425,000, and it is believed the assets will cover the liabilities. Most of the creditors of the company live in Illinois.

Judge Reed Denies Plea.

A MARVELOUS RECOVERY.

How a Chronic Invalid Regained Perfect Health.

Mrs. Ray Trusner, 30 West Third St., New Albany, Ind., says: "Kidney disease had rendered me a chronic invalid. I lay in bed unable to move hand or foot. My right limb was swollen to twice normal size. I looked the picture of death and my case puzzled the doctors. The kidney secretions were highly colored and scalded terribly. Marked improvement followed the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. In six weeks I was a well woman. My friends and relatives marvel at my recovery."

The Old Gag.

Miss Lillian B. Rowe, at an advertisement writers' dinner in Denver, said of the harem skirt:

"It will soon be so widely worn that the old gag, perpetrated in the '40s on men, may profitably be revived for women victims.

"Some sharper, you know, will revive the gag by advertising in the Ladies' Own—

"'Send $1 and learn how to keep your harem skirt from becoming fringed at the bottom.'

"Thousands of dollars will pour in, and to each victim the sharper will reply:

"'Wear knickers.'"

Their Great Value Is Most Appreciated by Those Who Have Tried Them.

"I was afflicted with Eczema in the palms of my hands and between my fingers. The treatment used gave no relief and my hands were in a dreadful condition when I was advised to try Resinol. I began with it by applying the ointment twice a day and using the Soap when bathing. This effected a cure in less than a month. I heartily recommend those excellent preparations," writes Mrs. Amy Crain, Fredonia, Ky. At all drug stores.

He Got the Pass.

"I want a pass."

"Pass? You're not entitled to a pass. You are not an employe. Sorry."

"No; but here the anti-pass law says free transportation can be granted to 'necessary caretakers of live stock,' poultry and fruit.' Well, I'm going on this trip with an aunt that's a hen—there's your poultry; a girl that's a peach—there's your fruit; and a nephew that's a mule—there's your live stock. Gimme a pass."—The Way-Bill.

The United States senate finance committee reported adversely on the wool bill by a vote of 9 to 4, and on the farmers' free list bill by a vote of 8 to 5. The house of representatives refused to accept the bill for direct election of United States senators in the form in which it passed the senate, and by a vote of 172 to 112 sent the measure to commence. ROCK ISLAND ROAD

Extension From Des Moines To Allerton is Progressing Rapidly

1,500 MEN AND TEAMS ON JOB

Eighty-Two Ton Steam Shovel Is Moved Across Country On Temporary Track From Knoxville to Dallas.

Des Moines.—W. P. Brady, of the Rock Island, having returned from a trip along the route of the new extention from Des Moines to Allerton via Chariton, stated that with several exceptions the company had acquired right of way for the entire length of the survey without invoking condemnation proceedings. Mr. Brady, remarking upon the progress made in the construction of the line, said that about 1,500 men and teams are now cutting and filling between Des Moines and Allerton. The contractors are moving two huge steam shovels—one from Knoxville and the other from Chariton—to the heaviest portions of the work. One of these shovels weighs eighty-two tons. It was unloaded at Knoxville last week and is being moved across country on an improvised track; as none of the county bridges are strong enough to sustain the weight of the great machine, temporary bridges have to be constructed. It is estimated that thirty days will be consumed in moving the shovel from Knoxville to Dallas, fifteen miles distant.

CHAPTER IX.—Concluded.

a few minutes she appeared at door with the soap-boxers in her and announced herself as ready. l Maud had picked up Blossom, Luella had darted across the t for young Jim, and so skillful the extraction of the sleeper from cradle that he had never even ed his eyes, and it seemed likely he was to have the adventure of life in a state of unconsciousness. ith a great flourish of manner r beaming friend seated Miss Se- Lue in the tonneau, and under her ction and with the assistance of meek young man, he packed the dren in around her.

Let's see, I can hold both the rities in my lap, and prop Clem- and Pattie in on this offside," she ected, with an eye both to comfort security. "Luella can set on the by me and hold young Jim in her No, Bennie, I can't let you hang behind; you and Sammie set on little side seat and Ella Virginia Ethel Maud on that one. Now, we are all dy, mister, and you can let him go soon as you are a mind to. I shure feel safe with you up in front and young man looking so careful like. ave jest got confidence in his back, en."

Miss Selina Lue's merry eyes were ncing with excitement and the wide rdon hat that Miss Cynthia had mmed with purple lilacs was set at rather adventurous angle over her ft hair, which was flying tiny gray rls in every direction.

"Lands alive! won't all the folks er to the landing be surprised if ey come back and find us gone?" e exclaimed. All her neighbors had untered over the Bluff to take din- r pails to the men passing on the on boat, and so were in ignorance the expedition on which their vari- s families were about to embark.

Perhaps never in the history of the ttermobile" family had one carried ch a load of jubilant, seething joy was packed in that very fashion- le member. As it whizzed and spun the river road all the passengers ueaied with delight, and as they asted down the other side of the hill ey rose to their feet as one child. hey danced and yelled, waved what- er head-covering was possessed by e or two of them and stepped on e another's toes in a frenzy of de- ght. At the top of the far hill they lowed up, for their host was impress- d by the sweeping river view and he rned to point it out to Miss Selina ue.

"Yes, indeed, it looks like there ever was sich a view of the whole orld laid out before you anywhere se. I have set on the grocery steps nd watched the top of this hill in inter and in summer, sun-up and un-down, in storm and clearing, and ll the time a-wondering what was ere on the other side that I never ex- pected to see in this life. I am glad always laid it out in my mind as eautiful as I could, fer I wouldn't been ashamed if I had gone and made little of it to myself because I hadn't ever seen it, and maybe never would. Things always measure up to what you expect—and it's the same with people, too; a-looking fer saints you are mighty apt not to run on sinners. Now, Sammie, Bennie, all of you stop climbing out! S'pose he was to start off all of a sudden?"

Miss Selina Lue was busily engaged in settling the squirmers as the machine swept slowly around and started down the hill. A far, faint cry reached her ears, and she turned suddenly.

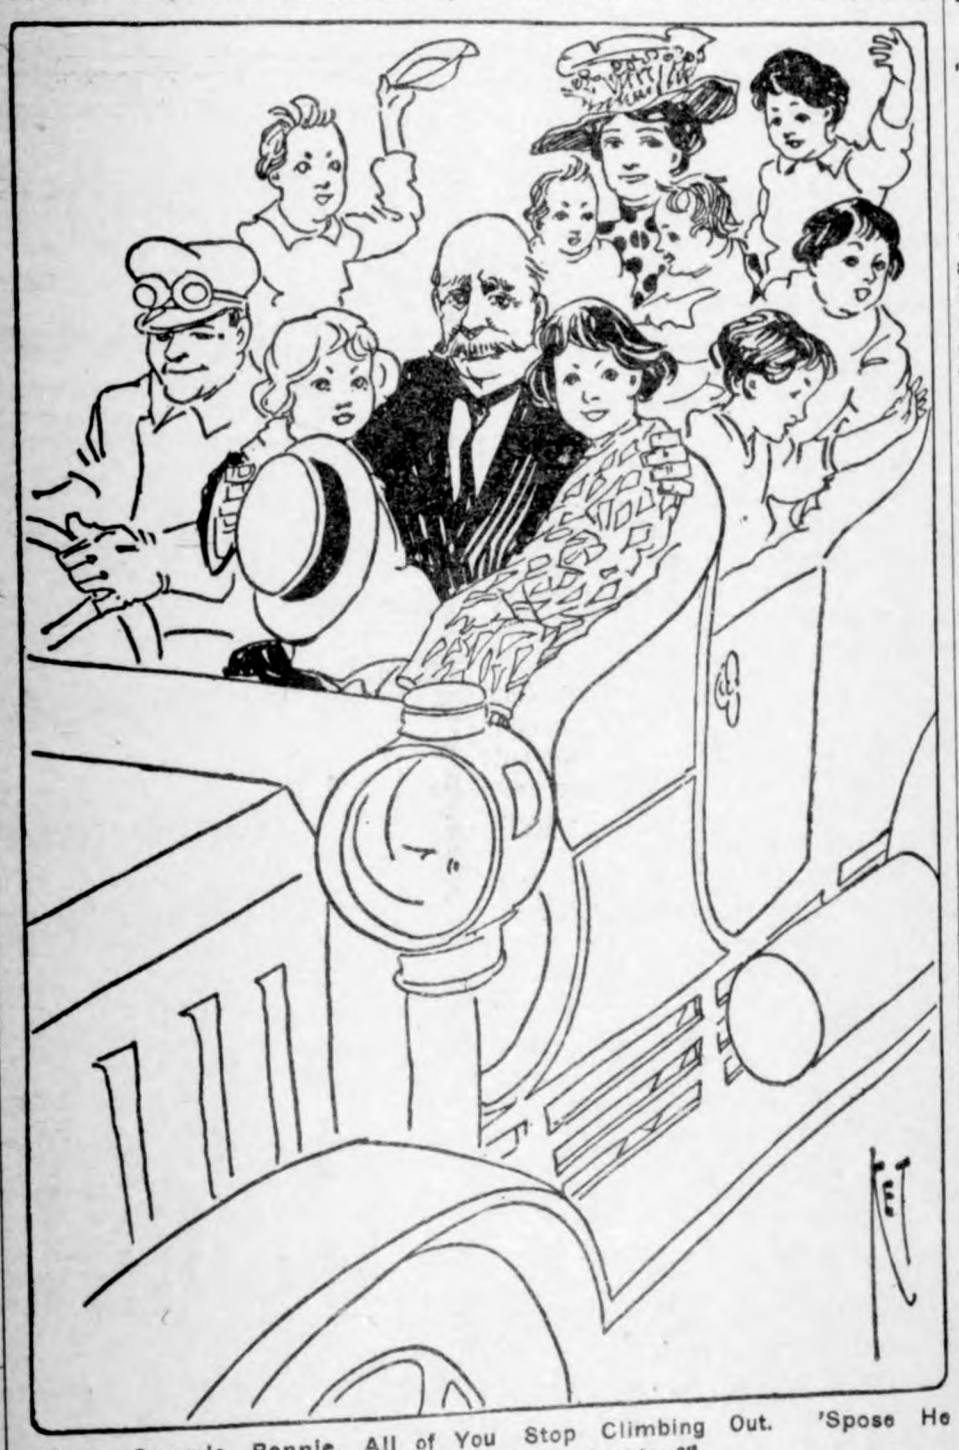
"Lands alive, mister," she called, "we've done spilled Ethel Maud, with all that climbing around! If we was a-taking a ride on the golden streets, that child woulder fell out into the set of glass. Please turn around and pick her up." Some distance back a bunch of blue calico sat in the road and lifted up a voice of lamentation.

"How ever did you happen to fall out, honey?" said Miss Selina Lue, as she squeezed up Ella Virginia and started to tuck the stray down beside her.

"I didn't fall! I climbed—I climbed to get the gentleman a flower—and now it's done broke!" she sobbed, as she held up a crushed, blue cornflower.

"Upon my word, that's a sweet little girl to get a posy for an old man—d'you hear?—a sweet little girl! Come over here and sit by me and I'll hold you in, and the baby, too." And so as the big red machine puffed down the street to the grocery, Ethel Maud and Blossom rode on the box-seat as it were.

And the moment they came to a standstill they were surrounded by



"Now, Sammie, Bennie, All of You Stop Climbing Out. 'Spose He Was to Start Off All of a Sudden?"

the mothers of the joyous youngsters and a babble ensued that was confusion confounded.

Mrs. Kinney clasped her wriggling offspring as they were handed down to her in turn, and with each she managed a "Thank you, sir," that sounded as if they had been returned from the grave to her maternal bosom. With the last in her arms she turned and said: "Miss Seliny Lue, I thank you fer this a-happening to 'em what they won't never forgit. They ain't a mother or child on this Bluff as could git along without you a single day."

Mrs. Dobbs affirmed the remarks of Mrs. Kinney heartily, but she was overcome with a shyness two hundred and ten pounds in weight, so could only nod. Her pride in the exalted position of Ethel Maud was overwhelming, but she lifted down Kinneys and Tynes with impartial delight. "Miss Selina Lue," she said, "le'me hold Clemmie fer you. I do wish her mother coulder seen you drive up. You don't know how a mother feels when she sees her children in rich and stylish company."

At last there were left only Ethel Maud and Blossom to descend, and the old gentleman took the baby while the child slowly climbed down, assisted by her mother and Bennie.

"My, my!" exclaimed Miss Selina Lue. "Looks like when you git 'em all together this Bluff is rich in children. Who's going to take Blossom? Everybody have got a armful and more." And she was just about to deposit Carrots on the steps when she exclaimed: "Lands alive, if here ain't Miss Cynthie in the nick of time! Give Blossom to her please, mister."

And so it was into a pair of very lovely arms that the old gentleman lowered the gurgly baby, and he had a look into beautiful and very deep blue eyes; and with the look something welled up and overflowed a certain arid and anger-wasted area in his large old heart, and in the twinkling of his keen, dark eyes the waters of forgiveness had made it to bloom with its accustomed flowers of good cheer, generosity, and the star-bloom of peace. His journey for the purpose of incriminations became one of discovery of treasures long possessed but unacknowledged—and others to be possessed.

It was at this auspicious moment, as the mothers were all absorbed in questioning, in listening to the children and exclaiming over the wonders of the expedition with Miss Selina Lue, that Mr. Alan stepped from around the corner of the grocery and stood at the side of the "ottermobile" before he knew of its presence. And before he had time to do or say anything the old gentleman reached down and gave him a tremendous squeeze directly before the astonished gaze of Miss Cynthia and Blossom. Then he went to still greater lengths, for he hopped down as nimbly as Bennie could have done right between Miss Cynthia and Mr. Alan and gave them both a tremendous squeeze, Blossom included. And all the time never a word passed between them, only Mr. Alan's eyes were very bright and his hand trembled so that Miss Cynthia took it in her free one and Blossom caught his sleeve.

"Well," said Miss Selina Lue, "well! I oughtn't to ever pray keerless, for the Lord shure listens to me! Mr. Kent, I oughter have knowed you by the eyes of faith. All of you come here and be made 'quainted with Mr. Alan's father, what's come to make us a visit. And, Bennie, you and Sammie run down that dominick rooster; he's the fattest thing on the place, and he'll have to do fer a calf in the pot. And to think I didn't know him—and they do so favor!"

The day of adventure and excitement came to a close for Miss Selina Lue as she sat on the grocery steps in the moonlight, waiting for Mr. Alan to come down from the Hill Mansion, where he and his father had been dining with Mrs. Jackson Page. When he came they sat silently for a few moments while he finished his cigar; then Miss Selina Lue said, as she laid her hand on his arm:

"Mr. Alan, honey, I know what a heft of trouble have been lifted offen your heart this day and I've been setting here a-rejoicing over your coming through so good. Looks like in all the world they ain't nothing that jest grinds down on the heart like unkind feelings where love ought-er be, special in blood kin. I am thankful I feel a long and loving life fer you and your father together, fer you've both done had a lesson in being away from one another."

"Miss Selina Lue, I don't know what you said to him today, but when I offered to spend the night at the hotel with him, he said he wanted me to come right back and stay here with you. I believe he is going to apply for a soap-box for me. He seems to feel about your guardianship as do Mr. Flarity and the others."

"Well, looks like when I think of you and Miss Cynthie having to move away from me to the other side of town my heart jest drops down. I have woke up more than once wet-eyed about it, but I try and think I will see you sometimes, and all the time I will have the remembering of you to love. The Lord has been good to me in letting me have so many remembers and I ain't serving Him right by getting unhappy, so I won't." As she spoke, Miss Selina Lue smiled at him wistfully.

"And that's just why I hoped you would wait up to see me to-night," said Mr. Alan as he took her hand. "What would you say if I told you that father is going to buy the Hill Mansion and all the property for—for—a wedding present—for her? And you'll always let me have the barn, so you see we are going to be in big soap-boxes right where you can attend to us the rest of our lives."

"Oh, Mr. Alan, honey, they ain't nothing to say that'll do to tell how I feel! My Lord is jest about to—crowd my heart with blessings." And Miss Selina Lue's eyes shone in the moonlight.

"Miss Selina Lue," said Mr. Alan slowly, as a man speaks from his inmost soul, "in the letter—and my father—they want me to paint one more picture—for the chapel. If I can paint what I feel when I see you with your manger-child in your arms—I will paint a picture for the whole world. Perhaps some day—"

"If you do, Mr. Alan, you'll paint the picture of a woman that lives by the loving she gits and gives—and the love of God. But don't make me cry—I'm jest a-smiling through my tears."

THE END.

TWO WORDS WITH HISTORY

"Fudge" Descends From a Marine Munchausen and "Bosh" Is From the Turkish.

Fudge" is a word with a history. There are prosaic etymologists, as there always are, who derive it from a Gaelic word meaning deception; but Isaac Disraeli's view is much more interesting. He derives it from a certain Captain Fudge, who seems to have been his crew's equivalent to the modern "Rats!" In a collection of some papers of William Crouch, the Quaker, published in 1712, it is recorded that one Degory Marshall informed Crouch that "in the year 1664 we were sentenced for banishment to Jamaica by Judges Hyde and Twisden, and our number was 55. We were put on board the ship Black Eagle; the master's name was Fudge, by some called Lying Fudge."

"Bosh" sounds a fairly good English word to apply to your political opponent's arguments. It isn't. Skimming Dr. Beddoes' "Memories of Eighty Years" one finds the doctor trying to explain the Protestant religion to a mullah. "It seems a very decent sort of religion," said the mullah, in excellent English. But there were two objections. The first was that we "pay no honor to the prophet." The second was "your doctrine of the Trinity, which you will excuse my saying is bosh." We have got the word from the Turkish. It means nonsense. And "bosh lakirdie seullersen" means "you speak empty words."

Tenants Like Some Clerks.

"Of course," said the flat owner, "if all tenants were as careful of a rented house as they would be of their own, the cost of upkeep would be less and rents would be less, but many tenants never think that far. They say:

"'What's the use? Why should we break our backs looking after this stuff? Why shouldn't we wear it out and get more? It isn't on us; it's on the landlord.'

"They're like some men who work for the government and dawdle along on their jobs, give only half a day's work for one because they think the government's got plenty of money. They never stop to think that every dollar the government spends has to be raised from somewhere; that they themselves are taxed with the rest to pay their share of it."—New York Sun.

Counter Diplomacy.

"I think you will like this goods, madam," urged a salesman in a Euclid avenue shop. "It is just the thing for a stout, middle aged lady."

"Sir!" squealed the customer in a rage. The clerk saw his faux pas and recovered himself quickly.

"Pardon me," he smiled, "I mistook you for the young lady who was in here yesterday looking for something for her grandmother. Now that I look at you again, I see that this was an older person. Now, if you are buying for yourself, we have something over here that—"—Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

Doubtful Compliment.

WESTERN CANADA'S GOOD CROP PROSPECTS

YIELDS OF WHEAT WILL LIKELY BE 25 TO 30 BUSHELS PER ACRE.

In an interview with Mr. W. J. White, who has charge of the Canadian government immigration offices in the United States, and who has recently made an extended trip through the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta in Western Canada. He said that every point he visited he was met with the one report, universally good crops of wheat, oats and barley. There will this year be a much increased acreage over last year. Many farmers, who had but one hundred acres last year, have increased their cultivated and seeded acreage as much as fifty per cent. With the prospects as they are at present, this will mean from $12 to $15 additional wealth to each. He saw many large fields running from 300 to 1,000 acres in extent and it appeared to him that there was not an acre of this but would yield from 20 to 25 or 30 bushels of wheat per acre, while the oat prospects might safely be estimated at from 40 to 70 bushels per acre. In all parts of the west, whether it be Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, north and south, east and west, and in the districts where last year there was a partial failure of crops, the condition of all grain is universally good and claimed by most of the farmers to be from one to two weeks in advance of any year for the past ten or twelve years. It does not seem that there was a single foot of the ground that was properly seeded that would not produce.

There are those throughout western Canada who predict that there will be 200,000,000 bushels of wheat raised there this year, and if the present favorable conditions continue, there does not seem any reason why these prophesies should not come true. There is yet a possibility of hot winds reducing the quantity in some parts, but with the strongly rooted crops and the sufficiency of precipitation that the country has already been favored with, this probability is reduced to a minimum.

The prices of farm lands at the present time are holding steady and lands can probably still be purchased at the price set this spring, ranging from $15 to $20 per acre, but with a harvested crop, such as is expected, there is no reason why these same lands should not be worth from $20 to $25 per acre, with an almost absolute assurance that by next spring there will still be a further advance in prices.

Mr. White says that these lands are as cheap at today's figures with the country's proven worth as they were a few years ago at half the price when the general public had but a vague idea of the producing quality of western Canada lands.

The land agents at the different towns along the line of railway are very active. A large number of acres are turned over weekly to buyers from the different states in the south, where lands that produce no better are sold at from $150 to $200 per acre.

The homestead lands are becoming scarcer day by day and those who are unable to purchase, preferring to homestead, are directing their attention to the park acres lying in the northerly part of the central districts. It has been found that while these are somewhat more difficult to bring under the subjugation of the plow, the soil is fully as productive as in the districts farther south. They possess the advantage that the more open prairie areas do not possess; that there is on these lands an open acreage of from fifty to seventy per cent of the whole and the balance is made up of groves of poplar of fair size, which offer shelter for cattle, while the grasses are of splendid strength and plentiful, bringing about a more active stage of mixed farming than can be carried on in the more open districts to the south.

The emigration for the past year has been the greatest in the history of Canada and it is keeping up in record shape. The larger number of those, who will go this year will be those who will buy lands nearer the line of railways, preferring to pay a little higher price for good location than to go back from the line of railways some 40 or 50 miles to homestead.

Mr. White has visited the different agencies throughout the United States and he found that the correspondence at the various offices has largely increased, the number of callers is greater than ever.

Any one desiring information regarding western Canada should apply at once to the Canadian Government Agent nearest him for a copy of the "Last Best West."

Every township in Iowa will get its first portion of its proportionate share of the automobile tax collected under the new law shortly after the first day of August. State Treasurer Morrow will on that date make a record of all the money received under the provisions of the new law and he will then apportion it among the townships of the state. This money must be used entirely for good roads work. Eighty-five per cent of the total amount collected by the state will be distributed.

The special train carrying the Des Moines Jobbers arrived in Klemme right on schedule time last Thursday afternoon. In spite of the fact that many of our people were attending camp meeting at Garner, a large number turned out to welcome them. The Des Moines business men are a bunch of live ones, and this special trip no doubt will be the means of opening up pleasant business relations between the jobbers of the capital city and the retail merchants in the towns visited.

CORONATION OF KING IS BRILLIANT SPECTACLE

Solemn Ceremony Is Performed in Westminster Abbey in Presence of Distinguished Assemblage---Immense Throng Sees Royal Procession from Buckingham Palace.

London.—George V. was crowned king of Great Britain June 23 in Westminster Abbey, and the ceremony for which the empire had been so long preparing was performed with a brilliance never surpassed at any previous coronation in the historic old abbey. The gorgeous spectacle was witnessed by about 7,000 distinguished men and women, while massed in the streets were hundreds of thousands who took up the shout of "Long live King George" when the cannon at the Tower of London told them that the crown had been placed upon the brows of their sovereign.

Great Throngs in the Streets.

From the earliest hours of the morning the population of London and the hundreds of thousands of visitors had been moving toward the royal route from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey. As soon as the seats in the numerous stands were filled, gates were closed that kept out the rabble, and then the throngs tried to crowd into the streets adjoining the route. From pole to pole throughout the entire distance gay colored bunting was strung, and the whole city was streaming with flags.

Along the Mall and all the way from the palace to the abbey troops were standing, company upon company, British troops of every shade of color, living symbols of the countries and peoples over which the new king and emperor reigns. On every side bands were playing patriotic music, and the din of cheering was continuous and overwhelming.

Procession Fro mthe Palace.

As the hour for the coronation approached the waiting thousands first saw the arrival of the gentlemen appointed to act as ushers during the ceremony. These were led by the earl marshal, the duke of Norfolk. Then the nobility entitled to seats in the Abbey began to come. Most of the peers and peeresses rode in state coaches that have been used by their families for many years. These carriages, repainted and regilded. were drawn by four horses apiece. Each was accompanied by outriders and footmen in gorgeous liveries stood on the rail behind. Each peer as he passed was greeted with cheers and often with familiar greetings that set the crowds off in roars of laughter, for even the solemnity of the occasion could not restrain the irreverent humor of the cockneys.

Procession From the Palace.

Not all the nobility rode in coaches, however, for the king had permitted one violation of precedent and given permission for the use of automobiles by those who have discarded horses. This was done reluctantly, and there were not many motors cars in the long procession of vehicles.

The lord mayor and his suite, in their gorgeous robes and regalia, were the next to pass toward the Abbey.

King and Queen Appear.

Now the bells of many churches pealed out, and the people knew the king and queen were coming. From the moment their majesties emerged from Buckingham palace there was a continuous roar of cheers that accompanied them all the way to the Abbey. Their approach was heralded by the king's bargemaster and twelve watermen, wearing quaint medieval tunics, knee breeches and stockings, all scarlet, with the crown and badges emblazoned in gold on their breasts, and wearing low buckled shoes and black velvet caps. Immediately behind them came the closed carriages of the royal party, every one drawn by splendid horses gorgeously caparisoned. Through the windows of the great lumbering state coach the people could get a glimpse of the king and queen.

Following their majesties rode the household troops and especially picked military bodies. Field Marshal Viscount Kitchener was at the head of the headquarters staff, as he was at the coronation of King Edward. In this part of the procession, too, rode many Indian princes and maharajahs and potentates of England's widely scattered dominions. Their splendid robes glittered with jewels and they added much to the magnificence of the parade. But the man who, next to the king, received the loudest and warmest applause was Lord Roberts, for the people love "Bobs" and their affectionate greetings almost made the grizzled hero of a hundred campaigns blush.

King George and Queen Mary.

Arrival at the Abbey.

Waiting outside the west door of Westminster Abbey were the archbishops of Canterbury and York and a large number of bishops, and when the king and queen approached they first entered the church, followed immediately by the Prince of Wales and his suite. As the monarchs passed into the abbey the choir sang an anthem.

The first action of the coronation service, the presentation of the king to the people for recognition, is a survival of ancient Teutonic usage. Accompanied by the great officers of state, the archbishop of Canterbury went to each side of the theater in turn, saying: "Sirs, I here present unto you King George, the undoubted king of this realm; wherefore, all you who are come this day to do your homage, are you willing to do the same?" The king meanwhile stood up by his chair and turned to each side, and the people acclaimed him with cries of "God save King George."

Then followed the litany, the communion service and a short sermon preached by the archbishop of York, after which the oath was administered to the king by the archbishop of Canterbury.

The Anointing and Coronation.

King George now was divested of his crimson robes by the lord great chamberlain and seated himself in the chair of King Edward I., which contains the ancient "stone of destiny." The dean of Westminster brought from the altar the golden ampulla and spoon, and the archbishop anointed him on the head, the breasts and the palms of both hands, and blessed him. The king was next invested with the colobium sindonis of fine linen and the supertunica of cloth of gold, his heels were touched with the golden spurs and the sword of state was girded upon him, after which the armill and robe royal of cloth of gold were put upon him. In turn, then, his majesty was given the orb, the king's ring, the glove and the two scepters.

All was ready now for the supreme act. The archbishop placed St. Edward's crown upon the altar and delivered a short prayer, and then, supported by the other clergy, placed the crown upon the king's head. At that instant the trumpets sounded, the congregation shouted "Long live King George" and the peers and kings of arms put on their coronets.

The inthronization was a handsome part of the ceremonies. The king was lifted up into his throne by the archbishops, the bishops and certain peers, and all the great officers and those who bore the swords, the scepters and other regalia grouped themselves about the steps of the throne. Next the princes and peers did their homage, led by the archbishop of Canterbury and the prince of Wales. Each of these and the premier duke, marquis, earl, viscount and baron kissed the king upon the cheek.

The anointing and crowning of Queen Mary was a short and simple ceremony. Following the example of Queen Alexandra, she was anointed on the head only. She was invested with the ring, was crowned by the archbishop of York and received the scepter and the ivory rod with the dove.

Few Americans in the Abbey.

Of all the Americans who have been attracted to London by the festivities of the coronation season, only a very few were admitted to the Abbey. These included President Taft's special ambassador, John Hays Hammond, and Mrs. Hammond; Maj. Gen. Greely and Rear Admiral Vreeland, representing the army and navy, and the latter's secretary; Ambassador Whitelaw Reid and Mrs. Reid and the attaches and secretaries of the embassy, Pierpont Morgan and less than a score of American women who married English peers.

One fact connected with the coronation was the subject of some amused comment. This was that King George, who is quite the reverse of a giant, had selected four of the shortest knights of the garter to hold the golden canopy over him during the anointing. They were the earl of Cadogan, Lord Roberts, Lord Elgin and Lord Rosebery. These four peers were the only ones arrayed in the gorgeous robes of the order of the garter.

HIRAM CARPENTER'S WONDERFUL CURE OF PSORIASIS.

"I have been afflicted for twenty years with an obstinate skin disease, called by some M. D.'s. psoriasis, and others leprosy, commencing on my scalp; and in spite of all I could do, with the help of the most skilful doctors, it slowly but surely extended until a year ago this winter it covered my entire person in the form of dry scales. For the last three years I have been unable to do any labor, and suffering intensely all the time. Every morning there would be nearly a dustpanful of scales taken from the sheet on my bed, some of them half as large as the envelope containing this letter. In the latter part of winter my skin commenced cracking open. I tried everything, almost, that could be thought of, without any relief. The 12th of June I started West, in hopes I could reach the Hot Springs. I reached Detroit and was so low I thought I should have to go to the hospital, but finally got as far as Lansing, Mich., where I had a sister living. One Dr. —— treated me about two weeks, but did me no good. All thought I had but a short time to live. I earnestly prayed to die. Cracked through the skin all over my back, across my ribs, arms, hands, limbs; feet badly swollen; toe-nails came off; finger-nails dead and hard as a bone; hair dead, dry and lifeless as old straw. O my God! how I did suffer.

"My sister wouldn't give up; said, 'We will try Cuticura.' Some was applied to one hand and arm. Eureka! there was relief; stopped the terrible burning sensation from the word go. They immediately got Cuticura Resolvent, Ointment and Soap. I commenced by taking Cuticura Resolvent three times a day after meals; had a bath once a day, water about blood heat; used Cuticura Soap freely; applied Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. Result: returned to my home in just six weeks from the time I left, and my skin as smooth as this sheet of paper. Hiram E. Carpenter, Henderson, N. Y."

The above remarkable testimonial was written January 19, 1880, and is republished because of the permanency of the cure. Under date of April 22, 1910, Mr. Carpenter wrote from his present home, 610 Walnut St. So., Lansing, Mich.: "I have never suffered a return of the psoriasis and although many years have passed I have not forgotten the terrible suffering I endured before using the Cuticura Remedies."

WHERE AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE WAS WON

BY THOMAS WILSON

IT is generally conceded by historians that neither the sensational engagement at Bunker Hill, the significance of which was understood throughout the world, the overwhelming defeat of Burgoyne at Saratoga or any of the other engagements during that struggle qualed in results that of the siege nd surrender of Cornwallis at Yorkwn.

The campaign that led to the defeat the best of the British troops under able commander was one that was orked out to the highest degree of ilitary sense.

General Washington and Count de ochambeau met early in August at eathersville, Conn., and there they lked over the plans for the future. was almost determined to put the rench and American armies together nd make a concentrated attack upon e city of New York which was deended by Sir Henry Clinton, then ommander-in-chief of the British rces in this country.

It was intended that this attack hould be in the nature of a surprise nd, with this in view, the two armies were brought together at Dobb's erry and every preparation made to ll upon the upper part of Manhattan land. At the last minute there came ispatches from the south apprising e leaders of the American forces hat Lord Cornwallis had been conucting a very spirited campaign gainst General Lafayette who, with aron Steuben and Anthony Wayne, as directing the destinies of the ontinentals.

This news put a different light upon e situation, inasmuch as the planned mpaign upon New York was for the ery purpose of compelling Clinton to rder Cornwallis from the south to s support in holding Manhattan isnd. The plans carried exceedingly ell for it was evident that Clinton eard of the contemplated move gainst him and ordered Cornwallis make preparations to move to him. ornwallis therefore withdrew from e south, camped first at Portsmouth nd later moved to Yorktown where e lay, prepared to sail for New York.

At the same time as the news of ornwallis' movements were reported eneral Washington learned that ount de Grasse, with a fleet of some hirty ships, was sailing from the Vest Indies, leaving San Domingo on ugust 3, and was bound for the Chesapeake Bay.

Instantly the entire campaign was hanged to meet the new conditions nd while the "demonstration" against linton was not allowed to lax the ttack was not made. Instead instructions were hurriedly sent to Lafayette to et in communication with de rasse and, with what troops the latter could spare, to make every effort envelop Cornwallis by land and ea.

In the meantime the allied armies in ont of New York withdrew as quietly as possible leaving behind only a fficient number to keep up the prense of investment and the troops ere hurried toward Cornwallis.

September 9 saw Washington under ay and, accompanied by only Colonel umphrey, he rode 60 miles to Mount ernon, arriving there the same day. ount de Rochambeau arrived at lount Vernon the following evening nd the plans for the campaign were ne over.

Meanwhile Cornwallis had received dings of the arrival of the fleet of e Grasse, which reached Hampton oads about August 26, and also word hat the Continental army was bearing own upon him. He was quickly aroused from his dreams of security and he and his officers contemplated a number of plans for getting away but in each instance there were circumstances that forbid making the attempt and he contented himself with writing to Clinton to send him aid. Whether Clinton could not or would not comply will probably never be known, though after the war both officers indulged in accusations of each other, but the fact is that he did not and when the allied armies sailed into the harbor of York and camped upon the adjacent hills Cornwallis was completely trapped.

The story of the siege is familiar to every school boy, or at least it should be, so that I will give only the bare outlines of it. The active attack upon the British was begun October 6 by General Lincoln when he opened a parallel. Five days later Baron Steuben's division opened a second parallel. This brought the lines of the besiegers to within about 300 yards of the stronghold.

While the infantry was engaged in paralleling the artillery was hard at work and the bombardment was furious. Governor Nelson's residence in the town was thought to be the headquarters of Cornwallis and the doughty governor, himself leading in the attack by the artillery, not only ordered his men to fire upon his home but offered a prize of money for every ball that struck it. Whether the house was too far or whether the marksmen were bad its not known, but the house was little damaged and it stands today, a monument among monuments to the bravery and devotion of the American and French armies.

The most dramatic feature of the seige was the attempt to carry two redoubts. The task of carrying the redoubts was given to Lafayette and Baron de Viomenil. The latter's assault proved a disastrous one, for the British put up a stiff fight and though they were beaten the attackers left fully one-third of their number in the trench. Lafayette was more successful and his troops, led by Alexander Hamilton, who was the first to scale the parapet, swept everything before them, their losses being comparatively light.

The carrying of these two redoubts was the beginning of the end, for Cornwallis soon found that he could hold out no longer unless by needlessly sacrificing his men. It was with a heavy heart indeed that Cornwallis ordered a white flag to be displayed on October 17 and sent a note to Washington asking for terms of surrender.

The articles of capitulation were drawn and Cornwallis was invited to meet the American officers in the Moore house and sign them. This he did and on October 19 the British army, with colors cased and drums beating, marched out of Yorktown between two lines comprised of the American and French soldiers. Washington, with his staff was at the head of his army and Rochambeau, with his staff, at the head of his.

Cornwallis felt in no humor to meet the victors so he sent his aide, General O'Hara, with his sword and with the excuse that he was too ill to attend. Washington, too, stood upon his dignity and instead of himself receiving Cornwallis' sword he detailed General Lincoln to that duty.

It appears that when Sir Henry Clinton finally became convinced that Cornwallis was in grave danger he decided to send help and so on October 19, the very day that Cornwallis surrendered, he sent an army of 7,000 men to him. The troops, on 35 ships, arrived at Yorktown five days later but finding that it was too late turned back to New York.

DRAINAGE IN IOWA

LAND OWNERS OF STATE ARE SPENDING LARGE SUMS FOR INCREASE OF PRODUCTION

THIRTY COUNTIES ARE WET

The Millions That Will Be Added to the Wealth of the State Through the Drainage of These Lands Is Hard to Estimate.

With the absolute certainty of manifold returns in the future Iowa farmers are spending for the drainage of their swamp lands three-quarters as much money as the government is paying to build the Panama canal, millions being required before the work is completed and the thirty wet counties are drained. The millions that will be added to the wealth of the state through the drainage of these rich farm lands can only be estimated in millions. The reclamation was begun in 1904 and thus far nearly $8,000,000 has been spent on public drainage ditches in fourteen out of the thirty counties in which the work is projected. In the remaining sixteen counties some $7,000,000 more will be expended. So that 3,000,000 acres of farms will be improved at an average cost of $5 an acre. The result is the throwing open to cultivation of swamp and flood land which will be hereafter worth from $75 to $200 an acre. The estimated total cost of the public drainage ditches is $60,000,000. These figures are supplied by the state conservation board, who calculate that individual owners will spend $247,000,000 more out of their own pockets in draining wet lands.

By the Iowa plan large open drains are first built, then tiled lateral ditches leading to them, and the small tiled drains under individual farms—some of the latter running within four rods of one another, and as small as four inches in diameter. In many cases farmers have paid from $25 to $75 an acre to tile and drain their farms into the public drains. Where crops have been good the system has been rapidly extended, for the farmers are aware that as fast as the handicap of surplus water is thrown off their lands are greatly increased in productivity. There are thirty "wet counties" in Iowa, in twenty of which practically the entire area must be drained, while in the remaining ten only half the area needs help.

COURAGE AND BLUFF

NEW YORKER MADE UP OF FIFTY-SEVEN VARIETIES.

Southern Society Woman's Estimate of the Average Man and Woman That Make up Population of Gotham.

"New Yorkers are made up of fifty-seven varieties of courage and just a dash of bluff."

That is Miss Scota Sorin's estimate of the men and women who so proudly sign New York after their names when traveling. Miss Sorin, a southern society woman and author, often has visited this city.

"You see," this young woman said, "my opinion of the people of this great little world of its own has been formed from studies made for some time, and whenever I think of a New Yorker—that is a person who has come to the city to make a livelihood and has won out and made good—I can only picture a creature of the most wonderful bravery in the world, for to merely exist, let alone work, in this place, one must have unlimited courage.

"In a great place like New York no slipshod work is permitted, and when one contemplates the numbers of young men and women who come here to work every year, without experience, without talent, and with a good will to do their best it is a courage almost beyond my understanding. They are entering fields of work and endeavor which are now nearly filled with experienced people; they are entering in the greatest competition imaginable, that of winning bread in a big, overcrowded city, in which every one is interested in himself and little thought is given to the other person.

"But the dear New Yorkers are the funniest bluffers in the world. They are not maliciously so, but in every business, in every home, in all pleasures, there is just a little dash of bluff that adds a piquancy that you don't find in other people. They do know a good deal in many ways, but they always want one to think that they know just a trifle more.

"The bluff that always amuses me is the love of the New Yorker for his United States. Come to the point, what does he know about his United States? Not a thing, except what he has read and heard, for a New Yorker won't travel over his own country; but the moment he has the money he will sail for Europe, just as the man out west or in the smaller city will come to New York when he can afford it."

Never leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed and cannot be obtained when on board the cars or steamships. For sale by all dealers.

Traveling Man's Tale.

"I had a strange experience with an intoxicated man in a telegraph office down state the other day," says a traveling man. "Was in a hurry to send a message myself, but this fellow was leaning against the receiver's window as if he was camped there for the night. He muttered a lot of fool stuff to the man behind the screen, but I couldn't hear what it was. Finally I got impatient and shoved my message over his shoulder. At the same time I saw the scrawl this souse was endeavoring to get on the wire. It was addressed to somebody in New Orleans.

"He fumbled in his pocket, produced 62 cents in small change, and started away. 'Hold on,' the clerk said; 'this isn't enough. It will cost you $1.40 to send this to New Orleans.'

"'A' right, o' man,' waved the inebriate airily. 'That's all I got with me right now. Just send it as far as you can f'r th' money!'"

For summer diarrhoea in children always give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, and a speedy cure is certain. For sale by all dealers.

hen into the room came a stalwart Quaker.

Has the young man recovered, y?" he asked.

Yes, father," she said. Harry sat with an effort.

I don't know how to thank you, " he said. "It was lucky that I t into the ditch right in front of r house."

Vith the word "lucky" he looked ningly at Lucy, but that self-pos-ed maiden did not seem to catch double meaning.

He reviewed in his mind the events the days since the accident. Pleas-t thoughts, those, for a young man. ey take his mind off the immediate rroundings, however.

Automatically he whirled around other corner—then began doing ings with the brake, but too late. Twenty yards before him approached other auto. In it sat a couple ob-ious to their danger. There was a ash and a crash, a shriek and a ll. And then the three people picked emselves up.

The man in the other auto leaped to his feet first and shook his fists at Harry. The lady gathered her hair into a coil again and exclaimed:

"My hat! My beautiful hat!"

Harry followed the direction of her glance, and saw the object of her dismay. A handsome hat of yellow straw, adorned with large red flowers, was hopelessly entangled in the steering gear of his machine.

He extricated it—or what he could of it—and offered it to her. But with a tearful exclamation of despair she refused it.

"Scoundrel!" shouted her friend. "Vy do you go running around killing peeples, und ruining deir hats?"

"My dear count!" cried the lady. "Not so loud!"

But the count was not to be calmed. In spite of Harry's efforts to explain matters, he continued his staccato expressions of wrath and vengeance, until, giving up the idea of straightening matters out, Harry popped into his own machine, skilfully ran past the other auto, and resumed his homeward ride. In a moment the count and the lady were in their seat again, the count wheeled his machine about, and the pursuit began. By some deft turnings and twistings Harry managed to evade them and at last reached home.

He dashed into the house, eager to change his clothes and be ready to go to the station to meet Mr. Medders and Lucy. "Pigeon" Williams met him. Pigeon, as he was affectionately called, was a young man who tried his best to be a chum of Harry—for the reason that he was unusually attracted by Harry's sister Carolyn. It was natural that Pigeon should be at Swifton's that morning. He wanted to help Harry have things ready to entertain Lucy and her father, and besides he thought it would cheer Carolyn up to see one of her old friends on her own arrival.

"Is Carolyn here?" Harry asked, as he came in.

"Sure," replied Pigeon. "She got here half an hour ago—mad as the dickens because you didn't meet her at the train. Why didn't you? If I'd known you weren't going to, of course I could have gone."

"I meant to," Harry replied. "But I had a bit of a smash-up in the park."

"Smash-up? Again?"

"Nothing that amounted to much. Head-on bump into one of these runabout things—run about a day and then blow up. German dignitary in it, with a dashing brunette. No wonder he couldn't see me coming. He had to look at her."

"Didn't hurt them?"

"No. Just knocked the breath out of all of us. And her hat fell off, and my machine chewed it up. Look."

Harry dug into his pocket and produced the brim of the lady's hat, with a trailing string of red poppies. Pigeon laughed.

"Keep it for a souvenir?" he asked.

"Don't know. The German fellow got mad, and I came away in such a hurry I forgot what I was doing. Stuck the thing in my pocket absentmindedly, I guess."

"He got mad! No wonder."

"I think he's real peeved. When I made my get-away he got his old cook stove into action and tried to follow me. But I escaped."

Harry went into his room and Pigeon sat down.

"How's Carolyn looking?" Harry called to him.

"Fine and dandy. Say, Harry," Pigeon went on, maliciously, "the fellows have it in for you."

"In for me! Why?" asked Harry, in muffled tones, tugging at a collar button.

"They say you're a quitter. You used to be strong for stag parties, and all that, and now you don't care for anything but the country—and a country girl."

"That so?" Harry said, coming out. "Well, let 'em say what they please. I'm for the country—that's where you go for pure air, green fields, natural flowers, and natural girls. Pigeon, I'm through with all this bachelor stuff. No more of the stag suppers and poker parties for yours truly. I'm ready to quit and be good—if my plans work."

"I think you're dead right, Harry," Pigeon replied, solemnly, "judging from my own experience. There's nothing in this bachelor life."

"Your experience? Here, Methuselah! Take a cigar. Why, you're not even old enough to use a safety razor, boy!"

Pigeon blushed boyishly and felt of his tender mustache with an embarrassedly guilty expression.

"You're always rubbing it in on a fellow," he complained.

CHAPTER II.

Harry laughed sarcastically, and in the midst of his laugh Carolyn dashed into the room. A jolly, romping girl, just at the age when a girl doesn't know whether to keep on being a girl or to consider herself a woman, she paused for a moment at sight of Pigeon, then lost her formality and ran to Harry to greet him.

"Isn't she some girl, though?" Harry cried to Pigeon, with his arms around his sister. "Have to keep my eyes on you, from now on, young lady! You're getting to be too big and pretty."

"I'm not too big!" pouted Carolyn.

"Not a bit—and you couldn't be too pretty," Pigeon earnestly declared.

"I'll have to keep my eye on you, Harry," Carolyn giggled. "Wait until Lucy comes. Do you call her 'thee?'"

"I haven't turned into a whole Quaker yet," Harry answered. "Now you run along and see that this house looks like something."

"You'd better get some one to expurgate this den of yours," Carolyn flashed at him as she left the room. "Lucy and her father may be shocked at some of the things here."

"I'd like to know what there is in here to shock anyone," Harry said to Pigeon.

"Oh, nothing much," Pigeon chuckled. "But maybe that picture of the ballet girl and that figure of the Venus de Milo, and some of the other highly decorative effects are not quite what Lucy has at home."

"Why, those are works of art."

"Here's General Blazes to see you, Harry," called Carolyn from the hallway.

"Come right in, general!" Harry said. General Blazes, pompous, irascible and dignified, was Harry's attorney in several matters having to do with the estate left him by his father. He entered the room as gravely and as impressively as though he were approaching the bench of the United States Supreme court, and said:

"Good morning, boy. Here"—taking a packet from his inside pocket—"here are the deeds, all duly signed and sealed. I believe you will need no further advice from me."

"Thank you, general," Harry said, taking the documents. "That's mighty good of you. I appreciate your kindness in bringing them in yourself."

"No trouble at all, I assure you. I was passing on my way to my offices."

"Won't you have a little nip of something to strengthen you for the walk?"

"No, thank you. I am rather in haste. I am slightly worried about Mrs. Blazes."

"Worried? Why, I trust she is not ill."

"Not at all. She left early today, to shop for a sick friend."

"Shopping for a sick friend," chuckled Harry. "Are they having special sales of sick friends?"

The general ignored the jest, as, indeed, he ignored all jests.

"After that," he continued, "she was going to attend a luncheon where the ladies were to meet this Count von Fitz, who is such a social lion now."

"I've heard of him."

"Well," the general remarked, "I am dallying here when I should be hastening on. My wife should have been at home by this time. By the way, I don't believe you have met Mrs. Blazes."

"I met two of your wives at different times," Harry smiled; for the matrimonial experiments of the general were subjects of much comment.

"She's not one of the two," the general replied. "They left me by way of Reno long ago. I'm not a bam dit sorry."

Harry Swifton.

Harry laughed again, for when the general became excited it was his habit to get his words twisted, sometimes with ludicrous effect.

The general regarded Harry's amusement with calm disapproval.

"My boy," he said, dropping his hand on Harry's shoulder, "let me give you one bit of good advice—not legal. When you marry for the third time—"

"But I haven't married my first yet," Harry protested.

"You will, however. And when you marry for the third time, don't marry a young, beautiful woman."

"Don't?"

"No. Don't. Half the time she's have you making a fam dool of yourself."

Having delivered himself of this sage observation, the general stalked to the door, turned and bade Harry farewell, and started out, to bump against a woe-begone person, who was coming in at the same moment.

"I—I beg your pardon, humbly!" exclaimed the newcomer, in a thin, high, weepy voice.

"Br-r-r-r!" grumbled the general, brushing by him.

The newcomer glided in. His long, dank hair hung down to his collar, his white, thin hands plucked with melancholy grace at the roycroft tie he was wearing, and his eyes, which were set deep in his head, gleamed weirdly.

"Alas!" he said, "it is you!"

"You're a good guesser, Primmer," Harry said, grasping his hand. "I'm glad you could come to see us."

Socrates Primmer, a distant cousin of Lucy, and a school teacher who considered himself a poet, had accepted Harry's off-hand invitation to come and visit him at the same time as Lucy and her father were to come. Harry had not dreamed that Primmer would come, for he knew Primmer had long considered himself a suitor for the hand of the demure Quakeress. Nevertheless, here he was, and in the hand that was not adjusting his necktie was held a large hatbox, labeled, "Mlle. Daphne."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

How Oyster Islands Are Formed.

Oyster islands, similar to those formed of coral, are found in several parts of the world. The islands in Newport river and Beaufort Harbor, North Carolina, says a writer in the Century Path Magazine, have been discovered to have as base a reef to which the spawn were attached and above this layer upon layer of oysters, vegetable growth, and debris brought by the action of the waves and winds, all of which finally grows high enough to rise above the surface of the water. This growth is exactly analogous to that of the coral islands of the Pacific.

The islands near the mouth of the River Tagus in Portugal are said to have been built up in this way also. Here, where there is such a quantity of oysters that 100 million a year would scarcely be missed if they were removed, the expanse of water just beyond the river's mouth is dotted with oyster islands. As in the case of the coral reefs, which on the seaward side may be covered with living, growing coral, live oysters thrive in the same waters where the accumulation of dead generations has served to form the islands.

Conscience.

The trouble with the still small voice is that it generally permits itself to be still until there arises the danger of discovery.

HEART RIGHT.
When He Quit Coffee.

Life Insurance Companies will not insure a man suffering from heart trouble.

The reason is obvious.

This is a serious matter to the husband or father who is solicitous for the future of his dear ones. Often the heart trouble is caused by an unexpected thing and can be corrected if taken in time and properly treated. A man in Colorado writes:

"I was a great coffee drinker for many years, and was not aware of the injurious effects of the habit till I became a practical invalid, suffering from heart trouble, indigestion and nervousness to an extent that made mo wretchedly miserable myself and a nuisance to those who witnessed my sufferings.

"I continued to drink coffee, however, not suspecting that it was the cause of my ill-health, till on applying for life insurance I was rejected on account of the trouble with my heart. Then I became alarmed. I found that leaving off coffee helped me quickly, so I quit it altogether and having been attracted by the advertisements of Postum I began its use.

"The change in my condition was remarkable. All my ailments vanished. My digestion was completely restored, my nervousness disappeared, and, most important of all, my heart steadied down and became normal, and on a second examination I was accepted by the Life Insurance Co. Quitting coffee and using Postum worked the change." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek., Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

A few fall elections will show us if the breeze is still blowing democratic.

Mr. Bryan, a bit peevish at the turn of events, declares that it is his sacred duty to advise the democratic party, which unregenerate organization regards it as a constitutional privilege to disregard his advice.

HELPS HIS FALLEN BROTHERS

His "Boys" Call Augustus E. Vaughan the "General Adviser Without Pay."

When a man loves to live he usually can go among men who care little whether they live or not and do good. Such a man is Augustus E. Vaughan, immaculate of dress and of heart, venerable in years and usefulness, whom one may see almost any day either on Boston Common or at the Young Men's Christian Union.

His specialty is helping his fallen and discouraged brother, whether he be a cigarette-smoking boy or a rum-sodden and disheartened derelict of a man. His creed is cheerfulness and his passion is books.

Often one may see him, tall and straight, faultlessly attired in a frock coat, long and carefully trimmed white locks, standing with or sitting beside some ragged and unkempt victim of circumstances who has sought the only place where the police will not tell him to move on, the Common, and then one is sure to be struck by the contrast. Many a man he has met there has later become as clean of body and heart as himself, and all through his infectious good nature and brotherly comraderie.

Among the younger men with whom this old-young man of 75 unceasingly labors he is known as "the General Adviser Without Pay," and he is as interested in their ambitions as they can be, and so youthful is he in their presence that he is always one of them.

Mr. Vaughan is not engaged in active business this year, but he comes to Boston every day, rain or shine, to talk with his "boys," as he calls them. Some of these have never before known a real friend. He is highly educated, and counts among his friends many college presidents and professors.

He was born in Middleboro, nearly 75 years ago, and traces his lineage back to Peregrine White of Mayflower fame.

"I love to live," said he to me, "and I want to help 'the boys' to enjoy living, too."

A Brave Regiment.

Few regiments, says the New York Evening Post, have a better record for heroism than the 24th infantry, colored. During the war in Cuba the colonel of this regiment was ordered to detail sixty men, to replace as many nurses who had contracted yellow fever in the quarantine hospital.

The colonel, recognizing the peculiar work to be performed by his men who would go to the yellow-fever camps, ordered out his regiment in line, and said to them:

"Soldiers of the 24th, I want 60 volunteers to help nurse your white comrades who are suffering with yellow fever.

He commanded, "Volunteers, three paces to the front! March!"

Every man of that line stepped to the front.

But wait! Mark well the sequel to such Christian heroism. It was only a short time before word came to the colonel that half of his men who had volunteered to nurse their white comrades had been taken down with yellow fever. A number of them had died of that terrible disease, and 30 more nurses were wanted to take their places.

Again the colonel called out his black soldiers in line. He told them what had happened, and again he commanded:

"Volunteers, three paces to the front! March!"

And again every man of that line stepped to the front.

Big Hats Worn to Cover Bald Spots.

According to a recent arrival from London, the New Yorkers who jam a hat down over their eyes and consider it smart merely to have it several sizes too large mistake the object of the recent London fashion of having the hats so much larger than they used to be.

"The smart dressers in London," observed this close student of men's dress, "get a hat two or three sizes larger than they were in the habit of wearing and put it as far back on the head as possible. The object in that is to conceal the bald spot that so many men have just at the back of the head under the brim of the hat. It only needs a trifling adjustment of the hat by bringing it down over the back of the head to hide this. So two-thirds of the men one sees in London are going through the streets with their hats far back on their heads and covering the bald spots in the back. Here the large hats are merely drawn down over the head and no useful purpose is served by the increased size."—New York Sun.

MADE THE EAGLE SCREAM

Klemme's Celebration of the Nation's Birthday Was a Grand Success.

Klemme's big Fourth of July celebration was a great success in every way. The weather was ideal from an ice cream and lemonade standpoint, the thermometer registering 105 in the shade according to report. People began to arrive early in the morning and by the time the program started a good sized crowd was here. The first thing on the program was

The Big Industrial Parade

which was one of the best features of the day's program. In this matter Klemme kept up her reputation for never doing things by halves. Most of the business places were represented by floats and every one of them is deserving of special mention in this article, only lack of time and space prohibits. The parade was headed by the Marshal of the Day mounted, followed by our city postmaster as Uncle Sam. Then came the Klemme Band followed by floats and decorated automobiles. It was one of the best industrial parades we have ever witnessed in a small town. After the parade came the given by the Merriams, which was well received and which called forth much deserved applause. Then the band rendered a concert and the moving picture shows and street games served to interest the people until the dinner hour.

First Free Act

In the afternoon, after the second free act by the Merriams came between Garner and Klemme, which soon resolved itself into a farce as far as the national pastime is concerned, as the Garner boys were outclassed. The score was something like 20 to 3 in favor of Klemme. The Garner boys disported themselves in a gentlemanly manner but did not put up a very classy article of ball. After the ball game the people were entertained to a show in the airdome and by moving pictures, etc., until supper time.

In the evening came another band concert, a free trapeze and upside-down act by Billy Merriam, show in the airdome, a dance in the opera house, etc. Last on the program came the fireworks. The display was good and was enjoyed by all.

Klemme did herself proud in entertaining the large crowd, and a more orderly crowd of people could not be found. Everybody was good natured, but rowdyism was mostly conspicuous by its absence.

There were the usual stands, ball and cane racks, etc. etc., for the amusement of the younger element and to help them spend their Fourth of July money.

We have heard of no accidents or fights of any consequence and we can all vote July 4th, 1911, in Klemme, a grand success—and everybody wants it to rain.

AT REST

The sympathy of the whole community goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Pavey who have again been called upon to part with an infant daughter, which was born to them on Wednesday, June 28th. The little one lived only three days, passing peacefully away on Saturday evening, July 1st. Funeral services were held from the English Methodist church on Monday, July 3rd, at three o'clock, Rev. Zabilka officiating, and interment was made in the Klemme cemetery. Words of sympathy seem empty in such cases, but after all, there is consolation in knowing that the little one is at rest in the arms of Jesus, and will never know sorrow or pain.

Attorney General Urges States To Combine in Rate Attack

AT MEETING IN SALT LAKE

Charges That Express Rates Have Increased From Ten To Forty Per Cent During the Past Ten Years.

Des Moines.—In a speech delivered in Salt Lake City to the attorney generals of the country, assembled in annual convention, Attorney General George Cosson urges the states to combine forces in a general attack upon express rates, which he asserts are excessive and unjust.

He declares that the task of prying into the business and operation of an express company is a task which bewilders and confuses. Detailed information must be had, he says, and this can best be secured by co-operation of the states, working with the courts, railway commissions and the interstate commerce commission.

He avers that the express companies have long been enjoying a monopoly, have stifled competition and have increased rates without regard for the middleman. He asserts that monstrous salaries are being paid officers of the companies and that enormous profits, "excessive," he says, are being realized.

He says also that the companies, when any state seeks to probe their business and reduce rates "complain bitterly and ironically of any action taken by the states."

He charges that within the past ten years the express companies have increased the state rates from 10 per cent to 40 per cent.

He asserts that while the railway companies, bowing to the demands of the people for lower rates, have done a little towards meeting the demands of the public, not much can be expected of the express companies along this line.

"It is not the history of public monopolies to voluntarily relinquish their unjust gains," he states, "and the intercorporate relationship, and the other matters referred to make it very improbable that anything may be expected from the express companies."

Hence he recommends joint action by the states, in one long general attack and probe into the express company business, which reminds him every time he tackles it, he says, of the words of St. Paul: "Behold, I show you a mystery."

Van Duyn Will Take Hand in Strike.

State Labor Commissioner Van Duyn has been called to Dubuque to take a hand in the lockout of the painters, tinners and plumbers, which has been in progress there for some little time. He will leave sometime during the present week to use his office in an effort to adjust the differences between the employers and the workmen.

The trouble started when the painters demanded that the masters give the man increase of 5 cents per hour in their wages. The master painters refused to make the concession. The painters insisted and they were locked out by the employers. Following them the tinners and plumbers were locked out. The situation, according to advices received by Commissioner Van Duyn is critical.

Under New Rulers.

The State College for the Blind, located at Vinton, has ceased to be under the jurisdiction of the state board of control and will become the ward of the state board of education. The law providing for this change was passed by the last general assembly.

The College of the Blind has always been considered more of an educational than a charitable institution, and for this reason there has gradually grown up a sentiment in favor of placing the college under the control of the educational board.

Calls for Mine Reports.

Chief State Mine Inspector Sweeney has called on all mine operators for their annual report on the coal output in Iowa, all statistics pertaining to mining for the past year and also for a complete report on the number of mining accidents in Iowa during the year. The report will be compiled during the winter months.

Cosson Gets Office.

Attorney General George Cosson was elected secretary-treasurer of the National Attorney Generals association, which organization has just concluded its annual convention in Salt Lake City. Attorney General Cosson was one of the six attorney generals who delivered addresses before the convention.

DAIRIES MUST CLEAN HOUSE

Required to Observe Sanitary Law Barney Serves Notice That He Will Refuse Many Licenses.

Des Moines.—Trouble with milk dealers who seek a license under the new law without first complying with the provisions of the law requiring strictly sanitary conditions in all dairies is being experienced by W. B. Barney, state dairy and food commissioner.

This feature of the new act is overlooked by some dairymen. Already the commissioner has been forced to hold up several applications for licenses because the dairy of the applicant, in the opinion of the commissioner, was not as clean and sanitary as it should be.

"After July 4, every unclean dairy will be a reflection upon this department and its judgment," said Commissioner Barney. "The law states that licenses shall be issued only to those who operate clean, sanitary dairies. If a man holding a license does not have such a dairy it will be evident that this department is not enforcing the law.

"Of course, this department can revoke any license after it has been issued, for a good and just cause, but I believe that no license at all should be issued to anyone on a bare promise to clean up. I want to see the clean dairy first, then I will issue the license."

The same law fixes a heavy fine for any person selling milk without a license after July 4, so between a heavy fine and no license, the dairy and food department officials expect a general clean-up of the dairies which have heretofore been run without the strictest regard for cleanliness.

Minors in Pool Rooms.

Young men not of age must stay out of pool rooms, they must not play there, they must not loaf there and they cannot hold jobs in such places. This is the ruling of the attorney general's office in an informal opinion requested by A. A. Smith of Linn Grove. He asked half a dozen questions, all of which are answered in the negative. Below are given the questions with the answers of the law department of the state:

"Can minors play in pool rooms?" "No."

"Can minors sit around pool rooms if not playing?" "No."

"Can card games for drinks and lunches be played in pool rooms?" "No."

"Can pool rooms be operated on Sunday?" "No more than other business."

"Can minors be employed in pool and billiard rooms?" "No."

All the answers apply to billiard rooms as well as pool halls.

After Stock Food People.

Condimental stock food companies are being notified by Commissioner Barney, of the food and dairy department, that they must pay the $100 state license for the privilege of doing business in Iowa not later than July 15th. He says there has always been more or less trouble with these concerns, as many of them absolutely refuse to pay the fee. They continue to sell in the state, but are losing ground because several dealers who have sold their products have been prosecuted for violation of the state law. Last year thirty-five companies paid the license. Nearly sixty companies sell their products to Iowa dealers. Commissioner Barney will this year start proceedings against the manufacturers as well as against dealers.

Van Duyn Is Indorsed.

E. W. Van Duyn, state labor commissioner, and one of the candidates for the nomination for secretary of state at the primaries next June, received the indorsement of the Des Moines Building Trades council at the meeting of the labor body.

The action of the council makes Mr. Van Duyn's candidacy an assured fact, the labor commissioner declaring the prospects are that he will receive the united support of the laboring men of Iowa.

Others who seek the office are E. D. Chassell, state binder; State Senator W. S. Allen of Fairfield, and C. R. Benedict of Harlan, the veteran chief clerk of the house.

Commissioners to Iowa Falls.

Chairman Ketchum, of the state railroad commission and Thomas Watters of the department have gone to Iowa Falls to inspect the new interlocking plant of the Illinois Central. The plant is located at the junction of the Illinois Central and the new Rock Island line.

New Insurance Company.

The American Druggist Fire Insurance company, of Cincinnati can now lawfully do business in Iowa. State Auditor Bleakly issued the necessary license to the company. It will begin operations in Iowa at once.

FOUR CHOICE RECIPES

HOW TO MAKE A CARROT PUDDING THAT IS DELICIOUS.

Full Instructions for the Concoction of Chocolate Creams, Baking Powder Biscuits and Rye Gems.

Carrot Pudding.—Boil sound carrots until tender enough to mash to a pulp, mix three-quarters of a pound of this with half a pound of bread crumbs, four ounces of suet minced finely, one-quarter pound of stoned raisins, one-quarter pound of currants, three ounces of sugar, three eggs, one-quarter nutmeg grated, and add sufficient milk to make the consistency of the mixture a thick batter. It may be boiled or baked. If to be boiled, put the mixture into a buttered basin, tie it down with a cloth, and boil for two and one-half hours; if it is to be baked, put it into a deep pie dish, and bake for nearly an hour; turn it out of the dish and strew sifted sugar over it when serving.

Chocolate Creams.—Take three ounces of the best arrowroot, mix it with about three-quarters pint of water, till it is a smooth cream. Put it into a lined saucepan, add one pound of white sugar, and boil for about ten minutes, stirring all the while, then take it from the fire and stir until it begins to cool and set. Flavor with essence of vanilla and roll into litle balls, first buttering the palms. Have some chocolate melted over hot water and dip each ball in this, using an ordinary hatpin to hold the ball. Lay each separately on a buttered paper or buttered marble slab to cool.

Baking Powder Biscuits.—Mix and sift twice two cupfuls of flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Work in two tablespoonfuls of butter with tips of fingers and add gradually three-fourths of a cupful of milk, mixing quickly with a caseknife. Cut out and bake in a quick oven.

Rye Gems.—Mix and sift one cupful of rye flour, one cupful of bread flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt ond five teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add two eggs well beaten, one cupful of milk and two tablespoonfuls of molasses. Beat thoroughly, fill hot buttered gem pans two-thirds full of the mixture and bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven.

When making sweet croquettes add a little sugar to the crumbs in which the croquettes are to be rolled.

Celery can be much improved by soaking it for an hour in ice cold water in which a lemon has been squeezed.

Scratches on polished wood, if not too deep, can be removed by rubbing gently with fine sandpaper and then with a mixture of olive oil and vinegar.

If you desire to serve a baked fish whole, and have it stand upright on the platter, put a carrot inside the fish before cooking and it will remain in position.

When making lemonade one of the lemons may be peeled and run through a meat chopper with a small piece of the peel. This will give the lemonade a delightful piquant flavor.

Housekeeping.

It is no longer fashionable not to know on which side the bread is buttered or how to cook a potato. The intelligent woman of today is scientifically domesticated. She can meet her own cook without flinching, and can, moreover, give that autocrat "points" on culinary matters.

Sweet Milk and Soda.

Many cooks look on in horror if you use soda in sweet milk, but in this recipe for devil's food it can be used successfully: One-half cup sweet milk, three-fourths cup grated chocolate, one-half cup brown sugar. Put this on stove and let come to a boil, then pour it over one-half cup butter. Let this cool, then add one cup brown sugar and one-half cup sweet milk, two well beaten eggs and 2½ cups sifted flour. Now add one level teaspoon of soda, dissolved in hot water. Bake 90 minutes.

Marron Dumplings for Soup.

Grate the crust of a breakfast roll and break the remainder into crumbs; soak these in cold milk; drain, and add two ounces of flour, chop up half a pound of beef marrow freed from skin and sinews. Beat up the yolks of two eggs, mix all together thoroughly. If too moist add some of the grated crumbs, salt and pepper to taste. Form into small, round dumplings, boil them in the soup for half an hour before serving.

NO CHANCE TO COMMIT SUICIDE.

"Officer, there is a man in that flat who is trying to cut his throat."

"Don't worry about it; there isn't room for him to do it."

Heathen Nations Invent Nothing.

Bishop Thoburn, who has been a missionary in India for fifty years, and knows India better than any other living American, says: "If you visit the patent office at Washington you will see six hundred improvements on the plow. India has not invented one improvement on the toothpick in two thousand years. The nations without God have no inventive faculty. They are almost universally the savage, unenlightened nations of the earth."

Another Terrible Case of Gravel Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Charles Understein, 50 W. 44th St., Chicago, Ill., says: "Kidney trouble ran me down from 196 to 136 pounds and I was a shadow of my former self.

Oh! how I suffered. I became so bad the doctors said my left side was paralyzed. I could not walk without assistance. I grew worse and went to a hospital, but was not helped. My friends all thought I would die. Three weeks after I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills I passed a gravel stone as big as a pea. At intervals the stones kept passing from me. I passed eleven in one day. Doan's Kidney Pills finally cured me. My health returned and I have had no kidney trouble since."

Shocking.

Miss D., a teacher of unquestioned propriety in all its branches, was in the throes of commencement, and to the best of her ability was entertaining some young men—the suitors of her fair pupils. They conversed on some beautiful flowers in the drawing room. "Yes," exclaimed the old lady; "but if you think these are pretty, you just ought to go upstairs and look in the bath tubs of the girls' dormitories. They are just full of American beauties!"

ordered materials are to have an ense vogue this summer, and they already seen in abundance in the ps. The veilings, chiffons and cotton textures respond most beautifully hese highly ornamental bands, for goods, while needing some trimg or other, are hard to be suited garnitures. The bands now en at one side or both of the goods gest striped satin ribbons, Spanish and the odd arabesques of In- decorations, and some of the borings show a riot of the richest col- Again, threads of black or a heavy k band will be run along the most icate tints, these giving the maials a very Frenchy look.

long with these handsome new gs there are counters and coun- of thin textiles all of which have greatly reduced, as they belong the winter supplies and do not w the latest touches. Nevertheless, these bargain goods are most deable, as it is an easy enough matter supply the effect of a band of ribn, satin or velvet, and in point of ght and coloring they do not in the st suggest cold weather materials. Of course the between-season gown ls for a new hat, and even with winter one headgear must be htened now to seem in accordance h prevailing tastes. So here are ring hats with us, and such spring ts—high crowned, of course, brilnt straws and trimmed always with me dashing fancy plume or other t goes up to enormous heights. ose who prefer satin or silk hats o find them everywhere, and as it quite the thing to make these of e color and trim them with anher it is possible to use up many s of home material if the hats can e turned out by home sewers. On a atin shape of gun metal gray a vivid lue ribbon was massed so as to hide he entire crown and shape a vast ow at the back. Black and white ffects in the satin and silk hats are also much seen and surely nothing could be smarter than this combination, even though it involves a black and white effect to a certain extent all through the get-up.

Our illustration shows a kimono waist and princess skirt, the two details showing admirably together in a pretty gray veiling and moire silk in a matching color. With these materials white porcelain beads are used effectively.

The bodice begins with a closely fitting kimono waist of the moire, finished at the neck with a round yoke of the veiling, beaded over. Two crossed bib pieces of the veiling cover the lower part of the bodice back and front, these running up to the yoke band in sharp beaded points. Straight bands of the beaded veiling form the cuffs and the narrow folded belt is of the moire.

In the deep foot band of the gathered skirt a novel touch is given through the shaping of the upper line, the former straightness of such bands being considered now a little unbecoming to any but the slimmest and most youthful figures. This model as it stands is undesirable for anything but a very dressy frock, but such materials as mousseline and organdy may be used for it with some variation of the style of trimming. Veiling, chiffon and cashmere, or a thin silk with some pretty wool are other adaptable materials.

FOR BRIDE'S COIFFURE

Green leaves form the foundation of this pretty hair wreath for a bride's coiffure, between which the orange blossoms are daintily arranged.

The second illustration, showing a pretty lace cap of semi-Dutch persuasion is fashioned on fine silk-covered wire, lined with chiffon; a string of large pearl beads is drawn loosely round, ending in a large cabuchon of pearl heads, which fastens the graceful plume at left side, the stem of which is also ornamented with graduated pearl beads.

FOR THE GIRL WHO CAMPS

Some Things That Will Add to the Pleasure of the Summer Outing.

Take along a good supply of stories to tell. Around the campfire at night a good story teller is an acquisition. Not only is a supply of jokes good; but weird stories, ghost stories, animal stories will all be listened to with avidity. Not all evenings will be spent around the campfire, but some will, and the good talker will add much to the evening's pleasure.

The girl who can make a good fudge or any other kind of good candy is usually voted a brick on a camping trip. If you are not expert, practice a bit beforehand; and remember that in camp you won't have all the conveniences for candy-making that you have at home.

A hot water bottle, ready-made mustard plasters, arnica, remedies for scratches and bruises and blistered feet and mosquito bites—this doesn't sound like a hilarious time, but there'll be a good time just the same—all such things are liable to be in demand.

New Watches.

Every year watches become more beautiful and more to be compared with the exquisite ones of the eighteenth century. Enameling is an art which has been revived with great success, and now the most beautiful shades and blendings of color can be produced.

Among many old wonderfully made watches reproduced this season is a French one, very thin, its undulating edge outlined with gold leaf. The back of the watch, and almost the entire face, is covered with rich black enamel, on which are painted tiny, but very natural, roses, convolvuli and daisies with their foliage.

BEVERAGE FOR SUMMER TIME

How to Make Tea Punch, a Refreshing Drink If It Is Mixed With Proper Care.

Tea punch is a much used beverage for summer porch, tennis and golf teas, and properly made is most refreshing. For a quantity of punch make a quart of rich, heavy sugar syrup, and while hot pour over one cupful of orange juice, one cupful of pineapple juice and half a cupful of strawberry or currant or raspberry or cherry juice or a mixture of these if preferred. Let stand until cool, then add one cupful of chopped ice to thoroughly chill. Meanwhile make one pint of strong tea, using a mixture of English breakfast and Orange Pekoe tea if possible. The strength should be given by the proportion of tea used and not by the length of time the water stands on the leaves. Take a full teaspoonful of tea for each cupful of water and let this water be freshly boiled and just come to a boil. The utmost care must be used in making this tea, for the success of the punch depends upon the flavor of the tea which should be there supporting the fruit flavors, yet without astringency or perhaps actual detection as tea.

Willie Fly—Heavens! I'm caught in a cyclone!

BABY'S HAIR ALL CAME OUT

"When my first baby was six months old he broke out on his head with little bumps. They would dry up and leave a scale. Then it would break out again and it spread all over his head. All the hair came out and his head was scaly all over. Then his face broke out all over in red bumps and it kept spreading until it was on his hands and arms. I bought several boxes of ointment, gave him blood medicine, and had two doctors to treat him, but he got worse all the time. He had it about six months when a friend told me about Cuticura. I sent and got a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. In three days after using them he began to improve. He began to take long naps and to stop scratching his head. After taking two bottles of Resolvent, two boxes of Ointment and three cakes of Soap he was sound and well, and never had any breaking out of any kind. His hair came out in little curls all over his head. I don't think anything else would have cured him except Cuticura.

"I have bought Cuticura Ointment and Soap several times since to use for cuts and sores and have never known them to fail to cure what I put them on. I think Cuticura is a great remedy and would advise any one to use it. Cuticura Soap is the best that I have ever used for toilet purposes." (Signed) Mrs. F. E. Harmon, R. F. An Unsafe Savings Bank

An Ulster county farmer made a savings bank of the summer kitchen stove during the winter, and would spare one dollar or five dollar bill. What William got he stuffed into a cigar box which he kept in the oven. When the hot weather finally came his wife concluded to start up the fire in this stove, with no suspicion of what might be in the oven. When she called her husband to breakfast and he discovered the hot stove he clawed the hot box out of the oven to find that his money was burned to a crisp.—Edmeston, N. Y., Local.

OLD THEATER LOTTERY

CHICAGO SHOW HOUSE BROUGHT $600,000 IN 1867.

Builder of Crosby's Opera House Went Broke on Enterprise and Decided to Dispose of Place by Lottery.

Doubtless in the rummage of a good many homes in this country might still be found elaborate and ornate certificates of chance in the great lottery of Crosby's opera house, Chicago, the drawings for which took place January 21, 1867. Nearly one hundred thousand of those chances were sold at $5 per chance, the builder of the opera house retaining more than twenty-five thousand himself after the sale had closed.

This beautiful theater, famous in its day, was erected by Uranus H. Crosby, a prosperous wholesale liquor merchant, who went to Chicago from Massachusetts. He planned so magnificently that when he had his building finished and furnished he had put into it not only all his business money, but most of his private fortune as well, the institution standing him about $600,000. It was too early for a "temple of art" in Chicago, and the builder went broke. Then it was that the plan to sell the house by lottery was formed and carried out. The prospectus described the building and its furnishings, the latter including a number of very costly paintings. For months the sale went on. The purchasers covered the whole country. The hopes of the winners ran high, not only because of the capital prize, the opera house itself, but because of the lesser prizes, especially the paintings.

The drawing was directed by a board of men representing a half dozen cities. For two days before it took place train loads of ticket holders rolled into Chicago. On the Sunday preceding the Monday of the drawing the streets were crowded. Improvised sleeping accommodations had to be provided for the vast throng. Every hall, as well as every hotel and boarding house, was filled to its capacity. The grand prize was not reached until the one hundred and thirteenth drawing, and it went to a man who was in Chicago, one of the few who had forgotten all about his investment and knew nothing, at the time, of the drawing—A. H. Lee of Prairie du Rocher, Ill. Several of the paintings, including Bierstadt's "The Yosemite Valley," were drawn by Mr. Crosby.

Four days after the drawing Mr. Lee went to Chicago, but, in recognition of Mr. Crosby's high purposes and the sacrifices they had cost him, offered to sell him the theater for $200,000, which price was paid to him by Mr. Crosby out of the proceeds of the lottery. This restoration of fortune did not last long. The opera house was destroyed in the great fire of 1871.

Browning a Great Talker.

If Lord Houghton talked more than most people he certainly was eclipsed by Mr. Browning, who spoke louder and with greater persistency than anyone I have ever come across in my life. Although I had known him as a girl, we did not renew our acquaintance until after my marriage, when I saw a great deal of him, as he constantly came to our house. He dined with us often, and used to come and see me generally every Sunday afternoon. He was very agreeable and kind, and, although I was never one of his devoted followers and often told him I had never been able to read a line of his poetry, he still continued his friendship with me. I think most people feared rather than loved him—certainly men did; but women adore poets, and they worshiped Mr. Browning.—From Lady St. Heller's "Memories."

Never leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed and cannot be obtained when on board the cars or steamships. For sale by all dealers.

A little more hot spell would soon see a little less of congress.

MAY BE TEST CASE

Oskaloosa Situation Probably Will Be Basis of a Decision

WILL TAKE FIGHT TO COURTS

Injunctions Served by County Attorney Against Last Six Liquor Shops Granted Licenses By City Council.

Oskaloosa.—The final outcome of the saloon situation in Oskaloosa may form a precedent for the rest of the state. When the city council and the mayor could not agree upon which of the six of the fifteen saloons here should close to comply with the Moon law in getting the number down to one for each 1,000 people, the council granted all fifteen licenses, and the mayor let the matter rest there.

Then the county attorney stepped in and served injunctions against the last six saloons named in the list of licenses. A test case is to be made of these injunction proceedings to determine whether it is necessary to bring the number of saloons abitrarily down to the number at this time, or whether the number gradually should be decreased by a system of elimination.

Another point at issue is whether a majority fraction of 1,000 people is entitled to a saloon. Under the recent federal census Oskaloosa lacked less than 300 of having 10,000 people, and many lawyers claim that the city is therefore entitled to ten saloons. The sufficiency of the consent petition is still in the courts, so that the right of operation of saloons here is not entirely fixed.

The license here has been increased from $1,000 to $1,400 per year.

Accused of Forgery.

Des Moines.—A man giving his name as William Sheehan, of Newton, was taken into custody by detectives for cashing a bogus check at the Vic Holmberg saloon. The check for $20 was drawn on E. L. Galusha, of Newton. Galusha was called on the telephone, and stated that the check was a forgery.

WRONG SORT

Perhaps Plain Old Meat, Potatoes and Bread May Be Against You for a Time.

A change to the right kind of food can lift one from a sick bed. A lady in Welden, Ill., says:

"Last spring I became bed-fast with severe stomach troubles accompanied by sick headache. I got worse and worse until I became so low I could scarcely retain any food at all, though I tried about every kind.

"I had become completely discouraged, and given up all hope, and thought I was doomed to starve to death, until one day my husband, trying to find something I could retain, brought home some Grape-Nuts.

"To my surprise the food agreed with me, digested perfectly and without distress. I began to gain strength at once. My flesh (which had been flabby), grew firmer, my health improved in every way and every day, and in a very few weeks I gained ten pounds in weight.

"I liked Grape-Nuts so well that for four months I ate no other food, and always felt as well satisfied after eating as if I had sat down to a fine quet.

"I had no return of the miser sick stomach nor of the headaches that I used to have when I ate other food. I am now a well woman, do all my own work again, and feel that life is worth living.

"Grape-Nuts food has been a blessing to my family; it surely saved my life; and my two little boys have thriven on it wonderfully." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The GIRL of MY DREAMS

A NOVELIZATION OF THE PLAY BY WILBUR D. NESBIT AND OTTO HAUERBACH

NOVELIZED BY WILBUR D. NESBIT

COPYRIGHT BY W. D. NESBIT

SYNOPSIS.

Harry Swifton is expecting a visit from his fiancee, Lucy Medders, a Quakeress whom he met in the country. His auto changes into another machine containing a beautiful woman and a German count. The woman's hat is ruined and Harry hopes. His sister, Caroline, arrives at home to play hostess. Socrates Primmer, a cousin of Lucy's, arrives with a present intended as a present for Lucy.

CHAPTER II.—(Continued.)

"Make yourself at home, old chap," Harry said. "What's that? Your bag-gage?"

"This?" Primmer sighed, indicating a hatbox. "This is a present I bought for Lucy. I happened to see it in the window of a store near here, and I purchased it and had it sent to this address. It just came, so I want to put it away and later give it to her with my own hands. Alas, my dear, poor Lucy!"

"Why—what's happened? What's the sad about Lucy?"

"She—she—oh, my poor, poor Lucy!" Primmer wailed, going slowly from the room.

"Well, wouldn't that bumb you!" Harry soliloquized. "Cousin Socrates evidently allowing his blighted affections to act on his lachrymal glands. Now, looking about the room, I expect I'd better send Venus and the ballet girls to the attic for a much-needed rest."

He was just about to take the ballet girl picture from the wall, when he was startled by an angry argument in the hallway. One voice was that of a woman, another that of the butler, and the third the broken accents of the German into whose auto Harry had smashed.

"Great guns!" he exclaimed. "They've trailed me down."

Into the room rushed the pair.

"You!" both cried.

CHAPTER III.

For a moment the couple looked at Harry and Harry looked at them. It would be difficult to say whether they or he felt the greater surprise.

"I want that hat!" spoke the lady, in determined tones.

"Yess. Ve vant dot hat!" said the gentleman.

"I haven't a hat," Harry explained. The German was about to explode with a few belligerent remarks, but the lady put her hand on his arm to restrain him, and said in milder tones: "You can help me out of a most distressing situation, sir."

"How so, madam?" Harry asked.

"We have just come from the new milliner's around the corner. I recognize you as the gentleman who figured in that unfortunate accident this morning, and strangely enough the milliner has that she sent to this house within the hour the perfect duplicate of my hat, which your auto ruined."

"Yellow it vas," interrupted the German. "Yellow, mit red puppies on it."

"Poppies, not puppies, count," said the lady. "Now, sir," to Harry, "I must have the hat which was sent here. Mine was an imported model and the milliner had but this one duplicate."

"There has been no hat delivered here," Harry replied.

"But it was," the lady argued. "And I must have it."

"I vill go now, iff you please," said the German, who had been growing more and more nervous, evidently being anxious to be well out of the scrape as soon as possible.

"No," Harry said, sternly. "Wait a minute. If the hat was sent here, I should know it. There may be a mistake. Ring up this milliner person and find out just what there is to it. Use the phone there, madam."

The lady smiled with relief, went to the phone and called for a number.

"Hello," she said. "Is Ma'mselle Daphne Daffington there? Is this you, Ma'mselle?"

"Daphne Daffington!" Harry muttered. "Can't be little Daphne I used to flirt with!"

"This is Mrs. Blazes," the lady said into the phone.

Harry started at that. "Mrs. Blazes!" he said in a hoarse whisper to the German. "Not Mrs. General Blazes?"

"Exactly!" the German assured him.

"Where did you deliver that duplicate of my hat?" Mrs. Blazes asked.

After the reply, still holding the receiver to her ear, she turned and asked Harry:

"What's the number of this house?"

"Three hundred and ten."

"They say it didn't reach here," Mrs. Blazes said into the phone. "What? You are sure it did? You will come over yourself? Thank you."

She hung up the receiver and turned to Harry with:

"She is positive that the hat was delivered here, and to make sure she says she will come herself. Now, that hat is here, evidently. And I must have it."

"Yess," the German belligerently added. "Ve must haff it."

But Harry had by this time divined who the German was—he could be no one else than the dapper Count von Fitz, whose flirtatious escapades were discussed on all sides. And, this being Mrs. Blazes, and the General being worried because his wife had not yet come home, Harry could put two and two together and reason that the Count and the dashing Mrs. Blazes had gone for a jolly little ride through the park, which ride had been spoiled by the untoward accident which destroyed her hat.

"Why don't you go and get a hat—any kind of a hat?" he asked. "I'll be glad to pay for it, as I was partially at fault when your hat was ruined."

"Oh, sir," Mrs. Blazes answered, "I wouldn't dare to go home without that particular hat, or its exact duplicate. My husband is very jealous. He would be sure to want to know where the original hat had gone—in fact, it is his favorite hat. Please, please give me the hat."

"But I tell you I haven't it. I'd give it to you in a minute if I had it."

"Vat a nonsense!! the Count cried.

Mrs. Blazes was about to say something, when a strange voice was heard outside.

"Right up here? Thank thee." It was the voice of Amos Medders.

"Great heavens!" Harry hissed. "They've come. My future father-in-law, and my future fiancee!"

"Aha!" the Count said, malevolently. "Unless you gif us der hat ve vill make some trouble."

"Please go!" Harry begged. "Please! I haven't the hat. I'll get you a whole hat store, if you'll only go!"

But they were adamant. Mrs. Blazes, nerved to desperation because she knew she simply could not go home without her hat, planked herself into a chair and anncunced that she would stay right there until he gave her her own hat.

An inspiration came to Harry. Taking Mrs. Blazes by the arm he said:

"I'll send out and get you the hat. I'll get that milliner to rush another duplicate for you. Here, hide in here for a while. You understand there'd be no end of talk if you were found here."

He rushed Mrs. Blazes to the door of his own room and pushed her in and slammed the door, then turned to the count.

"Now you may go," he said.

The Count was only too willing, but Lucy and her father could be heard coming nearer. Bewildered, Harry grabbed the Count by the arm and shoved him into the library on the other side from his own room.

"I can't meet them while I am in this condition," he said, looking about the room. "I'm so nervous they'd think I was guilty of something terrible or that I didn't want them here. If I were guilty I could carry it off easily. Thus does innocence get the hooks!"

And as Lucy and her father came into the room he slipped out the door leading to the back hallway.

Wonderingly. Lucy Medders and her father parted the hangings and entered Harry's den. They gazed about them, at the steins, the boxing gloves, the pipe racks, the pictures and all the other fittings of a bachelor's den.

On the table lay a deck of cards, a half smoked cigar, an opened box of cigarettes, and some scattered red white and blue chips.

"Oh-h-!" Lucy gasped. "Isn't it lovely, father?"

"And this"—Mr. Medders said—"this is Harry's home?"

"It seemeth different from our own home, doth it not?" Lucy asked, shyly.

"Verily, daughter," Medders remarked, coming to a stop before the highly colored picture of the ballet girls, "there be nothing like this at home."

"Why," Lucy said, looking at the picture, "see the ladies in the rainy day skirts!"

"I see the ladies," Medders said, drily, "but where are the skirts? Verily, daughter, they must have feared a flood."

"Perhaps," Lucy offered, seeing that her father viewed the picture with disapproval, "perhaps it is a biblical scene."

"Nay, daughter. If it were, more people would be buying Bibles."

Medders turned from the picture, and his attention was caught by the statuette of the Venus de Milo. He looked at it intently.

"This is a sad sight, daughter," he remarked.

"Because her arms are broken, father?" Lucy asked, innocently, not understanding that her father was expressing a dislike to such works of art. "Peradventure she broke them off trying to hook her dress in the back," she continued, merrily.

"She hath no dress to hook," Medders said, solemnly. "But, aside from these, the place hath a seemly look."

CHAPTER IV.

From the hallway came gliding in the sorrowful figure of Socrates Primmer. He caught his breath sharply at sight of Lucy, and then advanced, with his hands outstretched.

"Ah, my poor, poor cousin Lucy!" he wailed.

"Oh, cousin Socrates!" Lucy cried. "How nice of thee to come."

Medders looked on with kindly amusement. He had long known of Primmer's unrequitted attachment for Lucy, and to him it seemed that the best course to pursue was to allow Primmer to weep it out. Primmer looked mournfully at Lucy and said:

"As Riley might have written:

"Now my heart is full of sorrow and my soul would fain repine
For another fellow's courting that old sweetheart of mine."

"But," Lucy smiled, "I am not old, and I am not thy sweetheart, cousin Socrates."

"Verily, Socrates," Medders said, "thou wouldst make a poor sort of husband, weeping continually about the house. Thou mightst dampen the clothes on ironing day, though."

"Don't mind father, cousin Socrates," Lucy said. "He doth but jest."

"Harry said for me to ask thee to allow me to show thee to thy room, Uncle Medders," Socrates observed, lugubriously. "And his sister will come this moment to greet poor, poor Cousin Lucy."

Primmer led Medders out. Lucy looked about her, wonderingly, for a moment, but whatever her thoughts may have been, they were ended suddenly when Harry hurried in.

"I'm so sorry not to have met you when you arrived," he said, seizing both her hands, while she drew herself away in shyness.

"I am truly glad to see thee, Harry," she told him. "Thy house is most seemly."

Harry looked quickly at her. There seemed to be an undercurrent of hidden meaning in her words. But a glance at her lovely face, framed in the sunny hair escaping from beneath the simple Quaker bonnet, was enough to convince him that there had been no guile in her remark.

Lucy, in her plain, almost severe, gray dress, with just the touch of white at neck and throat, and the soft gray ribbons tying her bonnet beneath her chin, was a marked contrast to the dashing beauties he knew. But with all her simplicity of manner she had that indefinable quality called "charm," which may not be acquired through the donning of gaudy raiment and the heightening of the color of the cheeks, nor by any of the extraneous aids to beauty which need not be particularized here. And such charm, also, may not be lost at any moment by the one possessing it. Charm in a woman is like magnetism in a man. It manifests itself unconsciously and naturally, so that others measure the possessor by it and not by his or her appearance.

Harry drew her toward him, still holding her hands. There was no mistaking his wish. Lucy, unsophisticated though she was, understood him.

"Nay, Harry," Lucy said. "Thee know I do not think a girl should be kissed before she is wedded."

Circulating Libraries.

It is absolutely impossible to say just when the first circulating library was opened. If there was ever a record of the important event, it is lost. We know that during the middle ages stationers used to lend books on hire, and here, no doubt, we have the germ of the modern circulating library. One Samuel Fancourt started a real circulating library in England about the year 1740, but it appears that the people were not ready for it, since it soon failed. Similar institutions at Bath and London, some ten years later, seem to have succeeded, and from that time the circulating library began to get a foothold, not only in England, but in other European countries.

True to the Death.

Not long since the driver of the engine on one of the Belgian lines of railway saw a large dog on the roadway between the metals. He put on the whistle, yet it did not move, but only stood and barked furiously at the approaching engine. Still on, on, on, came the train, and still there stood the dog, more furious than before. The train passed, and at the next station it was noticed that a part of a dress was clinging to the wheel guard. A messenger was sent back, when a dead child was found, which had evidently fallen asleep, and whom the noble dog tried to protect to the very last, giving his very life sooner than flinch from his trust.

Doctors Said He Would Die

A Friend's Advice Saves Life

I wish to speak of the wonderful cure that I have received from your noted Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder cure. Last summer I was taken with severe pains in my back and sides. I could not breathe without difficulty and was nearly wild with the desire to urinate. Was compelled to do so every ten minutes with the passage of pure blood with the urine. I tried all the different doctors from far and near, but they said it was no use to doctor as I would die anyway. I was at the end of my rope and was so miserable with pain and the thought that I must die that words cannot tell how I felt. One day a friend told me of the wonderful help she had received from Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. She gave me one of your pamuphlets which I read and determined to try Swamp-Root. After taking half a bottle I felt better. Have now taken ten bottles and am well as I ever was, thanks to Swamp-Root. I wish to tell all suffering people that have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is the best medicine on the market.

All persons doubting this statement can write to me and I will answer them directly,

Yours very truly,
CLYDE F. CAMERER,
Rosalie, Wash.

Easily In the Lead.

Louise Jennings, Elise Hathaway and Florence Brintnall are three schoolmates whose indulgent parents provided a picnic for each of them, giving carte blanche as to the number of their guests and the manner of entertainment on the beach. Three parties in ten days means a lot to young ladies of the tender age of eight. But they recovered quickly enough from the fatigue. Followed comparison:

"I think," said Lou, "ours was a very nice party. And we had ice cream twice, if you remember."

"Oh, I don't know," quoth Elise—she insists upon being called by her full name and will answer to no other—"I notice all my guests rode 'round on the carrousel as often as they wanted."

"I'm sure my party was the best of all," spoke up Flo. "Father says every d——d kid in town was there."

"Right down yonder," replies the clerk. "Just keep going until you see the porter from the barber shop. Lovers' lane is so crowded now that we have him stationed there to give the guests checks, so that each may have his turn."—Judge's Library.

NOT NECESSARY TO PUBLISH NAMES

An erroneous impression has been spread broadcast in the state with regard to the new law under which county attorneys are required to secure lists of federal liquor license holders in their respective counties, says the Marshalltown Times-Republican. It has been stated repeatedly that the county attorney must publish the same and the belief is common that the county attorneys will have these lists printed in the newspapers. The bill as originally drawn had this feature, but it was amended out of the bill, and the county attorneys have no obligation to publish in the newspapers the list of holders of federal licenses.

The legislature placed the duty of getting the lists upon the county attorneys because they are the only officials who under the federal laws have a right to demand the lists.

These lists will be filed with the county auditor who will make a record of the names and keep them open to public inspection. The lists will be compiled every three months and be spread upon the records.

The law makes these lists prima facie evidence of intent to sell, of course subject to the rules of evidence under which the contrary may be shown. The burden, however, is upon the holder of a federal license to show that he has complied with the state laws.

An Ideal Sunday Newspaper

Recent issues of the Sunday Record Herald remind one that Chicago may fairly lay claim to producing the best newspapers in the world, not excepting those of New York. The Sunday Record-Herald, in foreign news alone, has its own special cable service in addition to those of the New York Herald, World, Journal of Commerce and Associated Press. This is a fair example of the completeness of the paper in every department

Aside from the regular news features, there is something in the Sunday Record-Herald for every member of the family. The special articles by William E. Curtis are always interesting. The sporting section offers four whole pages of fresh and authentic news in every line of sport. The woman's section is filled with illustrated articles on the latest wrinkles in fashion and domestic science, with Marion Harland as a regular contributor and Dame Curtsey's "Novelties in Entertainment" as a valued feature. The dramatic and musical pages, written by James O'Donnell Bennett and Felix Borowski, are admittedly without their equal in the West. The array of splendid special articles by skilled writers, finely illustrated, also is typical of the high literary quality of the Record-Herald. In the way of humor there is the comic colored supplement for children, besides S. E. Kiser's delightful "Alternating Currents" for everybody.

But the thing that lifts the Sunday Record-Herald most emphatically above all its rivals is its magazine section—a real magazine, full of stories and articles by the most famous writers of our day, illustrated by celebrated artists. This year its $10,000 prize contest is filling its pages from week to week with some of the best short stories in our language. No wonder the Record Herald is regarded as the ideal Sunday newspaper!

Right in your busiest season when you have the least time to spare you are most likely to take diarrhoea and lose several days' time, unless you have Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at hand and take a dose on the first appearance of the disease. For sale by all dealers.

Farm Buildings Burned

At an early hour last Monday morning, fire destroyed the barn, granary, hog house, hen house—in fact all the buildings but the residence on the Chas. Velau farm near Klemme. Two horses, some cattle, hogs chickens, and nearly one thousand bushels of grain were burned. In fact it was almost a complete clean out. There was some insurance but Mr. Velau's loss will be very heavy, as the value of the property destroyed will run close to $3,000. The origin of the fire is a mystery and will probably never be known. John Velau, who is running the farm, was in bed asleep when the fire started, and he states that he didn't even use a lantern while doing the chores the night before. Everything was dry and burned like tinder.

Much credit is due the Koerner Telephone Company for getting word to the neighbors. The central office, as soon as it was notified, rang up all the near neighbors and told them of the fire, so that help was soon on the ground.

PICTURES OF CURIOUS CONTRASTS

By EDWARD B. CLARK

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

OCCASIONALLY the proceedings of congress taken side by side with the proceedings of state legislatures, or more particularly perhaps state political party conventions, present pictures of curious contrasts.

One Ohio Republican state convention endorsed in strong words the administration and deeds of Theodore Roosevelt, who then was president. In the same platform which gave the president his endorsement there were words of the strongest commendation for Senator Joseph Benson Foraker and his work in the senate of the United States.

The platform therefore expressed approbation of the legislative efforts of two men, calmly ignoring the fact that one of them was seeking to prevent the doing of that which the other wanted to have done. The resolutions of the convention were insincere either in one case or the other and the historian must take his choice.

Senator Foraker was one of the strongly picturesque men in the senate of the United States. He was strong in speech and in political and parliamentary methods, and he was picturesque in manner and appearance. He was nervously energetic and as watchful as a lynx. He was the head and front of the Republican opposition in the senate to the railroad legislation which had the indorsement of President Roosevelt. Senator Foraker, in fact, was the tireless enemy of the measure. He knew that he was espousing a losing cause, but if there had been hope that the measure might be defeated he could not have been more constant in his attendance at the sessions when the bill was under consideration, nor more alert at every instant of time to raise some point tending to strengthen his own line of belief and of argument.

To one who lacked all knowledge of the ways of Ohio politics it would have appeared that Senator Foraker was facing the certain condemnation of his constituents by his course of antagonism to his party and to the president. From the words that came to Washington from Ohio it appeared practically certain that the people of the state who held no corporation affiliations were like the same classes of people in other states—determined advocates of railroad regulating measures.

Other senators who were as bitterly opposed personally to the legislation as was Senator Foraker paid heed to the feeling at home and voted for the bill. The Ohio senator seemed to gain strength in opposition from every message that came over the Alleghany mountains telling him that he was taking the unpopular side. Mr. Foraker's attitude had in it more than a suspicion of defiance.

He was in the thick of the fight from the day that the Hepburn bill reached the floor of the senate until the hour when it was put upon its passage. His long speech in opposition to the measure was one of the greatest speeches which he had ever delivered. It was eloquent. It was based upon premises which by the speaker's art was made to appear sound, and the listening laymen might well have been "almost persuaded" that all the right and the reason and the logic were with the cause of the senator from Ohio.

It was a long speech which Mr. Foraker made, but its interest made the time speed on its way. He was not content with the one utterance. At different times during the debate he rose to combat the statements of some of his colleagues, and at every such time he spoke vehemently and well.

President Roosevelt during the months of agitation over railroad rate matters said some things which made it appear strongly that he felt that men who opposed legislation which he favored were not likely to have the countenance of their constituents. He lived to see a convention of his party declare practically that he was right, and the men who were diametrically opposed to him also were right. The Republican party in Ohio succeeded in framing resolutions that read much like a bit of the rarer humor of Mark Twain.

SENATOR SHELBY M. CULLOM

Senator Foraker in addition to being opposed bitterly to railroad rate legislation, was the chief stumbling block in the senate to the securing of such action on statehood questions as the president wished to have taken. Mr. Foraker did not wish to see Arizona and New Mexico united, and he did not hesitate any longer to take issue with the president on the matter than he hesitated to take issue with his own rate legislation.

Certain great corporations were greatly interested in the question of the admission of the two territories as it was first proposed. There was a lobby evidence in Washington, and it worked literally night and day to defeat in the senate the statehood bill as it had passed the lower house.

The Ohio senator paid no attention at all to the stories of outside influences that were brought to bear to secure the defeat of joint statehood. He at times was vitriolic in his speeches on the matter of the admission of the territories.

If the Ohio state convention of several years ago had declared specifically in its platform that a certain law should be passed by congress the next winter and Senator Foraker should have gone to Washington and caused the defeat of the statute which had been demanded, a great many of his constituents doubtless would have patted him on the back for disobeying them.

The agitation for Canadian reciprocity during the last winter brought sharply to mind the final success of the demands to enter into a reciprocal trade agreement with Cuba during the earlier part of Theodore Roosevelt's administration.

Cuba already had cost the United States a large sum of money in addition to that spent for the prosecution of the war against Spain. Eight years ago President Roosevelt called congress together in extraordinary session for the express purpose of discussing a measure of trade reciprocity with the island which had just taken a place among the independent nations of earth.

One of the most interesting debates and one of the most interesting situations known to legislative history grew out of the desire of this country to give Cuba commercial advantages. In the first instance new trade relations were provided for by the treaty. The senate of the United States alone has to deal with treaties after they have been drawn in proper form by the state department and have been sanctioned by the president. It is for the senate to ratify or to reject treaties.

Under the Constitution all measures for the raising of revenues must originate in the house of representatives. The leaders of the house, knowing that the trade treaty with Cuba touched the revenues, objected to the form of the legislation and insisted that instead of a treaty the reciprocity measure should have its origin in the lower house of congress. The reasoning of the house members was disputed weakly, and the representatives won their point.

The Cuban reciprocity treaty became the Cuban reciprocity bill. After the ways and means committee of the house had considered it it went to the floor for debate and there both the Democrats and the Republicans tried their best to make political capital out of the legislation. The Democrats held that the Republicans were coming over to their way of thinking and that the Cubans could thank their stars that Democratic doctrine had prevailed.

The Republicans held that reciprocity was a principle of the party emphasized by James G. Blaine and later by William McKinley. At is was, the bill went through the house practically unanimously, and it was sent over to the senate in plenty of time for that body to have taken action before the close of the extraordinary session which was to come perforce at the hour set for the opening of the first regular meeting of the Fifty-eighth congress. The senate, however, is a deliberate body, almost maddeningly deliberative at times, and so it was that the Cuban reciprocity measure was not acted upon until the regular session had come and was some weeks on its way.

The senate had a row of its own before the reciprocity bill, after coming from the house, was referred to a committee for consideration. When in treaty form the measure necessarily was booked for consideration by the committee on foreign relations, of which Senator Shelby M. Cullom of Illinois was and is the chairman. The minute that the house made good its contention that the measure was a bill and not a treaty, the finance committee of the senate declared that it was the proper body to consider the measure, and a strong fight was made to take the matter away from Senator Cullom and give it into the hands of Senator Aldrich. The Rhode Island senator was a power, but the Illinois senator was also a power, and in this particular instance Illinois came out ahead of Rhode Island. The committee on foreign relations took the reciprocity bill under consideration, and later reported upon it, and after debate it received the senate's sanction.

The house of representatives spends a good deal of time occasionally over what seems to be trivial things. It is only fair to the house to say, however, that most of these seemingly trivial matters are those which concern the spending of money, and with the navy drawing over $100,000,000 a year and with the other departments keeping pace with the navy's draft on the treasury, economy in small things is necessary. The house succeeds in getting some fun out of the disputes over small expenditures, and the time and the task are lightened by the pleasantries.

In an army appropriation bill a small sum of money was included to provide for the purchase of books, magazines and newspapers for the use of the general staff. Of course, the supposition was that all the reading matter purchased was to be of a technical kind and of service to army officers in their profession. In fact, money previously voted had been used for service magazines and for military books only.

An Indiana member, however, wanted the appropriation cut to $200, and said it should be specifically stated that nothing was to be bought except printed matter bearing on the profession of arms.

General Hull of Iowa, who was chairman of the house committee on military affairs, jumped to the defense of the assaulted army. He said that there wasn't a yellow-backed book on the shelves of the war department. He declared that "army officers may like to read books like Wilkie Collins' 'Lady in White,' but they buy them out of their own pockets."

General Hull's mistake in naming the title of Wilkie Collins' "Woman in White" was the subject of a good-natured gibe or two, but attention was quickly turned away from the slip by a Democrat from the Hoosier state who jumped to his feet and said that in connection with this army bill there was an "Ariel" thing that he wished to speak about.

The members turned to the Indianian qnickly, expecting from the use of the word "Ariel" a rapid jump from "The Woman in White" to "The Tempest," but the Indianian disappointed them by talking about an army flying machine which he said was intended to make "ariel" navigation possible, "but which fell kerflop."

The sunny southern land which gave the country Pod Dismuke and Dink Botts contributed recently three more candidates for name and fame, and when they were read out in the senate the grave ones were moved into smiling. Among the nominations presented to the senate for confirmation appeared these names of residents of Dixie: Tilman Bunch, Lovick Pinkston and Epaminondas Bigler.

Bureau of Labor Says That Prices Are Much Higher

HIGHEST POINT WAS IN 1910

Report Shows That Farm Products Were 7.5 Per Cent Higher in 1910 Than in 1909.

Des Moines, July 10.—The government report of the Bureau of Labor shows that wholesale prices in 1910 were 19.1 per cent higher than in 1909; 46.7 per cent higher than in 1897 (which was the year of lowest prices between 1890 and 1910); 16.6 per cent higher than 1890, and 31.6 per cent higher than the average high prices between 1890 and 1899.

The highest prices in this decade were reached in October, 1907, when a general decline began which continued until August, 1908. A rise then set in, and there were monthly increases without a break up to March, 1910, when wholesale prices reached the highest point in twenty years. They were then 21.1 per cent higher than the average of 1900; 49.2 per cent higher than the yearly average of 1897, and 33.8 per cent higher than the average price of ten years between 1890 and 1899.

Then followed a slight decline and from June to December, 1910, prices remained nearly level and at the close of 1910 they were still 30 per cent higher than the ten years average between 1890 and 1900 and 45.4 per cent higher than the record set by the low price year 1897. Of the 257 commodities considered in the investigation 148 showed an average increase, 26 showed no change and 83 showed decreases.

Prices of lumber and building materials increased 10.7 per cent; farm products, 7.5; drugs, 4.1 per cent; foodstuffs, 3.2 per cent; clothing, 2.7 per cent, and the miscellaneous group of commodities, 5.7 per cent. House furnishings decreased 0.1 per cent and fuel and light 3 per cent.

Some extraordinary variations were recorded during 1910. Potatoes increased 300 per cent; eggs, 90 per cent; coffee, 60 per cent; mess beef, 35 per cent.

The report is a flattering one. It shows that the state of Iowa has deposited in various banks the magnificent sum of $1,578,763.59, while the cash on hand amounts to $5,641.55. Ames college bonds, of which Treasurer Morrow is the custodian, amount to $684,050.

Ames college endowment bonds	684,050.00

New Quarantine Laws.

The newly created animal health commission will meet in Des Moines, Thursday, July 13, for the purpose of formulating quarantine laws for the importing of live stock into the state of Iowa. The call was issued by State Veterinary Surgeon Gibson, executive officer of the commission. Governor Carroll will address the commission when it meets. The veterinarians on the commission are Dr. Thomas Downing, of Washington, and Dr. George Blanch, of Belle Plaine; the stockmen on the commission are C. A. Saunders, of Manilla, and Frank Kingsley, of McGregor.

It is the plan of the commission to formulate animal quarantine and health laws of such a stringent nature that the introduction of contagious disease from other states will be impossible.

After Ice Cream Cones Again.

The ice cream cone will be the next food article to fall under the displeasure of Commissioner Barney, of the state food and dairy department. Last year the department had an unlimited amount of trouble with ice cream cones because of the presence of saccharine. Many dealers were compelled to quit business entirely because of the raids made by the state inspectors. It was hoped that they would take warning from last year's experiences, and make cones which conform to the state food laws. But they seem not to have heeded the warning and are back at the old trick of putting saccharine in their cones Every man who was punished last year, and is caught this year, will be given a double dose of punishment.

State is Buying Coal Supply.

The state board of control is buying coal for use in the state institutions. The board will spend $250,000 for coal for the use of fifteen institutions. Dealers in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and Missouri have submitted bids.

The board will make an attempt, this year, to purchase its coal on the B. T. U., or heat, basis. The bids which have been received range in price from $1.40 to $4.50 per ton.

Bad Egg Warning.

State Food and Dairy Commissioner W. B. Barney has issued a warning to all dealers to the effect that the sale of bad eggs is a violation of the pure food law, for which the dealers will be held accountable. Copies of the law governing the sale of pure food have been sent throughout the state to dealers in order that no one may use ignorance as an excuse of violation.

PITIFUL SIGHT WITH ECZEMA

"A few days after birth we noticed an inflamed spot on our baby's hip which soon began spreading until baby was completely covered even in his eyes, ears and scalp. For eight weeks he was bandaged from head to foot. He could not have a stitch of clothing on. Our regular physician pronounced it chronic eczema. He is a very able physician and ranks with the best in this locality, nevertheless, the disease began spreading until baby was completely covered. He was losing flesh so rapidly that we became alarmed and decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

"Not until I commenced using Cuticura Soap and Ointment could we tell what he looked like, as we dared not wash him, and I had been putting one application after another on him. On removing the scale from his head the hair came off, and left him entirely bald, but since we have been using Cuticura Soap and Ointment he has as much hair as ever. Four weeks after we began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment he was entirely cured. I don't believe anyone could have eczema worse than our baby.

"Before we used the Cuticura Remedies we could hardly look at him, he was such a pitiful sight. He would fuss until I would treat him, they semed to relieve him so much. Cuticura Soap and Ointment stand by themselves and the result they quickly and surely bring is their own recommendation." (Signed) Mrs. T. B. Rosser, Mill Hall, Pa., Feb. 20, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 29 K, Boston.

The Republic of Inman.

Where is the republic of Inman, which has lately gained an unenviable notoriety owing to the plague? Its name is not to be found in any historical or geographical index. It is to be found in the neighborhood of Prsnoff, to the south of the mountains of Bogaliadsa, to the east of Sichotaalin, on the banks of the river Inman, which is a tributary of the Oussouri. After this we expected to hear that it was inhabited by Liliputians or Gargantuans. The inhabitants are all hunters; it has its own laws, but no police, and like Monaco its chief delight is gambling; but with this difference, that the gambling is restricted to one month in the year and all the rest of the time it is forbidden under the severest penalties.

Severe penalties are meted out to thieves, who are discouraged by being buried alive. But perhaps as there are no police this punishment sounds worse than it really is. However, the country has one pleasant custom; it offers free hospitality to visitors for three days, who may demand the best room in any house. After that they must pay forty kopeks a day—not a very large sum. But if a visitor is unwary enough to appear at the New Year he must give a present of fifteen rubles to celebrate the day.—From le Journal des Debats.

A Paris Plan.

Paris intends to make the city streets teach history to Paris children. The municipal council is expected soon to pass a bill requiring that the historical significance and dates of events shall be added to the street name signs. The streets are already placarded plainly with white letters on a blue background, not only at every street intersection, but on every angle of every building on every corner. Writing of the scheme, a correspondent of the Chicago Daily News says: "Practically every important street in the city is named in honor of some famous man or victory. Future signs, therefore, will read: 'Rue Rivoli—French victory in 1797;' 'Avenue Victor Hugo—French poet and novelist, 1802-85;' 'Rue Lincoln—famous president of the United States, 1809-65.'"

Enthusiasm.

"Was that ovation extended by people for whom the political leader has done favors?"

"To a certain extent; although most of the enthusiasm was worked up by people who hope he is going to do something for them."

Distinctness Misplaced.

"I have only one objection to music," said the unassuming man.

"And what is that?"

"As a rule you can't understand a word of a classical composition, and you aren't allowed to miss a syllable of a ragtime shocker."

Possibly Sarcastic.

Three men sat in a row in a car, facing a middle-aged, clean-shaven man of ruddy complexion, who had an elongated leather case on his knees.

Said the first man: "I bet I can tell that man's business. He's a doctor."

"Wrong," commented the second. it's a carpet-layer."

"Nix on the carpet layer," said the third. "It's a piano tuner."

The middle-aged man across the aisle put down his leather case and leaned forward. "I couldn't help overhearing you gentlemen," he said, "and I want to correct you. My name is George Harvey. I am a veterinary surgeon and if I can be of any service to you call on me."

They are still wondering what he really meant by his offer of service.

Let Carnegie Pin a Medal.

"Chuggins is fearfully selfish since he got that new motor car," said the critical friend.

"In what way?"

"Every time he honks to warn a pedestrian he thinks he ought to have a life saving medal."

Never leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed and cannot be obtained when on board the cars or steamships. For sale by all dealers.

OTTUMWA WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to you for my cure."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WAMPLER, 524 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Consider This Advice.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous medicine, made only from roots and herbs, has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, confidential, and always helpful.

Father Loses an Excuse.

A SPOON SHAKER.
Straight From Coffeedom.

Coffee can marshall a good squadron of enemies and some very hard ones to overcome. A lady in Florida writes:

"I have always been very fond of good coffee, and for years drank it at least three times a day. At last, however, I found that it was injuring me.

"I became bilious, subject to frequent and violent headaches, and so very nervous, that I could not lift a spoon to my mouth without spilling a part of its contents.

"My heart got 'rickety' and beat so fast and so hard that I could scarcely breathe, while my skin got thick and dingy, with yellow blotches on my face, caused by the condition of my liver and blood.

"I made up my mind that all these afflictions came from the coffee, and I determined to experiment and see.

"So I quit coffee and got a package of Postum which furnished my hot morning beverage. After a little time I was rewarded by a complete restoration of my health in every respect.

"I do not suffer from biliousness any more, my headaches have disappeared, my nerves are as steady as could be desired, my heart beats regularly and my complexion has cleared up beautifully—the blotches have been wiped out and it is such a pleasure to be well again." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

IOWA HEALTH BOARD

Session of Disrupted Body To Be Held July 19-21

SMITH TO SUCCEED DECKER

Dr. B. L. Eiker, of Leon, Senior Member of the Board, Is Entitled to the Presidency of the Board.

Des Moines.—The Iowa state board of health recently disrupted by the sudden and unexpected resignations of President A. C. Moerke, of Burlington, and Dr. George E. Decker, of Davenport, will hold its annual meeting for the purpose of electing officres and organizing for the next year's work, July 19-21.

Dr. George A. Smith, of Clinton, has been named by Governor Carroll to succeed Dr. Decker.

The governor has appointed no one to succeed Dr. Moerke.

It is anticipated that the affairs of the board will be turned upside down at the annual meeting. Members of the board have stated that they are generally disgusted with the appropriation made by the last legislature—$5,000—which they brand as trifling.

The fact that the assembly granted the board only this sum was given by President Moerke and Dr. Decker as the cause for their resignation.

Dr. B. L. Eiker, of Leon, senior member of the board, is entitled to the presidency of the board under the time honored custom of honoring the senior member.

Two examinations will be conducted under the auspices of the health board this month. The nurses' examination will be July 24, 25 and 26, and the embalmers will take examinations July 27, 28 and 29. Up to date seventy-one persons have applied for registered nurse's certificates.

Summer Apples Free of Worms.

Wesley Green, state horticulturist, has issued a statement showing the growth of Iowa crops during July. Apples are smooth and free from worms, but the entire crop of horticulture products shows a decline of 10 per cent from the June report. Berries and vegetables declined from 10 to 50 per cent during the month. Apples, peaches and grapes improved from one to two per cent over the June report. The hot, dry weather is the cause assigned to the ruin of the berry and vegetable crops. Summary of per cent of normal crop follows: Summer apples, 76 per cent; fall apples, 72 per cent; winter apples, 65 per cent; pears, 31 per cent; American plums, 61 per cent; domestic plums, 63 per cent; Japanese plums, 37 per cent; peaches, 12 per cent; grapes, 83 per cent; red raspberries, 45 per cent; black raspberries, 50 per cent; blackberries, 65 per cent; currants, 60 per cent; gooseberries, 61 per cent.

Liquor Men Ask Rehearing.

Notice of a petition for a rehearing of the Winneshiek liquor cases involving the question of the effect of a withdrawal of a withdrawal to a liquor consent petition, was filed with B. W. Garrett, clerk of the supreme court. Attorneys for Otto Drexel filed the notice. The court will not sit until September 19th, so the question cannot be considered until that time.

This raises the question of the validity of several saloon consents over the state. If the court refuses to grant a rehearing, thus standing by its decision of recent date, then dozens of saloons over Iowa will be permanently closed. If a rehearing is granted it is then a question of whether these saloons can operate until the court hears the case a second time.

Good Results from Seed Testing.

That the "test your seed corn" campaign in Iowa has been a great success is evidenced by the fact that the state dairy and food department has not received a solitary complaint this year alleging fraud in the sale of seed corn.

Last year the department received no less than 500 complaints.

"I can not account for it in any other way than that the farmers of the state have been heeding the warnings given them," said Commissioner Barney. "They have undoubtedly taken great care in the selection of their seed corn. There has also been but little if any sale of seed corn not up to standard. The only prosecutions for the sale of bad seed corn that this department has had to make this year are cases based on sales made last year."

TELLS OF EMPLOYERS LIABILITY

Consul in England Will Report to Commission How England Works This Feature.

Des Moines.—The state liability commission, which will investigate the question of employers' liability, met at the stat house and organized for business. Senator John T Clarkson, of Albia, was elected chairman, and George A. Wilson, of Des Moines, secretary of the last Iowa senate, was elected secretary of the commission. Meetings will be held to outline a plan of work. One of the most interesting features of the work will be done by Hon. Albert W. Swalm, United States consul at Birmingham, England. He will investigate the workings of the English employers' liability law and make a report direct to the new Iowa commission. He has secured permission to do this from the state department at Washington.

The Cost of Living.

Careful study of the government report of the Bureau of Labor shows that wholesale prices in 1910 were 19.1 per cent higher than in 1909; 46.7 per cent higher than in 1897 (which was the year of lowest prices between 1890 and 1910); 16.6 per cent higher than 1890, and 31.6 per cent higher than the average high prices between 1890 and 1899.

The highest prices in this decade were reached in October, 1907, when a general decline began which continued until August, 1908. A rise then set in, and there were monthly increases without a break up to March, 1910, when wholesale prices reached the highest point in twenty years. They were then 21.1 per cent higher than the average of 1900; 49.2 per cent higher than the yearly average of 1897, and 33.8 per cent higher than the average price of ten years between 1890 and 1899.

Then followed a slight decline and from June to December, 1910, prices remained nearly level and at the close of 1910 they were still 30 per cent higher than the ten years average between 1890 and 1900 and 45.4 per cent higher than the record set by the low price year 1897. Of the 257 commodities considered in the investigation 148 showed an average increase, 26 showed no change and 83 showed decreases.

Prices of lumber and building materials increased 10.7 per cent; farm products, 7.5; drugs, 4.1 per cent; foodstuffs, 3.2 per cent; clothing, 2.7 per cent, and the miscellaneous group of commodities, 5.7 per cent. House furnishings decreased 0.1 per cent and fuel and light 3 per cent.

Some extraordinary variations were recorded during 1910. Potatoes increased 300 per cent; eggs, 90 per cent; coffee, 60 per cent; mess beef, 35 per cent.

Pressure On Executive Council.

Strong pressure is being brought to bear upon the state executive council by cities of the state to abandon its pole line mileage basis of assessing telephone and telegraph companies in favor of a wire mileage basis.

Frank G. Pierce, of Marshalltown, secretary of the Iowa League of Municipalities, appeared in person before the council advocating the change and several commercial clubs have filed written requests with the council for the change.

Attorney N. T. Guernsey, representing the telephone and telegraph interests, contended before the council that the law does not contemplate a wire mileage assessment, but rather a pole line assessment.

The cities maintain that telephone companies evade the high taxes of the cities by stringing toll lines throughout the country districts where the tax levy is low. By so doing they reduce the city assessment, for the state executive council makes the same assessment per mile over the entire pole line mileage of the companies.

The city of Burlington, through E E. Egan, secretary and treasurer of the commercial exchange, filed a long communication with the council reciting conditions in Des Moines county and asking for a change of assessment to the wire mileage basis.

Secretary Egan sets forth what he calls the injustice of the present system of assessment in a clear manner in his letter to the council.

Warning Against Artificial Drinks.

Commissioner Barney, of the food and dairy department, has issued a warning to druggists and dealers at all soda fountains against selling artificial orangeade. He has notified them that they must, if they are selling such orangeade, put a placard on their fountains announcing that they are selling artificial orangeade. Failure to do so means prosecution

TOM HATCH KILLED

Notorious Convict Meets Finish In Minneapolis Burglary

OFFICER KILLED IN BATTLE

Dispatches Give Name as Jerry McCarthy Which Was One of Names Assumed by Daring Iowa Robber.

Des Moines, July 17.—That Tom Hatch, notorious convict, whose daring gang of safe-crackers raided the Polk county treasure vault, went to his death in Minneapolis last night in a revolver duel with a policeman, is the belief of local city detectives. The criminal, believed almost beyond a doubt to be the fugitive Hatch, put four bullets through the body of his would-be captor before succumbing. Meager dispatches account that the criminal died with a revolver in each hand, spitting bullets until he fainted and fell to the pavement dead.

The alleged Tom Hatch was apprehended by Officer Ollinger while trying to force the rear window of a Minneapolis drug store. The patrolman ordered him to submit to arrest. The only reply was a fusillade of bullets from the burglar's two heavy revolvers. Patrolman Ollinger opened fire in return. Many shots were exchanged. The policeman put four bullets into his opponent. The officer was dead when the police reserves reached the scene. The burglar succumbed twenty minutes later in a hospital.

Manager Veitch, of the Kirkwood hotel, who was in Minneapolis, identified the body as that of Tom Hatch. He also states that the policeman made a dying statement and produced papers to prove that Hatch was in the Polk county courthouse robbery.

EXPLOSION KILLS 21 MINERS

Bodies of Victims Are Found in Each Other's Arms as Evidence of Carresses Before Death

Dubois, Pa., July 17.—Twenty-one miners were killed in an explosion in the shaft of the Cascade Coal and Coke company's mine at Sykesville, nine miles from here, last night. The explosion occurred at 9:30 o'clock, but it was after midnight before the extent of the disaster was known.

All of the dead but three are foreigners. The explosion was slight, as evidenced by the small damage done in the mine, but the deadly damp is responsible for most of the deaths.

Three sets of brothers and a father and son are numbered among the dead. George and John Heek, Nick Pavelick and his 5-year-old son were found by the rescuers locked in each other's arms, as though they embraced each other in their dying moments. None of the bodies were mutilated and but few showed burns. Eleven of the men in one heading had apparently made ready to escape, for they carried their dinner pails and were headed for the opening.

CROPS FINE SAYS VAN DUYN

Effect of Drought Is More Apparent Around Des Moines Than Other Parts of the State.

Des Moines, July 17.—E. W. Van Duyn, state labor commissioner says that the crops in the northern part of the state are in excellent shape. Van Duyn has just returned from an inspection trip.

"Oats are running from 30 to 35 bushels to the acre, and the corn is two weeks ahead of former years and looking fine. Des Moines people are fooled on crop conditions in the state because it is dryer around here than in any other place in Iowa. Pastures are still green and there is no occasion for alarm over a short food supply this winter."

They acquire a stock ...ommon possessions and, when ... spell is over they are apt to ... for the possession of it. This ...d seems provisional and tem- ...y.

...e next stage comes when he is ... ten or twelve years old and it ...times has the element of perma- ...y in it. What has already been ...applies partly to this more per- sonal phase of his team work. He and his chum may become chums for life, and they almost surely will, if they are living in the same community when they enter the next stage.

The third period begins when he is twelve or thirteen. That has been identified as the gang period. Here, again, his attachments are more or less impersonal, though restricted to the gang. The social nature is unfolding in new ways and they do new things, new even to their forgetful fathers, who wonder why boys are such strange creatures, and declare they were never like them.

In this period of team work, they get together by neighborhoods, as a rule, under the direction of some boy who is a natural leader and assumes all the functions of a leader without appointment and without hesitation.

The fourth stage of his team work is that later chum period, when the gang breaks up and they come out of it, as the animals came out of the ark, two by two. He ties up with some special boy and likes him better than any other boy that ever lived, and they are apt to be friends all the rest of their lives. He will like play, but it is different now. This is the pairing age. He and his chum will have many things to talk about, but the two paramount topics will be their future careers and their "girls," as they always call them.

The fifth stage of his boyhood team work is when he has a great inclination to form an intimate attachment with some fairy creature whom he considers the most angelic being on earth. His sentiments about girls have changed. Something new has waked up in his soul. He can talk with his chum about it, but with no one else. They are just alike on that subject and know how to be confidential. A great day has dawned upon him. Imagination is at new tasks. The rational and deliberative faculties are in the field. Sentiment hangs haloes over the outlying future. Each stage of his friendship has added something to him and now this one seems to put some finishing touches to his rapidly crystalizing character. His team work has been a success. He is ready for a new life.

Another mo- ...ve must be touched, that he is a ...rt of the household and what he can ... is of the highest value in itself. ...nd so it is. Manual labor has men- ...l and moral value; and when special ...ients are utilized it gives a special ...aining for his life work. And when ...ey are used in the equipment of the ...ome, he derives a special reward ...om it. Drawing, the graphic arts, mu- ...c, modeling, writing, reading aloud, ...eciting—these may have a productive ...lace in his home life. He has to be ...llowed to be his own self and do ...hat he can do.

...That standing is not at the center ...or is it sitting on the throne, but by the side or under the wing of the head of the home. He is a boy, but only a boy. He holds the future, but must be held, at present. He is not to be a prig, an overfed pet; nor a pig, overfed pork; nor a despot, an over-indulged dependent. He is not the center about which the family revolves nor a despot adapting it to his caprices. When a boy rules the home he ruins himself. He is to be adjusted to the family life and not the reverse. He may be a born ruler, but is to be under regents till he comes into his own inheritance and thereby learns how to rule.

But, in that subordination, he is entitled to find respect for his personality, his talents, his individual tastes, his elemental and God-given right of choice, on the proper exercise of which his efficiency in life depends. Even from the start, his will must not be over ridden, but stimulated and steered. If there is a clash between his will and that of the household head, all that the latter can do is to set forth the penalty of the wrong choice, let him have all the facts of the case before him in the decision, let him know that the penalties cannot be escaped. The plans for him must be positive, constructive, optimistic, sympathetic; not negative nor destructive nor gloomy nor autocratic. Those plans are adapted to him and adapt him to the home people. He and his pa can do team work, as he assists with manual or mental or mechanical labor—with typewriter or at bookkeeping or garden making or farming. And yet, often must obedience be exacted of him, without explanation or option, and he must know what that authority means. Ordinarily, when his sense of partnership with his parents has been intelligently and practically murtured, he gets discipline and delight, efficiency and satisfaction, out of it. It is a whole university in embryo, with technology thrown in. Even the care of pets is of great importance in teaching him gentleness and unselfishness and sense of responsibility. They make use of the whole boy in that way. His imagination comes to the aid of the family. To call a boy good for nothing and lazy, just because he dreams, is a degradation of the one who says it. To accuse him of doing wrong is to suggest to his imagination that form of wrong doing.

IN AGONY WITH ITCHING

"About four years ago I broke out with sores on my arms like boils. After two months they were all over my body, some coming, and some going away. In about six months the boils quit, but my arms, neck and body broke out with an itching, burning rash. It would burn and itch, and come out in pimples like grains of wheat. I was in a terrible condition; I could not sleep or rest. Parts of my flesh were raw, and I could scarcely bear my clothes on. I could not lie in bed in any position and rest. In about a year the sores extended down to my feet. Then I suffered agony with the burning, itching sores. I could hardly walk and for a long time I could not put on socks.

"All this time I was trying everything I could hear of, and had the skill of three doctors. They said it was eczema. I got no benefit from all this. I was nearly worn out, and had given up in despair of ever being cured when I was advised by a friend to try Cuticura Remedies. I purchased Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent, and used exactly as directed. I used the Cuticura Remedies constantly for four months, and nothing else, and was perfectly cured. It is now a year, and I have not had the least bit since. I am ready to praise the Cuticura Remedies at any time. (Signed) E. L. Cate, Exile, Ky., Nov. 10, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 21, K, Boston.

Harold Knows the Signs.

Five-year-old Harold's older sister was in the habit of making a good many demands on him. Generally her requests for favors, usually the running of errands around the house, were prefaced by what she considered subtle flattery.

"Now, Harold," she began one day, "you're a dear, sweet little boy, and you know I love you—" but Harold cut her short.

"Well, Ethel," he said, earnestly, "if it's upstairs, I won't go."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Claude Vautin, an English mining engineer, who has been prospecting in Peru, returned the other day on the steamship Zacapa. Besides looking after mining property, he has been collecting interesting antinquities of the country.

One of the most interesting things he brings back with him is a map of South America made by the Jesuits in 1592. It gives an outline of the land as far north as Cuba and is apparently accurate. Its purpose is evidently plain, for every missionary station in the country at that time is indicated on the map, and the line of travel necessary to reach them is marked out. This map was obtained by Mr. Vautin at Puno, Peru.

Another interesting collection he brought back is the death masks of the Incas. These were hammered out of metal and placed over the faces of the dead. Three of these obtained by Mr. Vautin are of sheet gold.

Why Panama Government Lands Are the Best Purchase in the Whole World Today

They are the most fertile lands on earth.

They have only recently been thrown open to Americans.

They have heretofore been devoid of transit facilities.

They will soon have the markets of the world at their doors.

They can be had on terms which make them virtually a gift.

$2.50 per acre down, and $2.50 in four years with no taxes to pay until completion of title. The profits from tropical agriculture are almost beyond belief, and 1000 per cent is not uncommon.

(The United Fruit Company has 20,000 acres in sugar which cost less than $100,000 four years ago. They reported a profit last year exceeding $1,000,000. This year they will have 50,000 acres under cultivation.) Parts of Panama have a delightful climate, with a mean temperature of 80 degrees, and a variation of never more than 10 degrees on either side.

The rainfall is ample, but not excessive, and so distributed throughout the year as to give the very best results. Panama has been kept back solely by lack of stable government and a total absence of transportation facilities. The United States Government is now back of Panama, while transit facilities are near at hand.

Cannot anyone realize that with ships passing through the Canal to almost every point on the globe, that the world's markets will be opened to this region as no other point on earth?

For a man who can anticipate what these great impending changes mean a fortune lies within his grasp. So far as the selection of lands is concerned, we are in a better position to do this for you than though you were in Panama to act for yourself, as we have experts who are familiar with the country. If you leave the selection of the lands to us, and become dissatisfied with your purchase,

We Will Return Your Money Upon Demand at Any Time Within Two Years

The title is perfect, being a government title. Such an opportunity as is now presented can never occur again, and NOW is the time to act.

Deyoe Starts Reform

"It is not too much to say that more evil results come from improper heating and unsanitary ventilating of school rooms than from any one cause."

This is the declaration of State Superintendent Deyoe.

One of the things which the present state superintendent plans to make better in the rural schools of Iowa is that of having the rooms heated and ventilated with some regard for the health of the pupils. In a circular to school officers just issued this point is emphasized at this time so that preparation may be made for the coming school year. "To prove the inefficiency of the common stove method one should visit his school on a cold day. The evidence will be conclusive. Children can not do efficient work in foul air, nor should they sit in drafts. By small additional expense, up-to-date heating plants can be put in which will remove all the objections."

The state superintendent does not recommend anything expensive, but calls attention to the fact that there are several simple systems of securing circulation of the air that are working perfectly. The observation of Superintendent Deyoe is that there is perhaps no other one thing so much neglected as this.

Senator Hammill

The Register and Leader mentions Senator Hammill of Britt as a possible candidate for governor. Mr. Hammill is not a candidate for that office, but he is liable to break into some state office in the future. If he ever does become a candidate for this or any other office there will be no mistake about the people knowing that he is in the game.—Britt News.

The Same In Klemme

The town councils at Corwith, Garner and other towns have passed ordinances regulating the speed of automobiles in town, and providing other requirements as to lights, horns, etc. In view of the large number of automobile accidents occurring daily over the country, the town councils should everywhere respond to their responsibilities and duties by passing such regulations and thus safeguard the interests of the people. Violations of the state auto law take place frequently in Kanawha, and no respect for the law can be expected unless the example is set by those "higher up" and who will also see that it is enforced.—Kanawha Record.

Married

We missed a very important item of news last week. It was not really our fault, for when two popular young people decide to travel this life's rough road in double harness, they have no right to keep the fact from the local paper.

However, it has developed that on Wednesday, July 12th, 1911, Mr. Tim Waddingham and Miss Anna Blumer were united in the holy bonds of matrimony at Mason City, Iowa. These young people are well and favorably known in Klemme and have a large circle of friends who wish them much happiness and prosperity. Mr. and Mrs Waddingham have gone to housekeeping in the Lembgen residence in Klemme.

Showers to the north, south, east and west, but Klemme seems to be immune.

At last Klemme got a small shower Tuesday night — just enough to nicely lay the dust. It beat none all to pieces, however.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Gruetzmacher were at Charles City, Sunday, and took in the circus at Mason City, Monday.

The following faithful followers of the "Peerless Leader" went to Forest City yesterday to hear Wm. J. Bryan speak at the Chautauqua: Louis Sampson, C. H. Lenz, Herman Miller, Aug. Lau, Geo. Gruetzmacher, A Kirkwood and N. L. Palmer.

Klemme furnished a nice lot of stock for the Chicago market this week. Wednesday morning W. R. Bloom and Herman Miller each shipped one car of hogs, and on Sunday seven cars of stock were shipped from this station, as follows: H. G. Miller one car hogs, W. R. Bloom one car hogs, Jos. Johnson two cars cattle, Ben Swalve one car cattle, Oliver McGee one car of cattle and C. F. Busch one car of cattle.

Did you ever run a newspaper? If not, you have missed a whole lot of fun. It's a continual round of pleasure and everybody has a word of praise and encouragement. One person will cuss you for not getting his name in the paper and the next one will cuss you because you printed something about him. If something sensational happens in the community and you print the facts, some will rake you up and down for advertising the town's wickedness, while if you keep mum, others will say you are a coward and dare not print the news You're cussed if you do and cussed if you don't and it's fun, fun all the time. If you don't believe it, we'll sell out to you and you can try it.

Charley Ax had all kinds of experiences on circus day at Mason City. In the morning about the time he got ready to start, one of his horses took sick and he had to doctor it up then he changed his clothes and started in such a hurry that he forgot to put any money in the pocket of his Sunday trousers, so when he wanted any spending money he had to look up a friend. The party he went with in an automobile took their dinner with them. When Charley returned to the auto at noon, he found that some dog had made away with his share of the "eats." Notwithstanding all these handicaps, Charley reports a fine time.

America's Influence in Paraguay.

The expansion of American intellectual and moral interests in Paraguay is more promising than our commercial progress. Following the lead of Sarmiento in Argentina, Paraguay has organized her primary education on American lines, and, if properly encouraged, will shape the courses in her higher schools on the American plan. The government supports ten young men at American universities. Publishers supply schoolbooks and an order for school furniture was recently placed in the United States. Both public and private libraries contain the works of Wheaton, Story and other American constitutional writers, of which use is freely made, because Paraguay took the Constitution of the United States as a model when she amended her own at the close of the Seven Years' war.

The GIRL of MY DREAMS

A NOVELIZATION OF THE PLAY BY WILBUR D. NESBIT AND OTTO HAUERBACH

SYNOPSIS.

rry Swifton is expecting a visit from fiancee, Lucy Medders, a Quakeress he met in the country. His auto es into another machine containing utiful woman and a German count. woman's hat is ruined and Harry pes. His sister, Caroline, arrives at ome to play hostess. Socrates Prim- cousin of Lucy's, arrives with a intended as a present for Lucy. Har- trailed to his home by the Count Mrs. Gen. Blazes, who demands her a duplicate of which she says has delivered at Harry's house. She is reat fear lest her husband hear of escapade. Lucy Medders and her er arrive and the count is hidden in room and Mrs. Blazes in another.

CHAPTER IV.—(Continued.)

All right!" Harry laughed, drop- her hands. "You always have r way with me. A girl ought to be ity careful who kisses her after is married, too, don't you think?" ucy smiled quaintly. Some of Har- jests were a bit too flippant for Harry went on:

Really, I'm mighty sorry I didn't t you at the train. But, you see, I a little trouble with my machine morning."

It was as well that thee did not et us. It would have spoiled fa- r's plans. We wanted to find thee thy usual atmosphere."

gain Harry looked quickly at her. e surroundings were such as to ke him keenly alive to any possible gestion of some other meaning n her words implied. But Lucy's e was as serious as ever. She ked about the room, and sighed:

Thy house is just lovely."

It will be," Harry said, glancing prehensively at the door of the m where Mrs. Blazes was waiting iently for her hat—"it will be en it's fixed up. Some things have be moved out."

And will thy sister—Carolyn—will show me about the house?" Lucy ked.

Certainly," Harry answered, gal- tly. "But you don't need her. Just ke yourself at home. Go anywhere u like."

Lucy started toward the room where rry had placed Mrs. Blazes. But rry was following her to detain her.

And in here?" Lucy asked. "What re you there, Harry?"

There? There?" Harry stammered. hy—why, that's just some old junk there. Wouldn't interest you at ."

A junk room? How odd!"

Yes—I—you see—I used to have ad of collecting junk."

The sweat was standing on Harry's ow. He knew that Mrs. Blazes could erhear him, and his brief experience th that lady taught him that she d a natural feminine aversion to be- termed junk. If she should de- de to assert herself by opening the or and making a few remarks! The ought was appalling.

Come, Lucy," he suggested. "Let's and see—and see the goldfish."

Nay, Harry," she smiled. "Let me e thy collection of junk. I did not ow thee were an authority on that."

Later, Lucy," he said. "Later."

Then I will peep into thy library," e decided. "Is not this it?"

She started to the other door, open- g into the room where the Count as whiling the time away and con- nting his soul with such patience as could muster.

No, no!" Harry said, almost fran- ally, catching Lucy's arm. "Not ow!"

But why, Harry?"

I—I've got a little surprise in there r you, Lucy."

A surprise? Oh, surprise me now!"

That would spoil it all," he assured r, feeling that his ruse was work- g.

How can it surprise me later, when know it is to be a surprise, any- ay?" she asked, with feminine logic.

Well—it will be a surprise—and I that is—"

Now, Harry, thee has aroused my riosity. I will see now."

No," he told her, firmly. "Not now. ater."

But now, Harry."

Oh, come, Lucy," he said, with a an's usual lack of judgment. "Be asonable."

Ah, thee call me unreasonable! t, if father knew that already thee ad called me that!" she pouted.

No, no. I didn't say you were un- asonable. I just—just asked you to e reasonable."

But that is the same thing!" She amped her little foot with the words.

Lucy, you misjudge me," he said, olemnly. "I simply was not ready for ou to look in there yet."

Alas!" Lucy almost wept. "To hink that we have had our first quar- l already!"

Harry came near to her and mur- ured:

"Well, let us make up. One kiss to show me you forgive me."

"Nay, Harry," she protested, but not very forcibly. "Thee knowest I do not approve of that."

"How can you approve of a thing until you have it?" Harry wanted to know. And then—

Socrates Primmer, hat box in hand, appeared in the doorway, and what he saw sent his heart thumping to his boot heels.

"Woe is me!" he said, sadly. "The time to give her my present is not yet."

And as he turned to go he collided with Carolyn. That plump young lady accepted his apology gaily, and left him still delivering it as he went on down the hall, while she rushed to Lucy and greeted her effusively.

"We're going to have the jolliest time ever!" Carolyn cried delightedly. "Come. Leave Harry to his own miserable company, and I'll show you your room."

As she turned, she remembered something.

"Harry," she said, "I want some pillows out of your room."

Carolyn rushed to the door of Harry's bedroom and seized the knob. Harry sank weakly into a chair and awaited the blow.

"Well, Let Us Make Up. One Kiss to Show Me You Forgive Me."

"It's all over," he said to himself. Carolyn tried the door, but it would not open.

"Why, Harry!" she said. "Your room is locked."

"Eh? Oh! What?" Harry said. "Locked? Now, who could have locked it?"

He fumbled in his pockets, meanwhile listening acutely for the sound which would tell him that Mrs. Blazes was presenting herself. But, blessings upon her head! She did no such thing. With a gasp of relief Harry said:

"I've left the key somewhere. I'll look for it after while."

Lucy looked at Carolyn with an awe-stricken face.

"Is that Harry's bedroom?" she asked, in horrified tones.

"Why, yes!" Carolyn answered.

"And I desired to see it! Oh! Harry, what must thee think of me. And how nice it was of thee to tell me it was only a junk room."

She went out with Carolyn, leaving Harry sunk dejectedly in a big chair.

"If I had tried to fix this up for myself," he said, sighing deeply, "it couldn't have been worse."

But it could be—and was about to be—much worse.

CHAPTER V.

Unannounced, there entered the room a slender woman, whose face was half hidden by a huge, flopping, bushel-basket type of hat, the brim of which was draped with flaunting, flapping lace, and from whose crown lifted into the air a gorgeous array of feathers and ribbons and flowers. A tight-fitting gown, with the skirt so hobbled that her steps were painfully mincing, encased her form, and from behind her drifted the most remarkable train that ever was. She tottered in on her high-heeled shoes and peered about the place with a mingling of coyness and assurance that was amazing. Harry looked up, saw her, and groaned. Then he lapsed back further into the chair and mentally gave himself up to the inevitable with the words:

"Ye gods! Daphne Daffington!"

She looked him over coolly, and said:

"You!"

He nodded his head weakly. Things had been piling themselves up too rapidly for him to be able to face the situation with any assurance whatever.

"After all these years!" she exclaimed. "To find you at last. Where have you been all this time?"

"Oh"—confusedly—"I've been here and there—first at home and then away off."

"Well," she said, pursing her lips determinedly, "you're away off if you think you can shake me as easily now as you did the last time."

"I'm sorry, Daphne," Harry told her. "I know you have a right to think harshly of me."

"A right!" she said, scornfully.

"I know," he confessed, "that you think I treated you shabbily."

"Shabbily?" she sniffed. "You only call it shabby to ask me to go to a ball game, and leave me under an awning in a pouring rain—and that's the last I see of you in two whole, long, weary years!"

"I guess that wasn't right, Daphne," he acknowledged.

"You said you were going for a cab," she accused him.

Harry jumped up suddenly.

"I'll go and get you one now," he offered.

Daphne stopped him with a steely glance, and demanded:

"Where's that hat I sent here?"

Harry stared at her for the moment with utter blankness. Then it slowly filtered through his brain that she was the milliner to whom Mrs. Blazes had telephoned. Daphne misinterpreted his stare for one of admiration, and with a remarkable imitation of shyness, she asked:

"Do you think my new gown is becoming, really?"

"It's a beaut," Harry informed her. "It's a beaut. How do you get it on? With a shoe horn?"

"There you go again!" Daphne said, accusingly. "You were always so full of sarcasm that you acted sour. I want that hat I sent over here."

"You never sent any hat here."

"Yes, I did. A yellow hat, trimmed with red poppies. It was a duplicate of an imported model that I sold to one of my best patrons."

"I've heard of that hat," Harry mused. Then he said, brightly: "Why, you're not the renowned Mlle. Daphne, the milliner, are you?"

"None other," preened Daphne. "You see, I have risen to fame and achieved my ambitions, while you have been content to remain in obscurity."

"To my sorrow," Harry replied, "that is too true, Daphne. But about the hat, I really know nothing of it. There must be a mistake."

"It came here, all right," Daphne replied. "The party who got it wouldn't give his name. He just gave this number."

"Well, I wish such a hat were here. The messenger must have taken it to the wrong house. Now, Daphne, I want just such a hat as that, and I'll pay you a good price for it."

"Ye Gods! Daphne Daffington!"

Daphne shook her head judicially, and fluttered her hands as though she had been asked to pluck a few stars from the sky.

"I can't make another," she said. "There aren't any more like the original. I had two models, but they're both gone. One I sold to Mrs. Blazes—"

"Mrs. Blazes!" Harry interrupted.

"Yes," Daphne said, "Mrs. General Blazes."

Harry looked at the door of his room, expecting Mrs. Blazes to come forth and enter the discussion. What construction Daphne might put on her presence, concealed, in his house he feared to imagine. This, coupled with his old flirtation with Daphne and her sensistively jealous disposition, would be sure to make things unpleasant for him.

"Why?" she asked. "What is Mrs. Blazes to you?"

"Nothing," Harry said, fervently. "Absolutely nothing."

"Well, you acted queer. You always did act queer," Daphne said. "Anyway, the other hat was sent here, and I want to get it."

"But it isn't here," Harry assured her. "If it were, I wouldn't let you have it, because I want one like it myself. Can't you make one for me?"

"I might," Daphne said, assuming the coy air that she fancied to be so irresistible. "Why do you want a hat? Is it for your sister?"

"No, Daphne. You see, it's this way. I—I'm to have a guest—two guests. A young lady I'm greatly interested in—you see, it has been so long since we parted that I am sure you have forgotten me—and so—well this young lady is to visit my sister, and—well, I've got to get that hat."

"Is the hat for her?" Daphne asked, interestedly.

HE WILL TAKE ALL OR NONE

That's What Citizens Thought of Honest Man When Seeking for a Treasurer.

Upon a certain ocasion an eminent citizen was approached by a delegation of other eminent citizens, the leader of whom proceeded to say:

"Friend, it must be known to the that we have had dishonest men in office, and the taxpayers have suffered loss thereby?"

"Truly the facts have come to my ear," was the reply.

"We would further state that we are a delegation looking for a new man to fill the position of county treasurer."

"And in me you will find an honest one."

"That is to say, thee wilt not graft?"

"Not the value of a cent."

"There will be much cash to handle.

"But it will be safe with me."

"And there will be constant temptations."

"But I shall withstand them all."

"Hast ever handled public funds?"

"No, but I again assure thee of my honesty."

"Friend," continued the speaker for the delegation, "thou art honest because thou hast never been tempted. We are now losing about ten per cent by graft. Let the office be given to an honest man and he'll either take all or none, and the chances are about even up. We will pass on!"

MORAL.

The honest man of today is the rascal of tomorrow.

50,000 NEEDED TO HARVEST WESTERN CANADA'S CROP

Will Take 160,000 Altogether to Take Care of Yield of Prairie Provinces.

One hundred and sixty-two thousand farm hands will be required this year to harvest the grain crops of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Of this number the local help will provide about 112,000, which will leave about 50,000 extra farm hands. There is, therefore, a great demand for this class of laborers in all parts of Western Canada. In order to meet the requirements it has been arranged to grant very low railway rates from all boundary points reached by Canadian railways. In order to secure these rates it will be necessary for you to call on one of the following authorized agents of the Canadian government: M. V. McInnes, 176 Jefferson Avenue, Detroit, Michigan; C. A. Laurier, Marquette, Michigan; J. S. Crawford, Syracuse, N. Y.; Thos. Hetherington, Room 202, 73 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.; H. M. Williams, 413 Gardner Bldg., Toledo, Ohio; Geo. Aird, 216 Traction-Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis, Indiana; C. J. Broughton, Room 412 Merchants' Loan & Trust Bldg., Chicago, Ill.; Geo. A. Hall, 2nd Floor, 125 Second Street, Milwaukee, Wis.; E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.; Chas. Pilling, Clifford Block, Grand Forks, N. D.; J. M. MacLachlan, Box 197, Watertown, S. D.; W. V. Bennett, Room 4, Bee Bldg., Omaha, Neb.; W. H. Rogers, 125 West 9th Street, Kansas City, Mo.; Benj. Davies, Room 6, Dunn Block, Great Falls, Montana; J. B. Carbonneau, Jr., 217 Main Street, Biddeford, Me.; J. N. Grieve, Auditorium Building, Spokane, Wash.

This will give to intending harvest laborers a splendid opportunity to look over the magnificent wheat fields of Western Canada and will give them the best evidence that can be secured of the splendid character of that country from the farmer's standpoint. There will be at least 200,000,000 bushels of wheat harvested within the area of the three provinces above named this year and it is expected that the yield will run from 15 to 25 bushels per acre. Many farmers, this year, will net, as a result of their labors, as much as $8 to $10 per acre and many of them will deposit as profits as much as $8,000 to $10,000.

The wide publicity that has been given to the excellent crop that is being raised in central Alberta and southern Alberta, central Saskatchewan and southern Saskatchewan, and also in Manitoba, will increase the price of lands in these three provinces from $3 to $5 per acre and the man who was fortunate enough to secure lands at from $12 to $20 per acre will have reason for gratification that he exercised sufficient forethought to invest, while the man who was fortunate enough to secure a homestead of 160 acres free will also have a greater reason to feel pleased.

Notwithstanding the great addition to the acreage this year over last and the large crop that will be ready for harvest there is no reason to become alarmed that the harvest will not be reaped successfully. There will be a great demand for these low rates during the next couple of months; be sure to make your application to any of the agents above mentioned that may be in your territory at as early a date as possible. Harvesting will commence about the 25th of July and continue for five or six weeks, when threshing will begin and there will be plenty of work until November.

Even love may ripen into friendship.

ONLY WORK COUNTS

WOMAN IN BUSINESS SHOULD NOT BE SENSITIVE.

She Is Not Paid Because She Is Pretty or Stylish, but Because She Is Useful to the Business.

The woman who finds herself facing the problem of earning a living should immediately proceed to get rid of her sensitive feelings, if she has any. She would do well to try to sink her personality during business hours and keep saying to herself that only her work counts, that she is not paid because she is pretty or stylish, but just because she is useful to the business which pays her wages. When she fails in that her good looks will not save her. A capable girl with, perhaps, neither beauty nor style, will succeed her.

The employers who are hiring girls for their charms are few, and the girls who have to work are many. Feminine workers are striving to secure the wages of men, which can only be done by doing men's work. Now men do not expect praise and it does not turn their head when it is given. As a rule they do not accept reproof as a personal injury.

The just employer gives both praise and blame. When he pays promptly he expects good work every day and not according to the feelings of his workers. When there is a valid reason for leniency—like illness, for instance—he is kind, but for shirking he has no mercy. A man who employs more than fifty women told me that he had no trouble with them because he treated them exactly as he would treat men. His creed was so much work for so much money and he reasoned that no woman had a right to accept a position she could not fill. I think that was fully understood by his office, for he was in the habit of going away and returning without warning, and he seemed satisfied with the result.

Women are not yet accustomed to being treated with the lack of courtesy which makes the atmosphere of a business place. A man whose brain is turning over important plans cannot give particular attention to the tone in which he addresses an employee. It may be brusque without his knowing it or intending any unkindness. A man would pay no attention to tone as long as words were decent, but to a woman's sensitive ear the tone is everything. It seriously affects her work, so business men claim, and it is the necessity for avoiding trouble that turns them in favor of male workers. I saw a badly ironed sheet taken back to the kitchen recently by a woman who is never anything but kind to her employees. "When you find clean clothes that look like this, Mary, do not bring them to me; do them over." The girl burst into tears with the remark that nobody had ever found fault with her laundry till then. It required some reasoning to bring her to a proper frame of mind, and the woman decided to replace her by one less sensitive at the earliest opportunity. It came last week.—Betty Bradeen in The Buffalo Enquirer.

Memorial to Famous Women.

The chapel of the new Liverpool cathedral, which is to be open next summer, has a scheme of beautiful stained glass windows commemorative of the deeds of good women. Besides the women of the Bible the following are commemorated: Dr. Alicia Marvel and all who have laid down their lives for their sisters, Grace Darling and all courageous maidens, Josephine Butler and all brave champions of purity, Mary Collet and all prayerful women, Louise Stewart and all the army of martyrs, Christine Rossetti and all sweet singers, Catherine Gladstone and all loyal-hearted wives, Elizabeth Barrett Browning and all women who have seen the infinite in things, Angela Burdett-Coutts and all women almoners of the king of heaven, Mother Cecile and all women loving and large hearted in counsel.

Never leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed and cannot be obtained when on board the cars or steamships. For sale by all dealers.

Extravagance in public and private life was scored in a speech Senator Kenyon of Iowa made in the United States senate. He thought it was time congress did something to decrease the cost of living. Commissioner Says The Yearly Loss Runs Into Millions

COULD BE SAVED BY MORE CARE

The Department Estimate Shows That the Annual Loss On Eggs To Farmers and Merchants of Iowa Is Over $7,000,000

Des Moines.—Iowa farmers suffer a loss of $7,000,000 annually by reason of improper care and handling of eggs, according to W. B. Barney, state dairy and food commissioner. The loss is especially heavy during the hot months of the summer Much of this loss could be averted, he says, if the farmers would observe some established rules as to the care of eggs. "Provide plenty of clean, dry nests. Eggs should be gathered daily in cool weather and twice a day in hot or rainy weather. Use dirty and small eggs at home. Do not wash eggs. Keep your eggs in a cool, dry place, free from odors. If kept in the cellar do not set egg case on a damp floor Market eggs as often as possible. Keep eggs cool or out of the sun when taking them to town. Every farmer should have an egg candler and candle all questionable eggs. A conservative estimate made by this department shows that the annual loss on eggs to the farmers and merchants of Iowa is over $7,000,000, caused by improper care and handling. Is it not worth your while to consider this matter?"

One is my sister; the other is—the er girl."

But Harry was hurrying her toward library door. At first he had unsciously started her toward the er one, but halted, remembering t Mrs. Blazes was there. He muted directed her to go into the library, d then said in a hasty whisper:

"Don't pay any attention to the n in there. Just hide yourself in re a few minutes, and I'll get the is to go back downstairs on some etext."

As the door closed on Daphne he t the room and so he did not hear om the library the voice of the unt saying:

"Vell, py gracious! Liddle Daphne." Nor the amazed tones of Daphne as e exclaimed:

"Why, Count! What are you doing re?"

CHAPTER VI.

For a time there was silence in the om. Then the door of one room pened and Mrs. Blazes peered anxsly forth.

"I wonder why he is so long getting at hat," she said to herself.

The door across from her began open, and she hurriedly dashed ck and closed her door. The Count d Daphne came from the library.

"indeed," Daphne said, "he might ve told me you were in there. But aybe he meant it as a surprise to e."

She simpered and peeped roguishly the Count.

"I hope," the Count said, "it vas a rprise. To think dot now ve haff meetings."

"The pleasure is all yours, sweet oble of teutonic blood," said Daphne, ith fine sarcasm.

The Count looked at her with pique, haking his head mournfully.

"To think!" he sighed. "After all I spend on you, den you leave me vaiting for you in such disgracefulness on der corner!"

Daphne tried to explain.

"Honest, County," she said, at which pet name he flinched. "Honest, County, I didn't mean to disappoint you, but a traveling gentleman I hadn't seen for a long time came through, and as I hadn't seen him for so long, I went to supper with him. You see, the trouble with you and me was the way we talked. Half the time I couldn't understand you and the other half you couldn't understand me."

The Count looked at her blankly. Her explanation did not explain at all.

"Such a deceitfulness!" he said. "And after I gave you my ring. How dared you keep it?"

The Count's haughty indignation over her having kept his ring was tinctured with a little twinge of conscience over the fact that, separated from them by only a thin door, was another lady to whom, that very day, he had given a similar ring. The Count had the habit of "wishing on" a ring, as an incident of his various flir-tations. And no sooner did he wish it on then he began to wish it back.

"I didn't keep your old ring!" Daphne retorted.

"You didn't?"

"No. I gave it away to a gentleman friend."

"Vat!" the Count asked, in noble horror. "You gave my beaudiful ring avay. Ach! To think of it, mit all its family unt historical significance, being on der finger of some common person!"

For a moment the very air was tense between them. The Count glared at Daphne, and Daphne returned his glare with fiery interest. She leaned over until her sharp nose was within three inches of his face, and said to him in razory accents:

"You can't insult me. I've been insulted by experts!"

The Count jumped as though he had been pricked by a pin. This setting of him down as a nonentity, accompanied by a sharp snap of the finger, was a bit more cavalier treatment than he had ever received. He could think of nothing to say in reply. Daphne, now thoroughly angry, went on:

"I want you to understand that General Blazes—"

"You gave my ring to Cheneral Blazes!" the Count gasped.

"Sure," Daphne replied.

"Mein Gott im himmel!"

With one of his rings on the General's finger and the other on the finger of the General's wife, the thought was too much. The Count dropped limply into a chair and wagged his head grimly.

"Both rings in der same family! Ach, Gott!" he murmured.

Harry hurried into the room, and stopped in astonishment at sight of them.

"Here!" he exclaimed, "you shouldn't have come out here. Get back in the library for a minute and then I'll let you escape."

Daphne and the Count meekly entered the library, and Harry ran to the door of his bedroom and was about to open it when he heard Carolyn calling him:

"Oh, Harry, where are you?"

Mrs. Blazes, hearing him at her door, opened it and was now coming out, when, to her utter astonishment he shoved her back into the room and pulled the door to.

"I'm coming," he called to Carolyn, and hurried out again.

Simultaneously the door of the library opened, and Daphne emerged.

"The idea!" she ejaculated. "I won't breathe the same air with that German foreigner!"

Then she heard some one approaching the room, and consternation seized her. She looked nervously about for a place of concealment.

"Where can I hide? Where can I hide?" she wailed.

The voices came nearer, and desperately she rushed to the door of the bedroom wherein was Mrs. Blazes. Opening the door, she dashed in.

With mutual exclamations of recognition she and Mrs. Blazes saw each other. And the door was still trembling shut when Lucy and Harry strolled into the den.

Sisters in affliction and adversity, Mrs. Blazes and Daphne were not long in confiding to each other, in bated whispers, the reasons for their presence. Daphne's position was one well calculated to upset her nerves. Outside were two men with whom she had flirted, one of whom wanted a ring he had given her and which she had presented to the husband of the lady with whom she was talking.

On the other hand, Mrs. Blazes was not happily situated. Without a perfect duplicate of her hat she felt that she could not go home. She could not leave the room now, to go home, anyway.

And now, locked in with her, was the only person who could make a duplicate of her hat.

"What are we to do?" she tearfully asked Daphne.

"Be quiet and listen to what goes on out there," Daphne told her. "Mr. Swifton is just as anxious to get us out as we are to get out. If some one else doesn't drop in and have to be hidden, I think he will work it some way."

"Well, if I get out of here undiscovered," said Mrs. Blazes, raising her hand to wipe away a tear, "I'll never flirt again."

Daphne's sharp eyes saw a familiar ring on her finger.

"What a lovely ring, Mrs. Blazes!" she dissimulated. "Did your husband give it to you?"

"What? Oh, this ring?" Mrs. Blazes answered guiltily, folding her other hand about it carelessly, so as to conceal it. "Oh, no, that's just a ring that belongs to a friend of mine."

Daphne could not understand it, and yet she could not ask any more questions. She contented herself with saying:

"I've heard that sometimes rings brought bad luck."

CHAPTER VII.

When Harry and Lucy strolled into the den, just after Daphne had succeeded in getting into the room with Mrs. Blazes, they were followed by Mr. Medders. Mr. Medders was finding many things to interest him in Harry's home. This was the first time he had ever been where he might saunter from room to room and examine pictures, books and bric-a-brac—many of which were of a kind that were not popular in his own environment.

"Oh, Harry," Lucy said ,"this is just the most delightful visit!"

"I'm doing everything I can to make it pleasant for you, and I hope nothing happens to spoil it," Harry said.

Medders, moving about the den, stopped at the door of the library.

"What is in there, my boy?" he asked. "I haven't been in that room yet."

"There?" Harry repeated, nervously. "Oh, that's just a junk room."

"Thee means a bunk room," Lucy corrected him, mischievously.

"Yes," Harry said. "It's a junk bunk room."

"Varily," said Mr. Medders, "a junk bunk room must be interesting."

And before Harry could stop him he had opened the door and started in, only to step back and say:

"Why, there is some one in here."

"Is there?" Harry asked, affecting surprise, hastily trying to think how big the headlines would be in the papers the next day.

"Why, who can it be?" Lucy asked.

Harry, feeling that all was lost, still racked his brain for some half-way reasonable explanation of the presence, as he thought, of Daphne as well as the Count, in his library.

"Why, you see," he began, "they—they are—"

"They?" Medders said. "There is only one man in here."

Harry was lost for language and bereft of thought when the Count stalked majestically from the door. No one else could be seen in the library. Harry looked swiftly through the doorway into every corner of that room, asking himself: "Where the dickens has she gone?"

She was no longer there, that much was certain. And he turned to see the Count bowing stiffly to Mr. Medders and Lucy. The Count held a book in his hand, and as his head rose from one of his deep bows he winked earnestly at Harry—a helpful, friendly wink, which was as though it said for him not to worry, that the Count would back him up in any story he told.

"I beg your pardon," Harry rallied. "I had quite forgotten the Count. Miss Medders, Mr. Medders, this is the Count von Fitz."

The Count bowed beautifully, Lucy courtesied, her father shook the Count's hand—and still everything was not explained.

"And is the gentleman thy instructor, perhaps?" Medders asked, noting the book the Count held, and associating it with the fact that the Count had been in the library.

Harry fairly bubbled with joy at this helpful suggestion, all unconsciously given by Medders.

"Yes," he said, "he is my German tutor."

VELASQUEZ A CHEAP ARTIST

As Court Painter He Received $11 a Month When He Was About Twenty-five Years Old.

Don Caspar de Guzman, Conde-Duque d'Olivarez, born in Rome in 1587, became the first minister of Philip IV. in 1621, was dismissed in 1643 after a career of mismanagement and died in exile two years later. A patron of the painter's, it was through him that Velasquez at twenty-four became court painter to the young king at eighteen. In return Velasquez painted a number of portraits for his protector. The notable example, which has recently been presented to the Hispanic museum of New York, was painted when Velasquez was about twenty-five years old, shortly after he came to court.

The canvas, measuring 51 by 85 inches, came from Capt. Robert S. Holford of London, in whose possession it had long been held after having passed through the Baillie sale in 1858, when it sold for £598 10s., and the Scarisbrick sale in 1861, when it sold for £262 10s., very moderate sums compared to the surprising figure said to have been paid for it recently. At the time it was painted Velasquez was receiving $11 a month for his services as court painter.—W. Stanton Howard, in Harper's Magazine.

Society and Religion.

"Evidently it is not of real and given society that we are speaking when we explain by the action of society the religious attributes of the human soul. It is of ideal society, of society in so far as it strives after that, that justice, that happiness, that truth, that superior harmony, of which religion is the expression."—E. Boutroux.

CURE THAT SORE THROAT

Sore throat is inflammation of the mucous membrane of the throat, and if this membrane happens to be at all sensitive a predisposition to sore throat will exist.

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic is both a preventative and a cure for sore throat because it possesses extraordinary cleansing, healing and germicidal qualities. Just a little in a glass of water, used as a gargle, will quickly relieve all soreness and strengthen the mucous membrane of the throat, and thus overcome all tendency to sore throat.

Paxtine is far superior to liquid antiseptics or Peroxide for all toilet and hygienic uses.

Paxtine may be obtained at any drug store, 25 and 50c a box, or sent postpaid upon receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass. Send for a free sample.

MISANTHROPIC.

"That's Rev. Dr. Thirdly. He shows you the way to Paradise."

"Yes. I understand that many a poor, unhappy man was married by him."

Small Boat to Sail Far.

The yawl yacht Recluta, 36 tons, has set out on a voyage of 6,000 miles, from Gosport to Buenos Ayres, the headquarters of her new owner. The little vessel carries a crew of four, and is commanded by Capt. Harry Williams, who recently took the 20-ton cutter Moyana to Odessa. All the members of the Recluta's crew are Hamshire men. She will go to Madeira, Cape Verde, Pernambuco and Monevideo. The longest sea run will be a distance of about 2,000 miles, between Cape Verde and Pernambuco.—London Standard.

Supply.

New Minister—Now just one thing more before I accept this charge. Have you got a "supply?"

Deacon—Well, yes, though we never said anything to the last preacher about it. I'll show you where it is, and get you a key, but I tell you you'll have to be just as careful about using it as the rest of us!—Puck.

Would Need It.

"Gracious, what is all that crape for?"

"I had a chance to get it at a bargain, and, you know, my husband goes in for the flying!"

Impossible.

"George acts like a fool."

"No. An actor could never come as close to nature as that."—Variety Life.

After Wiley's Scalp

Washington has been swept with wave after wave of political excitement during the past few months. The latest political explosion was the scandalous attack of Wickersham on Dr. Wiley, chemist and pure food expert of the Agricultural Department. Dr. Wiley is an untiring foe of adulterated and poisonous foods. The big food canners of the country are anxious to have Dr Wiley removed from his position of Government Chemist so that they can name his successor, who of course will be satisfactory to them and lax in enforcing the pure food law. These food adulterators, the big canners, secured an investigation of Dr. Wiley's department and all that they could find against him was a lump of excessive zeal in enforcing the pure food law. That excess consisted in his paying an assistant a trifle more than the law permitted and which amounted to only a few hundred dollars. Attorney General Wickersham, who made the investigation, recommends that Dr. Wiley be permitted to resign. If Mr. Wickersham thought he could scare Dr. Wiley out of office in that manner he has another guess coming. It has since developed that Mr. Wickersham has been guilty of violation of law in paying out money. For instance, Mr. Kellogg, who prosecuted the Standard Oil Co., drew $75,000 in a lump sum as the expenses of the prosecution. The law provided that the Department of Justice shall only pay out money on bills that are itemized, so Mr. Wickersham is much more guilty than Dr. Wiley.

Wise and Otherwise

It seems that the only "good little trusts" are the "dead little trusts."

It is suspected that Mr. Bryan went to the trouble of preparing a lengthy list of possible democratic candidates for the purpose of leaving out Gov. Harmon, of Ohio.

The trouble with Venezuela is that it has no hose to turn on Castro.

A Washington politician declares they are going to make a President in Congress this summer. Champ Clark says he can't imagine who it will be.

Amatuer writers whose articles have been rejected are convinced that there is a magazine trust.

But, if Japan comes into the arbitration pact, will California sign the treaty?

The scandal bubbles which are blown up today and pricked tomorrow must make the inventor of the daisy chain perpetual motion scheme, green with envy.

Some wily self-interested manuevering is strongly suspected in the Wiley case.

The indications are that the Irish are in favor of a "recall" of King George and Queen Mary.

"Mme. Bernhardt says she admires the American people." I'on' doubt it. She has reason to admire them $150,000 worth.

The Steel Trust is very big and strong but it evidently doesn't confer it unmanly to shed a few tears for the poor farmer every time real tariff revision is mentioned.

IT MADE A DIFFERENCE

"Have you been out in the front yard this afternoon?"

"No, why?"

"Oh, just because the contents of the flower beds have been scratched out, all over the walks. That's why!"

"Well, good gracious! I hope you don't think for a minute that I did it. I guess if you had supper to get and a hat to trim and a dress to turn you would realize that you had something else to do than scratch out flower beds, or to watch them, either, for that matter. I—"

"No one has accused you of doing it, has there?"

"Well, from the way you began the very moment you got in the house, one would think—"

"I don't suppose you realize that I spent 85 cents for the flower seed to go in those gardens, and now I'll bet there isn't a seed in one of them."

"Well—"

"If the confounded hens would only put the gardens back after they have taken them out and scratched them it would not be so bad, but they scatter them all over the yard and then fly over the fence and leave them scattered."

"I am sorry, but I can't help it."

"Well, I can help it, and I am going to help it, too!"

"Now, don't do anything you will be sorry for."

"Then let those confounded chickens stop doing things that I am sorry for! I'll bet that if I ever buy another home I will be mighty careful to find out who owns the houses each side of it, and if there are any boys on either side it'll be nix on the buy for me!"

"Fred is a good little fellow."

"Yes, he's an angel! When we tried to keep chickens he got a pet coon that got into our chicken house and reduced $9 worth of chickens to feathers, and I grinned like an idiot and told his mother that boys must have pets. Didn't I?"

"Yes."

"And when he batted a ball through our front window I wouldn't even permit his folks to pay for the damage, would I?"

"No-o."

"And since I have given up chickens and have gone to the expense of putting outside blinds on the house and spoiling the look of—"

"The outside blinds were not necessary and—"

"Now that I have gone to the expense of making a flower garden, nothing satisfies Mr. Fred but to get a lot of chickens!"

"Boys must have pets."

"Of course they must; but could he not have got some buff cochins or partridge cochins or some breed of chicken with too much weight and dignity to fly over fences But no! Nothing would suit him but to get a flock of measly bantams that are all wings and machinery and can fly like aeroplanes!"

"Well, I'll see if something cannot be done about it in a day or two. I don't like to make any trouble while he is sick."

"Sick?"

"Yes, sick."

"Who said he was sick?"

"His mother told me. And the doctor has been there twice today."

"What ails him?"

"Measles."

"Humph! A kid doesn't get very sick with the measles, does he?"

"Sometimes."

"I guess that's right—I read in today's paper where a baby died from an attack of measles."

"Fred's mother said his fever was up to 104."

"Pshaw! That's too bad. Run over dear, and see how he is, won't you?"

"Why don't you go? I've got to finish getting supper."

"Aw, a man is too clumsy to be around a sick room. Have you got any of those quince preserves left?"

"A jar or two; why?"

"Take 'em over. I remember when I was a kid and getting over the diphtheria, the first thing mother let me have to eat when I began to get well was some quince preserves. You'll never know how good those preserves tasted to me. I don't believe I ever shall forget them."

"Well, I'll run over for a minute You go and turn down the burner under the potatoes."

"And, dear—"

"Yes?"

"Tell him I'll take care of his chickens till he gets well."

"All right."

"And tell him I'll make him a kite while he is laid up. There used to be an old sailor in our neighborhood when I was a kid and—"

"All right."

"And tell him that I'll come over and tell him some stories as soon as he's better."

"Good gracious! I—"

"And tell him I'm going to bring him some sort of a toy from the 10-cent store every night, and he has got to try each day to guess what it is going to be."

"He'll be glad. Shall I say a word or two about the garden?"

"Good heavens, woman! Haven't you got any heart? What do we care about a measly little 85-cent garden? Why, in the world don't you take things as I do and not work yourself into a passion over a little punk old garden? We want the boy to get well! Fred's the best little chap I ever knew."

No More "Ticket-of-Leave" Men.

The old ticket-of-leave system—the staple of many an honest melodrama after Charles Peace—has at last gone altogether. Henceforth the discharged convict really anxious to make a clean start will not be brought into direct contact with the police. Up to now the convict has been supervised by the police on the one hand and cared for by various philanthropic societies on the other, and there has been no cooperation between the police and the societies. The new scheme is to combine into a central body the societies which have hitherto aided discharged prisoners and to give this body authority to deal with the convicts and funds to carry on the work. This body will be responsible for the convicts whose interests it serves, and the police will have no more dealings with discharged prisoners so long as they keep from further crime.—From the London Saturday Review.

Experience to Remember.

A woman and her four-year-old child were rescued early the other morning on a Welsh mountain after a terrible ordeal. They visited some relatives and started back across the Deri mountain. The woman, however, took the wrong road, and as night fell found she was lost. In the darkness, both she and the child fell into a brook. They managed to extricate themselves, but as they ran to and fro, wet through and bitterly cold, the child left its mother's side. The woman wandered about screaming for help, until a workman heard her. Search parties were at once sent out, and the child was discovered in a plantation, almost dead from exposure, with a bad wound in the head caused by falling over a rock. It had been without food, on the frozen mountain side, for sixteen hours.

Work Wins Reward of Merit.

It is interesting to know that Mrs. Arthur Nevin took up the study of bacteriology in the first place simply as a hobby, and the fact that she has been appointed bacteriologist of the Pasteur institute shows how well she did her work even as an avocation only. She is the wife of the composer Arthur Nevin, and makes a specialty of diseases of the throat and lungs. She will now have M. D. after her name.

More Feminine Frankness.

Marie Hay (Baroness Hindenburg), a young Scotch woman of two great historic families, whose childhood was one of the most extraordinary and tragic with which a future writer of fiction was ever blessed, and an extensive knowledge of the world, has chosen to begin her literary career with the historical novel, or, to be more accurate, the fictional biography; but beyond accepting the form she adheres to none of the popular recipes.

With the curious attitude to life that all Americans who have lived in England have observed in men and women of her rank, she asumes that, like the rest of the privileged class, she dwells in a separate and rarefied stratum. No laws exist for her! If she has anything to say she says it, and results are not even considered. Being a consummate woman of the world, however, she exercises this prerogative and causes her diplomatic husband no embarrassment. It is all a question of taste, and probably it is only in women of the world that taste is unerring.—North American Review.

A Sincere Compliment.

"Did you hear my speech on the extreme importance of anything in which I decide to interest myself?" inquired the minor official.

"I did," replied the experienced legislator.

"And what did you think of it?"

"It was all right, but misplaced. You have some of the finest filibustering material I ever listened to."

Even the Hobble Skirt.

"She's a wonderful girl in a way."

"Is that so?"

"Yes, she can adapt herself to any fashion."

Hall Slops Over

Editor Hall, of Goodell, opened his mouth last week and proceeded to stick his foot in it. He seems to have an idea floating around somewhere in his pate that we are peeved because he did not honor us with his presence July 4th. In this he is as much mistaken as if he had scorched his wearing apparel. We had a good celebration and there wasn't a sorehead or a rowdy in evidence so far as we know.

In the article above mentioned, Hall attempts to roast Klemme but in reality he is only slandering people from his own town. He said in part.

"All of our people celebrated in Belmond with the exception of about six (6.) These six delegates, on account of their knowledge of languages not spoken in the United States, were sent to Klemme where the people "stand side by each" and drink water we don't think."

Hall did not care to name the six delegates, evidently. Those from Goodell whom we saw here July 4th were Art Church and wife, Hans Nelson and wife, Geo. Avery and Dave Friedman. We are told by parties who know, that these people are among the highly respected citizens of Goodell and vicinity, and Klemmeites were surprised that Hall would speak in such terms of his fellow townspeople. As for the slam at the German speaking people we will only say that some of the good Germans may resent it in a more emphatic manner than we are able to.

The rest of Hall's tirade was only a lot of hogwash, not worthy of notice.

Perhaps Bro. Hall would like to finish what he has started. We are through.

From the Garner papers we glean that Chas. Guttermann was very seriously injured Tuesday. He is agent for the Woodford Wheeler lumber company and was found in the yard in an unconscious condition with his scalp badly cut. No one knows just how the accident occurred, but it is thought he fell from a pile of lath.

"Why, to me of course," was the reply. "She talks to me over the fence."-Philadelphia Ledger.

The Forage Problem

Ames, Iowa, July 24—Iowa farmers who are thinking hard about the forage problem these dry days, will find information to help them in two bulletins just issued by the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station at Ames. One deals with the problem of filling the silo for the first time, with which thousands of beef producers and dairymen are confronted this year. The other deals with the alfalfa question.

The bulletin on filling the silo was written by Prof. W. J. Kennedy of the Animal Husbandry department of the State College and it is based on eight years' experience with the silos at the experiment farm and a wide investigation among silo users. It is intensely practical and tells how to cut corn, put it in, and every other step in the preparation of silage.

The bulletin on alfalfa sets forth the value of this crop, which has been a Godsend to thousands of farmers this season, for where carefully cultivated it is producing as much as three or more tons per acre. The bulletin is timely for the alfalfa seeding time runs from the first week in August until the 20th. The bulletin was written by Prof. H. D. Hughes of the farm crops department.

These bulletins may be secured by writing to the Iowa Experiment Station at Ames for them.

"Laugh and the World Laughs With You"

The poet was right—there is nothing so catching as joyous laughter. Next to a kiss a laugh is the most popular thing in the world. The supply of kisses is limited, being largely controlled by a fair but capricious trust. The supply of laughs, however, is practically unlimited so long as you don't get too grouchy to look for them. One reason for the remarkable success of the Chicago Record-Herald is its daily recognition of the value of kindly, wholesome fun. The "Alternating Currents" column of S. E. Kiser, the humorist and poet is one of the brightest things in American journalism. And there is always a smile or a good laugh in Ralph Wilder's cartoons, bringing a cheery greeting as you pick up the paper each morning.

But it is in the Sunday Record-Herald that one finds the most chuckles. The colored comic section is full of laughter for young and old, and these amusing illustrations are free from the vulgarity and mischevious suggestions that have barred so many comic sections from refined homes. Then there is always a lot of high-class humor in the Sunday Magazine of the Record-Herald, led by Sewell Ford's inimitable Shorty McCabe stories. The delectable Shorty and his red headed rival. Torchy, have become so popular that one or the other now appears in a funny yarn almost every Sunday. The Record-Herald has the right idea. Clean humor doubles the welcome of a good newspaper.

Will State Officers Take Witness Stand is the Question

CLAIMED COUNCIL DERELICT

Members of the Executive Council May Claim Prerogative When Frank G. Pierce Brings His Suit.

Des Moines.—The projected suit of the Iowa League of Municipalities against Governor Carroll, Secretary of State Hayward, Auditor of State Bleakly and Treasurer of State Morrow to compel them, as members of the executive council, to assess property on its actual value, may be rather embarrassing for the members of the executive council, according to information vouchsafed by members of the league.

It is claimed by the latter that every member of the executive council has admitted that the state law requiring that the actual value of the property be taken as a basis for assessments, has been violated by the executive council. It is also claimed by members of the league that when informed of the intention of the league to bring the suits, members of the council stated that they would claim their constitutional privilege and refuse to testify on the ground that their testimony would tend to incriminate themselves.

If, as is claimed, the council has been derelict in its duty in the matter of properly assessing property, then the members of the council cannot very well go on the witness stand under oath and give testimony to this effect without pleading guilty to the charge of violating the state laws.

Rigid Quarantine Laws Demanded.

Sanitary regulations of the strictest kind will be provided for in the new rules and regulations which the state animal health commission is preparing to promulgate in the near future. Quarantine laws affecting the importation of live stock into the state will also be passed by the commission.

One of the most important subjects which is receiving the attention of the commission is the distribution by packing houses of refuse hogs. These concerns have a habit of distributing their refuse hogs over the state, with the result that there is always more or less hog cholera in Iowa. Regulations prohibiting this practice will be passed by the commission.

County Fairs Must Pay Their Taxes.

County fairs which have been getting exemptions from taxation, while using the fair grounds and buildings for pecuniary profit, are in danger of losing all the benefits of that exemption as the result of an opinion given by the attorney general's office.

The ruling is to the effect that any county agricultural society which leases or uses its grounds and buildings for pecuniary profit, cannot be exempted from taxation under the exemption laws of Iowa.

The state law provides that libraries, agricultural societies and several other organizations shall be exempt from taxation under certain conditions.

Mahannah Starts on Job.

Fred T. Mahanna, state high school inspector in charge of the establishment of normal training courses in high schools under the provisions of the Adams law, has started on a state-wide inspection of the schools which have made application for the establishment of the normal training course.

The time is very short to put into operation forty-one normal training courses and have them ready for the opening of school. The legislature is blamed because it failed to make the law effective on publication instead of July 4th.

Commissioner Clark Coming.

Hon. Edgar E. Clark, a member of the interstate commerce commission is expected in Iowa this week to assist in the investigations which are being made of alleged violations, by the railroads, of the federal sixteen-hour and nine-hour laws. The investigations are being conducted by State Labor Commissioner Van Duyn and United States Labor Agent W. B. Archer.

Tax Commission Meets.

The state tax commission met at the state house to consider plans for gathering data and statistics for its report to the Thirty-fifth General Assembly. The commission has not yet appointed a secretary, but is expected to do so in the near future. Professor Brindley of the State university is said to be the most likely candidate for the place.

FIRE ESCAPES ARE NEEDED

Inspectors for the State Labor Department Will Make an Inspection of All in State.

Des Moines.—State-wide inspection of the public schools of the state to see that they are properly equipped with fire escapes has been ordered by State Labor Commissioner Van Duyn. While the department is short of inspectors and cannot abandon its general factory inspections, the inspectors will take on the additional work and wherever possible will make an inspection of the school buildings.

The action of manufacturers of fire escapes in doubling the prices in Iowa because they know that the labor department is compelling the erection of fire escapes, is being universally condemned. Commissioner Van Duyn is waiting to get sufficient proof of these facts before asking a court investigation into an alleged combine to mulct the people in Iowa out of a double price for fire escapes.

May Change Courses.

Radical changes in the curriculum of high schools which install the normal training course provided for under the Adams law may be asked by A. M. Deyoe, state superintendent of public instruction, as a condition of securing one of the courses. The question of how strong a requirement in domestic science and agriculture shall be required from the schools which install the courses, is now being debated by Superintendent Deyoe and Fred T. Mahannah, inspector in charge of installing these courses.

It is realized that the teaching of agriculture and domestic science should be made one of the principal parts of the normal training course in order to fit teachers for rural schools, where these problems will have to be constantly met.

It is also realized that very few high schools in the state at present have domestic science courses, and fewer still have the apparatus needed to successfully maintain such a course. It will cost from $50 to $75 to install the proper apparatus for maintaining a domestic science course.

Violations of 16-Hour Law.

Alleged violations by railroads operating in Iowa of the federal sixteen-hour law for railroad crews and the nine-hour law for railroad operators is responsible for a conference which was held at Cedar Rapids between agents of the interstate commerce commission and E. W. Van Duyn, state labor commissioner.

It is charged, according to complaints which have been made to the state labor bureau, that crews on several Iowa railroads are being compelled to work continuously more than sixteen hours, and that railroad telegraph operators in Iowa are being compelled to work more than nine hours without an eight-hour rest as required by law.

Agents of the state labor department have been quietly collecting evidence for several weeks. This has been turned over to agents of the interstate commerce commission.

Will Test Cosson's Ruling.

The opinion given by Attorney General Cosson declaring branch state and savings banks in Iowa unlawful may be tested in the courts. The Scott County Savings bank has been operating a branch bank in that county for twenty-two years and it was rumored at the state house that it will refuse to abide by the opinion.

The bank, it is understood, will continue operations and ask the state banking department to bring a test suit against it to determine the question. It was never passed on completely by any attorney general in Iowa until Mr. Cosson gave his opinion. The branch bank in Scott county has practically had the sanction of all bank examiners and state auditors prior to the present administration.

To Get Busy on Scales.

Lack of necessary funds and inspectors has prevented Commissioner Barney, of the food and dairy department, from putting the new scale inspection law into practical effect. It became effective July 4 but no work has been done looking to the enforcement of its provisions.

Commissioner Barney says that as soon as the inspectors get through with the egg proposition and the ice cream cases, their attention will be turned to inspecting the scales and measures used by Iowa dealers. A state-wide campaign will be started and an effort made to compel dealers of all kinds to give full measure and weight.

Cattle Develop Dread Disease.

Dr. J. I. Gibson, state veterinarian has received word to the effect that the dread disease, anthrax, has developed among the cattle herds in Plymouth county. Steps will be taken at once to prevent an epidemic.

NOT A "FULL-LENGTH" PAPA

Child Wanted Original of Portrait That Had Been Made So Familiar to Her.

An amusing incident is related of a young service matron who had relinquished her husband for two years and who, having before his departure insisted on a good photograph, applied herself assiduously to the upbringing of her two-year-old baby with a view to the child's familiarity with her distinguished father. Each day she would call the baby girl to her and, kneeling beside her, would hold up the photograph, pointing out each feature to the child.

One day the officer came home, and the baby girl, then four years old, was summoned. "Come, dear," said the mother in glee, "papa has come home at last!" The child surveyed the officer in perplexity and finally shook her head.

"What is the matter, dear?" asked her mother. "Well," replied the child, "he looks something like my papa, but my papa hasn't any legs!"

DISFIGURED WITH CRUSTS

"Some time ago I was taken with eczema from the top of my head to my waist. It began with scales on my body. I suffered untold itching and burning, and could not sleep. I was greatly disfigured with scales and crusts. My ears looked as if they had been most cut off with a razor, and my neck was perfectly raw. I suffered untold agony and pain. I tried two doctors who said I had eczema in its fullest stage, and that it could not be cured. I then tried other remedies to no avail. At last, I tried a set of the genuine Cuticura Remedies, which cured me of eczema when all else had failed, therefore I cannot praise them too highly.

"I suffered with eczema about ten months, but am now entirely cured, and I believe Cuticura Remedies are the best skin cure there is." (Signed) Miss Mattie J. Shaffer, R. F. D. 1, Box 8, Dancy, Miss., Oct. 27, 1910.

"I had suffered from eczema about four years when boils began to break out on different parts of my body. It started with a fine red rash. My back was affected first, when it also spread over my face. The itching was almost unbearable at times. I tried different soaps and salves, but nothing seemed to help me until I began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. One box of them cured me entirely. I recommended them to my sister for her baby who was troubled with tooth eczema, and they completely cured her baby." (Signed) Mrs. F. L. Marberger, Drehersville, Pa., Sept. 6, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 4 L, Boston.

REPLACE HAY CROP

Iowa Agricultural College Tells How to Plant Forage Crop

Iowa's hay crop is a failure beyond redemption this season, but there is still time before frost to grow a forage crop of sorghum that will fill the empty hay mows and give the livestock palatable fodder until another year brings green pastures and meadows.

If sorghum is seeded on the oat or wheat stubble ground at once, or before August 1, it will grow to a height of two to three feet before time to cut it, and it will produce a yield ranging from 1½ to 2½ tons of palatable and nourishing forage per acre.

"The farmer who faces the problem of feeding livestock without a crop of hay to do it with, can't do better than to sow a field of sorghum at once," said Prof. H. D. Hughes, of the farm crops department of the Iowa Agricultural college experiment station. "If he puts it in now, he is practically certain to get a good yield of palatable and nourishing feed. It is not a difficult crop to grow nor to harvest. It resists drought and will grow in spite of very unfavorable conditions; for that reason it is especially desirable this season. It is cut as though it were timothy. It cures out well in the field. It may be put up in large cocks and left in the cocks to be used from all winter, or it may be stored in the barn just like hay. It makes a better emergency crop for just such a situation as we have in Iowa now than Millet, because it will resist the drought better and because it will produce a larger yield of forage in the time there is to grow it."

There ought to be no delay in putting in sorghum. It ought to be in not later than by August 1, and the earlier it is seeded the better. The oats or wheat fields just harvested will provide the best available ground for the crop. The ground should be plowed shallow and then reduced to a smooth, mellow condition, so as to afford a good seed bed. Seed it as soon as the ground is in fine tilth, using from 60 to 80 pounds of seed per acre. Put it in with a grain drill to a medium depth, from 1 to 1½ inches. With the first rain it will come up quickly and make a growth in spite of continued dry weather.

Sorghum seed may be secured from any dealer in seeds. It does not matter much what variety is bought. The crop is grown for forage only and not for its molasses producing values.

Sorghum grown for forage must be cut before a heavy frost. There is danger of poison to cattle in sorghum that has been frosted. It may be cut with a mower and allowed to lie until it is well cured, but that is not necessary when the climate is dry. When there is not a great deal of moisture, there is seldom any difficulty in curing the crop satisfactorily. It may be cut with a mower or corn harvester and shocked like corn, or if not too heavy, it may be cut with an ordinary self-binder. In the latter case the bundles should be put in shocks loosely, two and two. The commonest way of harvesting is to cut with a mower and then rake and gather it into large cocks. It may be put into cocks when quite green. It is sometimes fed directly from the cocks as wanted, but there is likely to be less loss when it is put into the barn or into stacks topped with coarse grass. It is a good practice in storing to alternate layers of cane with straw, particularly if the cane is not well cured.

Though sorghum is recommended now as an emergency crop, it has a decided value as a hay or fodder apart from its emergency value. It has long been established beyond a doubt that it contains abundant nourishment that is readily digested. It has a generous leafage that is sweet and tender and it is highly palatable. Cattle like it and thrive on it. When used with other rations as a change and an appetizer, it has an especial value. All kinds of stock will eat sorghum fodder more readily than corn fodder and there is much less waste in feeding. From the standpoint of digestibility, sorghum compares favorably with corn fodder also. In the green state it is more digestible by a good margin and its per cent is slightly better in the dry stage also. For a good many soils, sorghum is a hard crop on the land, but in a season like this in Iowa when some kind of forage must be grown, that objection has no great weight.

Sorghum makes a better emergency crop in a season like this than either millet or cow peas, and especially the latter, for which present conditions are too dry to insure a satisfactory germination and growth. It may mean extra labor and effort to seed a field of sorghum at this time and to harvest it later on, but the yield will repay the effort.

CABBAGE ALWAYS IN DEMAND

One of Most Universally Grown Crops and Finds Place in Home Garden and Truck Farm.

Cabbage is one of the most universally cultivated of our garden plants. Although it is one of the coarser vegetables it finds a place in the home garden as well as in the market garden and truck farm. In some sections of the United States cabbage is extensively grown as a farm crop.

According to the last census New York state grew more than 25,000 acres of cabbage; Pensylvania, nearly 11,000; while Virginia grew about 10,000 acres. The three states mentioned outrank all others by at least 2,000 acres. No adequate estimate can be placed on the value of this crop, as it fluctuates very decidedly, both in acreage and in price, from year to year.

Early cabbage is practically all consumed as a green vegetable. The late crop, on the other hand, is handled as a fresh vegetable, as a storage crop, and for the manufacture of sauerkraut. Cabbage is always in demand, and under present conditions it is always available, either as the product of a southern truck farm or a northern farm, garden, or storage house.

The group of cultivated plants which has been derived from the wild cabbage presents a greater diversity of form than that derived from any other single ancestral type.

Wild cabbage is a robust-growing broad-leaved plant enjoying the low, moist areas near the seacoast of southern Europe. The most closely allied form now in cultivation is the collard. The wide variation in the group is illustrated by the diversity of form shown in collards, kale, tree cabbage, marrow kale, cauliflower, and Brussels sprouts. It is almost beyond the bounds of reason to believe that all these forms have been derived from a common parentage, yet such is the fact.

In no truck crop does the character of the seed count for more than in cabbage. It is very essential that the crop come to marketable maturity early, that the heads be uniform in size and character, and that they mature so that the whole crop can be harvested at two cuttings. The small saving made by the purchase of cheap or inferior seed is usually paid for a hundred times over in the lessened value of the crop. A grower can not afford to risk his crop for so small a saving. The best seed that can be obtained is none too good, and anything short of this is not good business. Without highly viable seed of a good strain, true to type, the best results cannot be expected.

Cabbage is a crop which is grown by every market gardener located within wagon-hauling distance of an important center of consumption. The statistics of the distribution of the cultivation of the cabbage clearly indicate the fact that this is one of the most important crops grown by market gardeners.

The counties near each of the important centers of population of the United States are almost universally credited with a considerable acreage of cabbage, thus showing that the gardeners of these regions have given considerable attention to the production of this crop.

Alfalfa With Corn Ration.

Alfalfa makes an excellent pasture for hogs. Hogs pastured through the summer on alfalfa should have a light feeding of corn. For winter feeding alfalfa hay makes rapid gains for hogs. A ration of three-fourths corn and one-fourth alfalfa is best for fitting hogs for market, but in very young hogs the proportion should be reversed.

Reasonable Care of Garden Crops.

Don't use all your land for hogs and corn and other general products. Raise fruit and garden on part of it and give it the same careful attention that you do your prize stock. You may be surprised to find that it is the most profitable part of the farm, and the part that gives the most satisfaction.

Cultivation Forestalls Drought.

Do not neglect to cultivate the sweet potatoes. Keep up the cultivation and maintain the mulch. If this is properly done they will stand a terrific drought and develop potatoes when the late summer rains come.

RABBIT STEW, FRENCH STYLE

New Recipe Recommended to Housewife Who Would Make a Hit With the Folks.

Cut up rabbit, wash and put in jar; now put on the following spices: Salt and pepper, a pinch of cayenne, two whole chili peppers, eight or ten whole peppers, the same amount of cloves and allspice, three or four laurel leaves; then a finely cut onion; three or four cloves of garlic cut fine and about two or three slices of lemon. Then cover with good claret wine. Set away in cool place for two days. Half an hour before cooking take out all the pieces; put in a strainer and let strain. Now put on a frying pan in which you have placed a good sized piece of butter or half butter and half lard; let get smoking hot, then put in your rabbit and let fry on both sides. Then throw all in a stew pan and keep on frying until all is fried. Take your frying pan and put in more butter and lard, then take a heaping wooden ladle of flour and brown it nicely; put in a fine cut onion; when pretty nearly brown, cook a few minutes longer. Then take the wine and spices, with the onions and garlic the rabbit was soaked in, and make the gravy; use all that has drained from the strainer; if not enough add a little water; then pour over the rabbit in the stew pan, and let stand an hour and a half, or until tender. When done, pour on a hot platter. Be liberal with grease, as it is required to make stew good.

HOW TO COOK MUSHROOMS

Variety of Combinations Can Be Served With This Edible Fungus as Chief Ingredient.

A Philadelphia hostess noted for her delicious dinners, and especially for various combinations that have mushrooms as the chief ingredient, says that the reason none of her guests is ever ill after a mushroom supper is that she always has fresh mushrooms, never the canned or bottled sort, and always has them cooked for ten minutes or so before adding the various tid-bits that go to make up the delectable whole. Mushrooms require more cooking than most persons think, and should be thoroughly done before they are served, no matter how much the impatient ones may say, "Oh, they are cooked enough; they will not harm me," as every chafing dish cook has heard them say at times. An Italian dish which this hostess has discovered consists of oysters scalloped with macaroni and served with a mushroom sauce. Cheese is omitted and paprika takes the place of cayenne to make the flavor more delicate, otherwise the oysters and macaroni alternate and are flecked with butter, as in other ways of scalloping, and the dish is one for the gods.

Chocolate Creams.

Beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth. Gradually beat into this two cups of confectioners' sugar. Flavor with one-half teaspoon of vanilla and work well. Roll into little balls and drop on slightly buttered platter. Let the balls stand for an hour. Shave five ounces of chocolate, put in small bowl, which you place on the fire in saucepan of boiling water. When the chocolate is melted, remove from fire and drop creams into it, one at a time. Take out with fork and drop gently on buttered dish. It will take one-half hour to harden chocolate.

To Mend a Leaking Ice Pan.

Melt paraffin and while it is hot pour a coating over the bottom of the leaking pan, having first set it on a newspaper; some of the paraffin will run through the holes in the pan, but it can be scraped off and is just as good to use again. Of course, this pan can never be used on the stove, but serves very effectually for the ice water pan beneath the refrigerator.

Ham Scallop.

Two cupfuls of cold boiled ham ground fine, six hard boiled eggs. When cold separate whites from yolks and chop fine. Make thick cream sauce of two tablespoonfuls butter and two of flour. Cook until smooth, then add one pint milk. When thick, season with salt and pepper. Butter baking dish. Put in layer of sauce first, then add in succession ham, yolks and whites of eggs, and top layer of sauce dusted with fine cracker crumbs and small pieces of butter. Bake till brown. Delicious for lunch.

Maple Sugar Spring Biscuit.

These dainties are served with the sweet course at dinner or luncheons, and are equally acceptable at 5 o'clock tea. Make a rich baking powder biscuit dough, roll it to one-quarter inch in thickness and spread half of it with melted butter, then sprinkle butter with maple sugar forced through the food chopper; put on the other half of the dough, cut into cakes with a small biscuit cutter, and brush over the top with beaten egg. Bake in a moderate oven and serve hot.

In the Office.

"I am afraid to hear that report."

"Why so?"

"It is likely to mean some firing going on."

Disappointed.

Knicker—Was Subbubs disappointed in his house?

Bocker—Yes; what he took to be the henhouse turned out to be the bungalow.

And Then He Escaped.

"William," said Mrs. Peckem, sternly, "did you ever stop to think that some one might steal me when you are away?"

"Well," responded the poor husband, with a far-away look, "I was a little alarmed when a horse thief was prowling these parts last week."

Mrs. Peckem stiffened up haughtily. "A horse thief, eh?"

"Yes, I heard that he carried off two or three nags from this district." And then Peckem made a bee-line for the door.

ITS STRONG POINT.

De Auber—Yes, I've just finished that painting. Do you like the perspective?

Orville Blunt—Yes, it's great. The further away you stand from it the better it looks!

FALSE HUNGER

A Symptom of Stomach Trouble Corrected by Good Food.

There is, with some forms of stomach trouble, an abnormal craving for food which is frequently mistaken for a "good appetite." A lady teacher writes from Carthage, Mo., to explain how with good food she dealt with this sort of hurtful hunger.

"I have taught school for fifteen years, and up to nine years ago had good, average health. Nine years ago, however, my health began to fail, and continued to grow worse steadily, in spite of doctor's prescriptions, and everything I could do. During all this time my appetite continued good, only the more I ate the more I wanted to eat—I was always hungry.

"The first symptoms of my breakdown were a distressing nervousness and a loss of flesh. The nervousness grew so bad that finally it amounted to actual prostration. Then came stomach troubles, which were very painful, constipation which brought on piles, dyspepsia and severe nervous headaches.

"The doctors seemed powerless to help me, said I was overworked, and at last urged me to give up teaching, if I wished to save my life.

"But this I could not do. I kept on at it as well as I could, each day growing more wretched, my will-power alone keeping me up, till at last a good angel suggested that I try a diet of Grape-Nuts food, and from that day to this I have found it delicious always appetizing and satisfying.

"I owe my restoration to health to Grape-Nuts. My weight has returned and for more than two years I have been free from the nervousness, constipation, piles, headaches, and all the ailments that used to punish me so, and have been able to work freely and easily." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Remarkable Family Record

Dispatch from Iowa Falls to the Marshalltown Times-Republican: A somewhat remarkable record exists in the Pritchard family which came to this county in 1856, inasmuch as in a family of nine brothers and sisters, death has never invaded the circle, altho their present ages range from 62 to 81. The family came from Pittsfield, Mich., and made the trip overland from Dubuque as that was ten years before the Illinois Central reached Hardin county. Of this family several yet remain in Iowa, these being C. D. Pritchard, of Hawarden; Mrs. H. M. Whited, of Eldora; Mrs. B. F. Stockwell, of Rowan; Mrs. Lucina Smith, of Alden; J. S. Pritchard, of Belmond. The other members reside as follows: Martin Pritchard of Peoria, Ill., G. G. Pritchard of Los Angeles, Mrs. Susan Haight of Post Falls, Idaho, and Mrs. Edna Willis of Los Angeles.

"Laugh and the World Laughs With You"

The poet was right—there is nothing so catching as joyous laughter. Next to a kiss a laugh is the most popular thing in the world. The supply of kisses is limited, being largely controlled by a fair but capricious trust. The supply of laughs, however, is practically unlimited so long as you don't get too grouchy to look for them. One reason for the remarkable success of the Chicago Record-Herald is its daily recognition of the value of kindly, wholesome fun. The "Alternating Currents" column of S. E. Kiser, the humorist and poet is one of the brightest things in American journalism. And there is always a smile or a good laugh in Ralph Wilder's cartoons, bringing a cheery greeting as you pick up the paper each morning.

But it is in the Sunday Record-Herald that one finds the most chuckles. The colored comic section is full of laughter for young and old, and these amusing illustrations are free from the vulgarity and mischevious suggestions that have barred so many comic sections from refined homes. Then there is always a lot of high-class humor in the Sunday Magazine of the Record-Herald, led by Sewell Ford's inimitable Shorty McCabe stories. The delectable Shorty and his red headed rival, Torchy, have become so popular that one or the other now appears in a funny yarn almost every Sunday. The Record-Herald has the right idea. Clean humor doubles the welcome of a good newspaper.

Mr. Medder discovers the who is introduced as Harry's Ger- tor.

it vas reading writing," the Count d.

Reading and writing, you mean?" cy asked.

No, no. Reading writing. I am ding der reading und den he iss ding der writing."

Harry saw that the Count had some n in his mind, but what it might be could not imagine. However, he lingly lent himself to forward it.

He means that he would write ething and then I would try to d it," he said. Mr. Medders nodded avely; to him it appeared to be a y good plan. Lucy, with great inrest, said:

"Oh, write something in German w, then—it must be awfully hard to ite in German, isn't it?—and then ee let Harry read it."

So the Count tore the fly leaf from e book in his hand and solemnly ote thereon the line:

"Find die dame ihr hut?"

He handed the sheet to Harry, who sumed the painfully awkward posiion of a schoolboy and laboredly read e line, with an atrocious mispronunation of almost every word. The ount smiled, and took the paper om him, saying:

"You see, he has der Cherman acent, but not yet der Cherman vords. er line is: 'Find die dame ihr hut?' iss a question, you see, unt iss to e answered yet."

"Oh, and what does it mean in Engsh?" Lucy asked.

"It means," the Count said, with uch significance, and speaking with reat deliberation and emphasis, "it eans: 'Did the lady find her hat?'"

"Did the lady find her hat?" Lucy epeated after him.

"Not yet!" Harry said, absentindedly.

"Ah," the Count said, smiling, "Noch icht."

"Of course! Of course!" Harry said, s though being corrected in his prounciation. "Nock nit."

The Count nodded his head with commendation.

"Some day he vill be a great Cherman scholar—some day," he asserted. Harry beamed with pride—and amusement. Mr. Medders observed to him:

"Verily, thy tutor must be a learned man."

"He reads nothing but the classics," Harry replied. "You'll always find him in the library. He's dying to get back there now, I expect."

"And no doubt that is a classic he hath in his hand even at this moment," Medders said.

"I've no doubt," said Harry, taking the book from the Count's hand and glancing at the title, which was "Three Weeks." "Ah, it is an old treatise on the brevity of time."

He tossed the book into the library, and said:

"Now, I don't want to have to think of any more German today. This is to be a real holiday, Count, and I refuse to study any more."

"I think thee art doing a great work," Lucy said to the Count, "to teach Harry German. It is fine that he hath thee for a tutor. How did thee happen to be engaged by him?"

"Merely by accident," the Count answered.

"Yes," Harry added, "through a mere accident."

CHAPTER VIII.

Harry felt that there was nothing he could do which would sufficiently show his gratitude to the Count. Everything was straightening out nicely. To git rid of the Count would be simple. As his German tutor, what could be more natural than for the Count to put on his hat and walk away? And then there was the quick manner in which the Count had rallied to his support. Evidently, in spite of his grievance, the Count was a man who would not stand or sit idly by and see a fellow man suffer because of a mistake, or a combination of mistakes.

With a quiet wink to the Count, Harry said to Lucy and her father:

"I want to take you around the grounds a bit, now. Count von Fitz will excuse us, I know."

"Most certainly," the Count replied, grandly. "Und I vill pursue my studies."

But more noise was heard from the hallway, and Harry flinched. He could not imagine what further trouble fate had in store for him, but he had experienced so much in this brief time, and his nerves were on such a wire edge that he knew any unusual noise meant trouble, and any unusual silence might mean worse.

"What can it be?" Lucy asked in alarm.

"Let us go and see," Medders said.

They were saved the effort, for Carolyn came running in, her eyes big with alarm, and her face white with fright. She rushed to Harry and clung to him.

"Oh, Harry!" she cried. "That terrible old General!"

"Gott!" the Count exclaimed, turning toward the library. "He hass discovered me!"

"What is it, Carolyn? What about the General?" asked Harry.

"There, there, my girl," soothed Mr. Medders. "Calm thyself."

"Do tell us what has frightened thee," Lucy begged, taking Carolyn's hand in hers and patting it.

"General Blazes," Carolyn said, straightening herself up and catching her breath. "General Blazes is coming, and he swears he will do desperate things, Harry. Oh, I am so afraid."

The deep voice of the General boomed from the hall.

"Where is she?" he shouted. "Where is she? I want my wife, I tell you!"

Harry waited until the General had run out of breath; this procedure also allowing him to collect his wits. Then he asked:

"Why, General, what in the world is wrong?"

"Everything's wrong! You're a scam doundrel; I'm a fam dool! My wife is a ficked wirt—I mean a wicked flirt!"

"It's coming in bunches," Harry thought to himself. He determined that, even though the General had reason to believe his wife was in the house, he would affect to misunderstand him and thus disarm him.

"Why, General," he said, "you're excited."

"You bet I'm excited!" the General yelled, shaking his cane in the air, while Lucy and Carolyn shuddered and held each other tight, behind Mr. Medders, and the Count stood ready to jump into the library if the fury of the General should be directed at him.

"You bet I'm excited. I'm as loozy as a crane—I mean crazy as a loon. I want my wife, I tell you. Where is she?"

"He Has a Lot to Learn Yet."

"Well, General," Harry replied stiffly, "I'm not running a guessing contest, you know."

"None of you nam donsense! You know where my wife is."

Mr. Medders stepped forward with his hand raised to calm the General, and, speaking to Harry, asked:

"Knowest thou aught of his wife, Harry?"

"I don't know what can be the matter with him," Harry evaded.

The Count sidled toward the door into the hall, saying meekly:

"I think I am going, now."

The General stopped him with a flourish of his cane, and shouted:

"You stay right here! You may know something of this."

Lucy now found a chance to ask something.

"What is it the man sayeth of thee, Harry?" she asked.

Before Harry could reply to her the General demanded:

"Has my wife been here today?"

"I can answer for him," Lucy replied, gently. "No strange woman has been here."

The General looked puzzled. He took off his hat, tucked his cane under his arm, and mopped his brow.

"That's remarkable," he said. "My wife telephoned from this house not half an hour ago. They told mo so at the millinery store down the street. I stopped there to inquire for her."

"They must have been mistaken," Harry said. "It is just possible that they had the number mixed. I don't believe they even know who we are here. We don't deal with them."

"Well, Harry," the General said, slowly, looking from one to the other of the faces before him, and realizing that he had been in error. "I'm sorry I made such an ass of myself. You don't know what it is to be worried about a wife—yet. You'll pardon me, won't you?"

"Why, certainly, General," Harry said, grasping his outstretched hand. "Let bygones be bygones and all that. I know how you feel. I've been worried once or twice myself—but not about a wife."

"Well, my boy, your time will come," sagely promised the General. "I trust the ladies will pardon me, and you gentlemen, also."

Lucy and Carolyn, Mr. Medders and the Count cheerfully forgave him and he started out, when—Oh, luckless fate!—from the room where Daphne and Mrs. Blazes waited, came a sneeze. It was not a stifled sneeze, it was not a weak, apologetic sneeze—it was a big, whole-souled sneeze—sneeze that told by its very sound that it had been held back as long as possible and was glad to be given its liberty! The General flamed into wrath, and whirled on his heel to confront Harry.

"Ha!" he exclaimed. "My wife's own sneeze! I'd know it among a million. I'd recognize her sneeze in the midst of a battle. It's no use to bamboozle me. My wife is in there!"

He leveled his cane at the door as thought about to fire a volley through the panels. Harry clutched a chair back to steady himself.

Mr. Medders came over to Harry slowly, waving a hand at the General to inform him that he would take charge of the case from now on.

"Harry," he said, seriously. "What does this mean?"

"I don't know," Harry replied. "I'm guessing, just as much as anybody else."

"Thee would not let me look in there!" Lucy said, accusingly.

"Oh, Harry!" Carolyn wept.

The Count chewed his mustache and trembled.

The General's eyes were now blazing. He awaited the denouement.

Harry looked at them all. Save Carolyn he could find no sympathy. Suddenly he reflected that, after all, he was blameless. He would open the door, allow Mrs. Blazes to come out, and throw himself on Lucy's mercy. He stepped to the door, yanked it open, and—

With a complacent smile out stepped Daphne Daffington.

"That is not my wife!" shouted the General.

"It seems impossible to escape you, my dear General," Daphne said sweetly. She swept out with as much grandeur as she could muster—and Daphne could muster a plenty.

Disgusted with himself, the General whirled about and stamped away.

"I told him his wife wasn't here," Harry said, turning to Lucy. But she was weeping in her father's arms, while Carolyn was huddled on a couch crying. The Count stepped up to Harry.

"I get you out of dis yet!" he said.

ORIGIN OF ENGLISH SHIRE

It Was One of the Divisions of the Country in Old Saxon Days.

The English word shire is from the old Saxon sciran, to divide. There are some English counties which still represent ancient Saxon kingdoms, such as Essex, Kent, Middlesex, Surrey, Sussex; others were formed by the sub-division of Mercia, Wessex, Northumbria, etc., as Staffordshire, Warwickshire, Yorkshire, etc. These shires, and indeed all the counties of England were ruled by the ealdorman, or count as the Normans termed him, and the scir-gerefa, or sheriff. The ealdorman was originally elected by the witan or council of the shire, commonly called county, when the ealdormen were known as counts. Afterwards the office became hereditary in many cases. The sheriff was appointed by, and represented the king, as the count represented the people. The word shire is, in combination, always pronounced sheer, as for example, Worcestershire, Woostersheer, Leicestershire, Lestersheer.

MARCUSE, CALIFORNIA, LAND FOR PROFITABLE FARMING.

Marcuse Colony, located in Sutter County, which is in the heart of the Sacramento Valley, is fast coming to the front as a farming community in which nearly every agricultural product known may be successfully raised without irrigation.

The soil is a dark, sandy loam, sedimentary in character, level and well drained. It has the advantage over other soils in that it is loose in character and superior to heavy soils.

With this wealth of soil, abundance of water, unexcelled climate and long growing season, Marcuse Colony is the ideal place for the homeseeker with limited means, the worn out professional man, or the young man looking for a small farm in a healthful climate.

The proximity of Marcuse Colony to Sacramento, furnishes a ready market for vegetables, poultry, eggs and dairy products. Fruits, vegetables, alfalfa, grains and grasses and poultry yield large returns. The rainfall is certain and drought is unknown.

Land is yet moderately priced, but crop failures in other sections of the United States will bring new settlers in rapidly. This, together with the holding of the Panama Pacific Exposition in San Francisco during 1915, is bound to raise the price, and whether for a home, or for an investment, now is the time to purchase. Land may be had in tracts suitable to the means of all and the results obtained are almost beyond belief. Further information will be gladly furnished by HOMESEEKERS' INFORMATION BUREAU, 630 Bee Bldg., Omaha, Neb.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies have done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctors said I had tumors, and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. Your Liver Pills have no equal as a cathartic. Any one wishing proof of what your medicines have done for me can get it from any druggist or by writing to me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED. 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Another Operation Avoided.

New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial first, and was saved from an operation."—Mrs. LILY PEYROUX, 1111 Kerlerec St., New Orleans, La.

The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

PRIZE EXHIBITIONS OF BARLEY AND HOPS

Over Eight Thousand Dollars to Be Awarded to Farmers Who Raise These Crops by International Barley and Hop Exhibit, Chicago, Oct. 12 to 22.

Notable Feature of the American Exposition of Brewing Machinery, Materials and Products --- Eminent Experts on the Committee of Awards.

AMONG the important crops in the states of the central west, northwest and Pacific coast are barley and hops, both of which require considerable care in cultivation. The chief market for the better grades of barley is the malting industry, which supplies principally the brewing and distilling trades. The principal and almost exclusive market for hops is the brewing industry.

For a number of years American and European scientists have devoted much inquiry to these crops for the purpose of deciding upon which properties are conditioned their value to the consumer.

With regard to barley, there is considerable difference of opinion, the views of American and European investigators diverging to an extent. With regard to hops, scientific inquiry has not yet proceeded far enough to state with any degree of certainty which are the leading characters of the plant that make up its value to the manufacturer who uses it.

Departments of Agriculture Study Barley and Hops.

The agronomists and chemists of the State Agricultural colleges and several specialists of the United States department of agriculture have devoted a great deal of time to the study of barley and hops and their improvement. They have been advising the farmers to devote attention to the production of those properties in these crops which are most desired by the consumer. In this work, however, they have met with considerable difficulty from the fact that they have been unable to state positively what those properties are that the consumer desires.

In the purchase of barley and hops the individual judgment of the buyer, based upon personal experience, has been the controlling factor, and as the individual judgment is often biased by personal preference and even prejudice it has been difficult to define what character of goods would best meet the requirements of the market.

STEMS OF WHITE CLUB AND MANCHURIA BARLEYS.

Improvement of Barley and Hops.

A movement is under way to bring about improvement in the growing of barley and hops and to lay down certain standards by which they can be valued regardless of the personal equation.

At the present stage this movement is crystallizing in an international barley and hop exhibit, which will take place Oct. 12 to 22, 1911, at Chicago, in connection with the American Exposition of Brewing Machinery, Materials and Products. For this exhibit there will be available a prize fund of over $8,000, which will be apportioned to the different varieties and strains of the crops with a view of giving the greatest possible encouragement to the farmers who raise them.

The growers who may wish to participate in the exhibit should address the committee on awards, 1508 Republic building, Chicago, and ask for the necessary application and entry blanks.

The committee on awards embraces not only a number of the most eminent experts among scientific men, growers, dealers and consumers of these crops, but also specialists from the agricultural department of the United States and the several barley and hop growing states. Among those serving on the committee on awards are the following:

United States department of agriculture, bureau of plant industry—Professor M. A. Carleton, Professor H. V. Harlan, Professor W. W. Stockberger; bureau of chemistry—Professor J. A. Le Clerc.

Agricultural experiment stations—Professor G. W. Shaw, Berkeley, Cal.; Professor Charles E. Saunders, Ottawa, Canada; Professor Alvin Keyser, Fort Collins, Colo.; Professor F. D. Farrell, Boise, Ida.; Professor V. M. Shoesmith, East Lansing, Mich.; Professor C. P. Bull, St. Paul, Minn.; Professor Alfred Atkinson, Bozeman, Mont.; Professor R. C. Doneghue, North Dakota; Professor H. V. Tartar, Corvallis, Ore.; Professor E. D. Ball, Logan, Utah; Professor R. W. Thatcher, Pullman, Wash.; Professor R. A. Moore, Madison, Wis.

Cleaning Barley For Seed.

One of the principal difficulties that have obtained in the growing of barley as well as other crops is that sufficient attention has not been paid to the seed, not only in the matter of fanning out all dead and degenerate berries, so as to seed only good and live grain and produce a good crop where no grains will fail to sprout, but also because there has been a lack of uniformity as to variety or strain. This is perhaps of more than ordinary importance in the case of barley and is one of the matters that will engage the attention of the barley and hop exhibition at Chicago in October, 1911. The barley which is used for malting purposes is put through an artificial process of sprouting in mass, in which necessarily all grains are treated alike. It stands to reason, however, that where plump and thin grains, mellow and flinty ones, starchy and albuminous grains are all steeped and sprouted under like conditions they will necessarily grow differently and cannot yield a uniform malt. This causes serious troubles to the consumer when he works up the malt in the further processes of manufacture and makes it difficult for him to finish off a uniform product. It stands to reason that where the different kinds of grains are all seeded in the same soil in like manner at the same season and grow under the same weather conditions the berries of different characters cannot possibly develop alike. The result will be an uneven stand, differences in the time of maturing, different action in the stack, etc.

HEAD AND STEM OF WHITE CLUB BARLEY.

Pedigree Grain.

Different strains of barley will grow differently on different soils and in different climates.

In order to produce the best crops which will also be the most abundant it is therefore necessary to use pure strains, or, as the scientists call them, "pedigree" grain, where all the berries are of the same variety or strain and will behave alike under similar conditions. It is also necessary to find by experiment what particular strain is best suited to certain soils and climates and also what method of planting and cultivation is best adapted to the varieties and types.

A great deal of work has been done along these lines by scientific investigators, particularly at the agricultural experiment stations of Wisconsin and Minnesota. These scientific men are serving on the committee on awards for the barley and hop exhibition which will take place in Chicago in October, 1911.

HEAD AND STEM OF MANCHURIA BARLEY.

CLASSIFICATION OF AMERICAN BARLEYS.

Commonly Known as Two Rowed, Four Rowed and Six Rowed.

Barleys are commonly classified as two rowed, four rowed and six rowed. The European brewers generally prefer the two rowed varieties, which are plumper and starchier, while in this country the six rowed, of which the four rowed is but a slightly varied relative, is generally preferred because, while less starchy, it is more highly albuminous and therefore possesses more of the substance which brings about the inversion of starch into sugar—namely, diastase.

HEAD OF BAY BREWING BARLEY.

The common American brewing barleys arrange themselves in the following system:

1. Six rowed, erect—White Club.
2. Four rowed, drooping—Manchuria barley, Oderbrucker, Scotch, Ohio Fall, Bay Brewing, Blue barley.
3. Two rowed, erect—Goldthorpe, Primus, Fan barley.
4. Two rowed, drooping—Common Chevalier, Horsford's Chevalier, Hanna, Princess.

Six Rowed Barley.—Through several years' experimentation at the Wisconsin agricultural experiment station it has been found that the six rowed barley is preferable to other varieties and more profitable for the average farmer to grow. The yield far surpasses that of the other varieties, and the market demands for the six rowed class far surpass those of all other varieties combined. At a conservative estimate 98 per cent of all the barley now grown in Wisconsin is six rowed barley. This being the type of barley most commonly used for malting in the United States, it is likely that most of the samples that will be shown at the barley and hop exhibition in Chicago in October, 1911, will be of that type.

The experiments with two rowed barley through eight years' continuous breeding work clearly prove that in most regions the farmer cannot get the returns from this crop that can be secured with the six rowed variety. The straw seems to be very frail and lodges easily, thereby injuring the quality of the grain and reducing the yield.

OLD SETTLER PASSES AWAY

William Beier, Sr., passed away peacefully to his future reward at his residence in German township on Friday evening, July 28th, 1911, after an illness of some two months. He was born at Barfuss, Hinterpommern, Germany, June 2nd, 1844. Like many others he was unfortunate in losing his father in his boyhood days. He early learned to make a livlihood among strangers. In 1869 he emigrated to this country; and in the month of October of the same year married Louisa Charlotte Schlei at Colesburg, Delaware county, Iowa. His wife, four sons—Henry of German township, William of Goodell, Emil G. and Fred yet at home—and three daughters—Mrs. Aug. Ridder of Klemme, Mrs. Wm. Kulper of Waterloo and Lydia at home—survive him.

He was a loyal member of the German Methodist church in Germantown. During his 34 years residence in German township he succeeded in securing a modern home for his family. The large attendance at the funeral Sunday afternoon gave proof of the estimate placed upon a good friend and neighbor.

Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, H. W. Schneider, assisted by Rev. L. J. Brenner, District Superintendent, and Rev. W. H. Klaus of Garner.

A Heavy Shower at Belmond

The many friends of Miss Bessie Ely gave her a Miscellaneous Shower Monday evening at the Cong. Church parlors in honor of her approaching marriage to Dr. Missman, of Klemme. PRESIDENT TAFT REFUTES CONTROLLER BAY CHARGES

Message to the Senate Fully Explains the Transaction and Denounces the Attack on Chief Executive and His Brother as Wilful and Malicious Falsehood.

Washington.—President Taft sent to the senate Wednesday a message that recalled some of those received from his predecessor. It was in reply to a resolution of the senate requesting the president to transmit to the senate all the documents relating to the elimination from the Chugach national forest, in Alaska, of land fronting upon Controller bay. Mr. Taft seizes the occasion occasion to make a vigorous defense of his own honor and that of his brother, Charles P. Taft, against the attacks made in relation to this Controller bay "scandal."

The president sent in all the documents asked for, and more, and quotes the executive order in question, by which 12,800 acres were eliminated from the national forest. His message describes the importance of Controller bay as a railway terminal and relates the operations of the Copper River railroad, owned by the Morgan-Guggenheim interests, whose terminal is at Cordova.

Ryan's Application Investigated.

In December, 1909, Richard S. Ryan applied for the Controller bay elimination, afterward granted, stating that he represented the Controller Railroad and Navigation company. Mr. Talt tells how this application was referred to the district foresters at Portland, Ore., and in Alaska and was approved by Chief Forester Graves; how the navy department stated it did not desire to use Controller bay as a reservation; how the matter was considered fully by the forestry bureau, the secretary of agriculture, the secretary of the interior, the general land office and the cabinet. As a result, after an interview between the president and Mr. Ryan, an order was drafted eliminating 320 acres.

Meanwhile Mr. Ryan had satisfied the president and other officials that he and his associates had no connection with the Morgan-Guggenheim interests and were engaged in an independent enterprise in good faith to build an independent railroad. The question again came before the cabinet, and the president, with the approval of the secretaries of the interior and agriculture, changed the order so that it eliminated 12,800 acres, with sufficient room for a railroad town. The message says: "I was willing to do this because I found the restrictions in the law sufficient to prevent the possibility of any monopoly of either the uplands or the harbor or channel by the Controller Railroad and Navigation company or any other person or concern." These restrictions the president sets forth at length, and shows that the Ryan company has not the slightest opportunity for exclusive appropriation of the harbor facilities unless congress shall by future act deliberately and voluntarily confer it.

The "Dick to Dick" Letter.

Coming to the personal side of the matter, Mr. Taft says:

"Before closing, I desire to allude to a circumstance which the terms of this resolution make apt and relevant. It is a widely published statement attributed to a newspaper correspondent that in an examination of the files of the interior department a few weeks ago a postscript was found attached to a letter of July 13, 1910, addressed by Mr. Richard S. Ryan to Secretary Ballinger—and in the present record—urging the elimination of land enough for terminals for the Controller Railway & Navigation company. The postscript was said to read as follows:

"Dear Dick: I want to see the president the other day. He asked me who it was I represented. I told him according to our agreement, that I represented myself. But that didn't seem to satisfy him. So I sent for Charlie Taft and asked him to tell his brother, the president, who it was I really represented. The president made no further objection to my claim. Yours, DICK."

Uses Strong Language.

"The postscript is not now on the files of the department. If it were, it would be my duty to transmit it under this resolution. Who is really responsible for its wicked fabrication if it ever existed, or for the viciously false statement made as to its authenticity, is immaterial for the purposes of this communication. The purport of the alleged postscript is, and the intention of the fabricator was, to make Mr. Richard S. Ryan testify through its words to the public that although I was at first opposed in the public interest to granting the elimination which he requested, nevertheless through the undue influence of my brother, Mr. Charles P. Taft, and the disclosure of the real persons in interest, I was induced improperly and for the promotion of their private gain, to make the order.

"The statement in so far as my brother is concerned—and that is the chief feature of the postscript—is utterly unfounded. He never wrote to me or spoke to me in reference to Richard S. Ryan or on the subject of Controller Bay or the granting of any privileges or the making of any orders in respect to Alaska. He has no interest in Alaska, never had, and knows nothing of the circumstances connected with this transaction. He does not remember that he ever met Richard S. Ryan. He never heard of the Controller Bay railroad until my cablegram of inquiry reached him, which, with his answer, is in the record.

"Mr. Ballinger says in a telegram in answer to my inquiry, both of which are in the record that he never received such a postscript and that he was in Seattle on the date of July 13, when it was said to have been written.

"Mr. Richard S. Ryan in a letter which he has sent me without solicitation, and which is in the record, says that he never met my brother, Mr. Charles P. Taft, and that so far as he knows, Mr. Charles P. Taft never had the slightest interest in Controller Bay, in the Controller Railway and Navigation company, or in any Alaskan company, and he utterly denies writing or signing the alleged postscript. The utter improbability of his writing such a postscript to Mr. Ballinger at Washington, when the latter was away for his vacation for two months, must impress everyone.

Places the Blame.

"The person upon whose statement the existence of what has been properly characterized as an amazing postscript is based, is a writer for newspapers and magazines, who was given permission by Secretary Fisher, after consulting with me, to examine all the files in respect to the Controller Bay matter—and this under the supervision of Mr. Brown, then private secretary of the secretary of the interior. After the examination, at which it is alleged this postscript was received from the hand of Mr. Brown, the correspondent prepared an elaborate article on the subject of this order and Controller Bay, which was submitted to Mr. Fisher, and which was discussed with Mr. Fisher at length, but never in the conversation between them or in the article submitted did the correspondent mention the existence of the postscript. Mr. Brown states that there was no such postscript in the papers when he showed them to the correspondent and that he never saw such a postscript. Similar evidence is given by Mr. Carr and other custodians of the records in the interior department.

"Stronger evidence of the falsity and maliciously slanderous character of the alleged postscript could not be had. Its only significance is the light it throws on the bitterness and venom of some of those who take active part in every discussion of Alaskan issues.

Scandal-Mongering Denounced.

"I am in full sympathy with the concern of reasonable and patriotic men that the valuable resources of Alaska should not be turned over to be exploited for the profit of greedy, absorbing and monopolistic corporations or syndicates. Whatever the attempts which have been made, no one, as a matter of fact, has secured in Alaska any undue privilege or franchise not completely under the control of congress. I am in full agreement with the view that every care, both in administration and in legislation, must be observed to prevent the corrupt or unfair acquisition of undue privilege, franchise, or right from the government in that district. But everyone must know that the resources of Alaska can never become available either to the people of Alaska or to the public of the United States unless reasonable opportunity is granted to those who would invest their money to secure a return proportionate to the risk run in the investment and reasonable under all circumstances.

"On the other hand, the acrimony of spirit and the intense malice that have been engendered in respect of the administration of the government in Alaska and in the consideration of measures proposed for her relief and the wanton recklessness and eagerness with which attempts have been made to besmirch the characters of high officials having to do with the Alaskan government, and even of persons not in public life, present a condition that calls for condemnation and requires that the public be warned of the demoralization that has been produced by the hysterical suspicions of good people and the unscrupulous and corrupt misrepresentations of the wicked. The helpless state to which the credulity of some and the malevolent scandal-mongering of others have brought the people of Alaska in their struggle for its development ought to give the public pause, for until a juster and fairer view be taken, investment in Alaska, which is necessary to its development, will be impossible, and honest administrators and legislators will be embarrassed in the advocacy and putting into operation of those policies in regard to the territory which are necessary to its progress and prosperity. BABY'S HAIR ALL CAME OUT

"When my first baby was six months old he broke out on his head with little bumps. They would dry up and leave a scale. Then it would break out again and it spread all over his head. All the hair came out and his head was scaly all over. Then his face broke out all over in red bumps and it kept spreading until it was on his hands and arms. I bought several boxes of ointment, gave him blood medicine, and had two doctors to treat him, but he got worse all the time. He had it about six months when a friend told me about Cuticura. I sent and got a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. In three days after using them he began to improve. He began to take long naps and to stop scratching his head. After taking two bottles of Resolvent, two boxes of Ointment and three cakes of Soap he was sound and well, and never had any breaking out of any kind. His hair came out in little curls all over his head. I don't think anything else would have cured him except Cuticura.

"I have bought Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap several times since to use for cuts and sores and have never known them to fail to cure what I put them on. Cuticura Soap is the best that I have ever used for toilet purposes." (Signed) Mrs. F. E. Harmon, R. F. D. 2, Atoka, Tenn., Sept. 10, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 16 L, Boston.

TO AWAIT HIGH COURT EDICT

No Further Actions Under Moon Law Until Supreme Court Makes Final Decision.

Des Moines.—Attorney General Cosson was in Sioux City and represented the state in the argument of the case of Berger vs. Dilly, sheriff of Woodbury county, in an action brought to test the validity of the Moon law and determine the number of saloons now allowed by the Iowa law under the provisions of this act, authorized the publication of a statement as to the purpose of this case and the reason for his appearance therein.

Mr. Cosson said he has received many requests from various county attorneys throughout the state asking him as to what action they should take and as to the construction that should be placed upon the provisions of the Moon law. He stated that owing to the importance of the question and the fact that it would take a decision of the supreme court of the state to determine the meaning of the law, he had not given any advice to the county attorneys as to its interpretation, preferring to wait until the supreme court had given an authoritative and final construction of the law.

Mr. Cosson further stated that now that the case had been tried he would not advise the county attorneys to take any further action and would not take any further action himself until this test case had been finally determined by the supreme court.

Talks On Tax Valuation.

In a statement, issued recently, Clifford Thorne, state railroad commissioner, mildly criticises the state executive council for its valuation of railroad properties. He also suggests that actual physical valuation is the only proper basis of taxation He says:

"The actual value of Iowa railroad, as just found by our executive council is $267,853,680. The market value of Iowa railroads within this state as estimated by the national government in 1904 was $344,847,000, making a difference of the value as found by our national government seven years ago compared to the value as found by our executive council this year in the snug sum of $76,993,320 in favor of the railroads. Compared to the present market value this difference would amount to more than one hundred million dollars.

"The cost of road and equipment reported by our Iowa railroads to the Iowa commission as shown by the last published report (1909) amounted to $42,848,080.05 (as compared again to the valuation just made by the executive council amounting to $267,853,680.) These returns as to cost include figures on the proportional basis."

Action Against Railway.

Suit for $500 for alleged violation of the law governing the care of animals while being transported, was brought against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway company in the federal court by United States Attorney M. L. Temple, of Osceola.

The government requires that cattle and horses may not be kept on trains for more than twenty-eight hours without being unloaded for rest and water.

The complaint against the railroad charges that the Milwaukee kept a car load of horses shipped from Chicago to Thomas Massman at Moravia, Iowa, in one of its cars for a period of fifty-six hours without water.

Unsanitary Tanks In Trains.

The attention of Secretary Sumner of the state board of health, has been called to the alleged unsanitary condition of the tanks in which drinking water used on railway trains and in depots, is kept. It is claimed that the insides of these cans are in a filthy condition and that even though the passengers have their own drinking cups, they are liable to contract diseases through the drinking of impure water.

Third Big Lumber Fire Causes Loss of $190,000

FIRE BUGS ARE SUSPECTED

Rags Saturated With Kerosene Are Found Near Plant of Iowa Casket Company During Early Morning Hours.

Dubuque, July 31.—Dubuque was visited by the third big fire within three months yesterday afternoon when the plant of the Spahn & Rose Lumber company was entirely destroyed and property of three other firms badly damaged, entailing a loss of $190,000. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin, as were the others a few weeks ago which caused a loss of several hundred thousand dollars to the Standard Lumber company.

The losses are estimated as follows:

Spahn & Rose company, $50,000; Winecke-Hoerr Canning company, $40,000; Kretschmer Manufacturing company, manufacturers of plumbers' supplies, building and stock, $100,000.

For a time the million-dollar sash and door factory of the Farley & Loetscher company and the Carr-Rider & Adams company plant were in grave danger.

The conflagration, authorities believe started in a pile of dry lumber in the yards of the Spahn & Rose concern and spread rapidly to the offices near by. The flames were not long in eating their way through the whole block, and in less than an hour the property of the lumber firm was in ruins. The pickling works of the Winecke-Hoerr company, immediately adjoining, were soon attacked by the flames. Likewise the Kretschmer building fell before the onslaught of the demon fire.

Seemed to Give Him a New Stomach

"I suffered intensely after eating and no medicine or treatment I tried seemed to do any good," writes H. M. Youngpeters, editor of the Sun, Lake View, Ohio. "The first few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets gave me surprising relief and the second bottle seemed to give me a new stomach and perfectly good health." For sale by all dealers.

MAN KILLED NEAR SEXTON

While threshing south of Sexton, last Friday, Leonard Hart was almost instantly killed. Hart was the engineer on the engine that was furnishing the power for the separator. He allowed the water to run low and undertook to fill the boiler with cold water, when the boiler exploded. Hart was blown thirty feet, striking against a house.—Britt News.

Cuts and bruises may be healed in about one-third the time required by the usual treatment by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. It is an antiseptic and causes such injuries to heal without maturation. This liniment also relieves soreness of the muscles and rheumatic pains. For sale by all dealers.

BRITT BUTCHER IN TROUBLE

Pure food inspectors were in Britt Tuesday and took our butcher to the county seat for not operating his shop according to law. We understand he is to have a hearing today. It would seem that a man who has a monopoly on the butcher business in a town of this size should run his shop nearly correct.—Britt News.

An ordinary case of diarrhoea can, as a rule, be cured by a single dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. This remedy has no superior for bowel complaints. For sale by all dealers.

Fire Near Swaledale

Fire Monday night, starting rather mysteriously, destroyed the barn, cribs, and other buildings on the George Albert farm near Swaledale, and the threshing outfit belonging to Reidel Bros. It appears that the fire started in or near the separator and quickly spread to the straw stack and then to the barn. The house caught on fire and was badly damaged before the fire could be put out.

Buy it now. Now is the time to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed before the summer is over. This remedy has no superior. For sale by all dealers.

He chuckled to himself, but his chuckle did not raise an echo.

"Id vould be easy for me," he said, "to allow you to continue mit der impressions you haff receifed. But I cannot allow it. Efen at der expense of a wrong imbression of myselluf, I must giff you my explanation—vich you can belief or not belief, as you like. Mr. Swifton iss a man dot you know—a man you vill always know throughoud hiss life. Me—I am a strancher. I haff been teaching Mr. Swifton some Cherman—but I resign now as his tutor."

"No, no! I won't have that!" Harry bluffed.

"Unless you accept my resignation, I cannot say vat I vish to say," the Count decided.

Accepting Harry's silence as a confirmation of the alleged resignation, he went, checking off his points as he made them, upon his fingers.

"First, vat do we haff? Ve haff Cheneral Blazes coming here in a great rage, saying his wife is here. He iss assured dot she iss not, und he goes avay."

"Verily, I told him she had not been here. I saw not her nor any other woman—not even that one who —" ceased speaking. The Count bowed to her and went on:

"Later, Cheneral Blazes returns. He iss sure hiss vife iss here. He has heard from der milliner store dot she iss supposed to haff called up from here on der telumphones. Der rest you all know—or think you know. He demands his vife. He iss again convinced she iss not here, und as he starts oud, he hears a sneeze. Such a sneeze is von dot iss echoed in hiss heart. He beliefs it iss hiss own vife's sneeze. Der door iss opened, und instead off hiss vife, oud comes der milliner! Amazement!"

With a sense of the dramatic unities, the Count paused. The others nodded mutely in confirmation of his summing up of the evidence.

"Vell, den," he resumed. "Vat iss der natural deductions you draw. Darefore, und consequently, our first conclusion iss dot things look plack for Mr. Swifton. Iss it not so?"

They agreed, silently.

"But vy should it be so?" the Count asked, pleasantly. "Iss Mr. Swifton der only man in der house? Iss he der only man in der vorld dot flirts? May I ask vy I, a poor, unknown, unnoticed Cherman—though id iss not so in my own country, I assure you! —iss dare any reason vy I should be neglected in your suspicions?"

Lucy and Carolyn looked at each other triumphantly. Here was a ray of hope for Harry, after all.

"But," the Count went on, "I must beg you not to suspect me as you do Mr. Swifton. I know you vill not, for peebles do not giff such violent suspicion to stranchers as dey do to their own kind. I vill tell you how dis vomman happens to be in dot room. I sent her dare!"

"You did!" Carolyn exclaimed. "Why, I thought Harry—"

"Off course, Miss Swifton," the Count interrupted her. "Ve vould always giff der benefit off der doubt to any von but our own folks. Is it not so? Now, vy did I sent her dare? She comes here to see aboud a hat she hass sent to a wrong address. I recognize in her a lady mit whom I haff flirted. You see, I do not hesitate to acknowledge dot I haff flirted. Vy should I? I am in diss country for dot purpose. Ladies flirt mit me—a gallant chentleman vill at least be polite enough to respond. Beauty vas effer a veakness mit me. So! I meet dis lady here—dis milliner. I engage her in conversations. Ve hear some von coming. She cannot get oud. I tell her to hide in dot room a moment. She hides. But dare is no chance for her to get oud. Und at last, ven it seems dot dare vill be a chance, der explosion comes—und you know der rest."

The Count removed his eyeglass and swung it nonchalantly by its cord. He awaited the verdict. He did not look at Harry at all. Smilingly, he studied the wall.

"Dost thee realize that thee has endangered the name of this woman?" Medders asked, in quiet tones.

"Not so," the Count defended himself. "I vas protecting it. Der Cheneral, und all der rest off you, by making her come out—you put her in danger."

"Well," Harry said, after seeming to think the matter over very seriously, "I confess that I am surprised by what you have told us. But I think we should make allowances for you. You are unfamiliar with our view of things and of conduct. What seems right to you may seem utterly wrong to us. I am not defending you, but I am not condemning you. I only ask you, next time you chat with a milliner, not to hide her around here."

This concluding remark of his, accompanied with a sunny smile, broke the tension, but Carolyn almost spoiled everything by saying:

"It sounds reasonable enough, but how does it happen that Harry was so determined no one should go into that room?"

"I haff no answer," the Count replied. "I haff told as much as I should tell."

"It looks to me as if he knew what you had done, and was trying to help you out," Carolyn declared.

"It ill beseems me to offer advice in the house where I am a guest," said Mr. Medders, "but I might suggest to thee that we ask Harry to tell us his side of this story later. It is unfortunate, truly, but I do not doubt that he will explain all to us. Daughter, we will remain here, as we planned, and now let us try to forget this unpleasantness, and make ourselves welcome."

"Thank you, Mr. Medders," Harry said. "I can see that you and Lucy still have a faint suspicion of me—but I can clear that up readily enough."

"I've got more than a faint one," Carolyn told him.

"Oh, well, I don't have to explain everything to you, sis," Harry said, easily. "But arguments are bad on an empty stomach. I happen to know that there's to be a pretty good dinner tonight, so we'll all get ready and eat it."

"You vill excuse me," the Count said. "I must—"

"No, sir!" Harry said, heartily. "I want you to show the folks that you're not half as black as you have painted yourself."

CHAPTER X.

It was a quiet dinner they ate that evening. After much persuasion, the Count had remained. But even his stumbling attempts at witty sallies brought few smiles.

Harry had succeeded in quieting Carolyn's alarms, and she in turn had given her own version of matters to Lucy. And a long talk Harry had with Mr. Medders had helped. Harry would not tell Medders the inside facts, but he told him that later he would make everything plain. At this time, he said, to disclose everything would be to tarnish a woman's name —and Medders partly understood. The good old man was fond of Harry. And he had lived long enough to know that appearances were often deceitful. He was willing to give Harry the benefit of the doubt.

But it was a quiet dinner. After they had left the table Harry succeeded in getting Lucy to come and talk with him in the reception room, and there he begged her to be patient until he felt that the time had arrived for him to make a clean breast of everything to her. At last he coaxed back the smiles to her face, but only after giving his word of honor that so far as he was concerned, the presence of Daphne in his house was not a reflection upon him.

Meanwhile the Count, endeavoring to keep his promise to get Harry out of the scrape, slipped out into the lawn, and by throwing pebbles against the window of the room where Mrs. Blazes was attracted her attention.

She opened the windows, and in an almost hysterical voice, begged him to get her out.

"I vill, iff you only be quiet," the Count said. "Your husband chust vent in. I saw him ven I come out."

"But what can I do?" she asked.

"Trust me!"

"I did," she sighed, "and lost my hat."

"Yess, und I let you haff my ring, too,"

"Bother your old ring!" she answered. "I'll give it back to you. I hate the sight of it!"

"Giff it to me, den," the Count whispered, eagerly.

"I will," she hesitated, "when I get out of here."

The Count swiftly disappeared from view as the front door opened and Harry and the General came down the steps. The General's arm was across Harry's shoulders.

GUILE OF DRONGO CUCKOO

Protected by Its Resemblance to Pugnacious Shrike, It Lays Its Eggs Where It Pleases.

A striking example of protective coloring in birds has just been added to the collection of the Brooklyn Institute Museum in the form of a drongo shrike and a drongo cuckoo.

The shrike is a bird of pugnacious disposition, especially at the nesting season, when it guards its nest with, for a small bird, great ferocity. Douglas Dewar, from whom this account is taken, says that he has watched a pair of these litte birds attack and drive away a monkey which tried to climb into the tree in which their nest was placed. Indeed, so able a fighter is the shrike that some other birds, notably orioles and doves, frequently build their nests in the same tree in order to share the benefit of his prowess.

The drongo cuckoo lays its eggs in the nests of such birds as the king crow. These are pugnacious, even ferocious, and without some guile a cuckoo could not accomplish this feat. But the drongo cuckoo is so like the drongo shrike, even having the same odd twist to its tail feathers, that the king crow is deceived by the resemblance and hesitates to give fight to what she takes to be one of the pugnacious shrikes.

Ink Stains.

I accidentally spilled a bottle of ink on a fine lunch cloth, and after using lemons, butter and vinegar could not remove the stain. I then tried peroxide of hydrogen, putting a ten-cent bottle into a pail of cold water, put in the lunch cloth, and let it boil until every trace of the stain was removed. This is a sure way of removing ink stains.—Exchange.

PHILADELPHIA FINDS GREATEST THING ON EARTH

Important Discovery Is Yours at Any Time—Cures Sores and Skin Diseases.

Read what this man says. After using only two cakes of Resinol Soap and one-half jar of Resinol Ointment he cured sores and eruptions of long standing.

"I had a very sore face, and after trying most everything I thought I would try your Soap and Ointment. After using two cakes of Soap and part of a jar of Ointment I found them to be the greatest thing on earth. I advise all those who suffer from any skin disease to use Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. I am glad to say that my skin is nice and clear and I intend to use Resinol Soap as long as I can get it.

"T. K. MATHIEU, Philadelphia, Pa."

It is evident that common sense requires everybody everywhere to have on hand, ready for immediate use, the one standard remedy for all skin troubles. It is Resinol Ointment, put up in screw-top opal containers and selling at fifty cents or a dollar, according to size. This ointment should occupy a prominent place in every bathroom, on every medicine shelf and in every traveling bag, that it may be ready for immediate use. Resinol Ointment does not contain a particle of lead or mercury or other poison. It is absolutely non-irritant, and cannot injure the most delicate skin. It is highly recommended by physicians and nurses. For years Resinol Ointment has remained the standard remedy, noted for its effectiveness and complete harmlessness. It is sold by druggists everywhere.

Dying by Organs.

It has been discovered that if a human being dies after an ordinary illness and not a violent death he does not die all over and all at once. He may have a diseased liver, heart or lung, and this may be the cause of his death; but it has been found that if the diseased organ could have been replaced by a healthy one life might have been maintained indefinitely. This is no imagination or speculation. It has been confirmed by the most careful experiments by the ablest medical scientists in the country.—Leslie's Weekly.

Suddenly the umpire called time.

"Aw, what's the matter!" demanded the catcher.

Washington Notes

Washington, D. C., Aug. 7, 1911

With the disposal of the Reciprocity Bill which President Taft signed a few days ago, insurgents and democrats in Congress immediately formed a combination for passing other tariff reduction bills. The house democrats had passed a wool bill, placing the duty on wool at 20 per cent, the present tariff being about 48 per cent. When this bill went to the senate the insurgent republicans voted with the "old guard" and defeated the bill. The LaFollette bill was then taken up which is a compromise and provided a duty of 35 per cent. As the democrats could not get their own bill, they joined with the insurgent republicans and voted for the LaFollette senate bill on the ground that a half loaf is better than none, and passed the bill through the senate.

—o—

As the House Bill provides for a duty of 20 per cent and the Senate Wool Bill 35 per cent, it is thought that a compromise will be made placing the duty at 30 per cent. President Taft, although admitting that wool duties were too high, has stated that he will veto this bill on the ground that no further tariff bills should be passed until the Tariff Board which is investigating the operation of tariff law, makes its report, which will not be until about December. If President Taft should veto this bill it is believed by many that most of the western states will send delegates to the republican national convention of next year instructed to nominate LaFollette for president, or some other progressive republican.

Hundred Dollar Land

Kanawha Record: The Farmers Bank reports the sale of two farms selling for over a hundred dollars per acre.

The Geo. Hunt farm of 80 acres, east of Rikansrud schoolhouse, has been sold by Michelson Bros. to S. L Wagner for $103 an acre. Mr. Wagner is living on the McCaskey farm in Twin Lakes township and will move on his newly purchased farm on March 1st. The place is now occupied by Severt Michelson.

George Goodrich of Webster City has sold his 80 acres 1½ miles west of town, known as the Warnock place, to T. J. Nelson of near Renwick, a brother of Nels A Nelson of Route 3 Kanawha. The price was $104. F. S. Howd now farms the place.

Big Farm Sold

One of the largest land sales which has occurred in this vicinity in a long time was the purchase of the David Trimball farm of 445 acres near Clear Lake by the Scherling brothers of Parkersburg. They paid $125 per acre or a total of $55,625. This s what is known as the Charles Grimm farm, owned so long by the champion wing shot of America. Mr. Grimm improved this farm until there was nothing its equal in the north part of the state. It is near the shores of Clear Lake and for beauty of location it cannot be excelled. Mr. Trimball purchased it about two years ago. He will give possession the first of next March.

SECRETARY WILSON HONORARY PRESIDENT

U. S. Department of Agriculture In Barley and Hop Exhibition.

The secretary of state, the Hon. Philander Knox, has sent out to the diplomatic and consular representatives of the United States in foreign countries a circular letter informing them that an international brewers' congress will be held in Chicago, Oct. 12 to 22, 1911, and instructing them to bring the matter to the attention of the respective governments to which they are accredited, with the request that due publicity be given to the information and that the respective parties in interest be invited to participate in the congress.

The circular further contains the information that there will also be held at the same time and place an international prize exhibition for barley and hops.

The secretary of agriculture in the United States, the Hon. James Wilson, is the honorary president of the international brewers' congress.

The United States department of agriculture is preparing an exhibit by which the United States government will be represented at the international prize exhibition for barley and hops. The department will show what has been done by several of its experts who have been for some years devoting their time to the improvement of these crops.

The importance of this exhibition for the farmers who raise barley and hops cannot be overrated. It is believed that the first step is herewith taken to bring about a system of valuing these important crops upon a basis of fact rather than upon mere individual preference and perhaps prejudice.

STANDARDS FOR BREWING HOPS.

Value Reckoned on Basis of Hop-Bitter Acids and Aroma.

The following standards have been adopted by the committee on awards for hops entered at the grand international barley and hop prize exhibition at Chicago, Oct. 12 to 22, 1911:

All hops will be valued under one standard, irrespective of geographical origin, on the basis of their hop-bitter acids and aroma, 20 per cent of hop-bitter acids and exquisite aroma receiving 50 points each, penalties being provided for excessive amount of (1) seeds, (2) leaves and stems (poor picking), (3) moisture and dryness (poor kiln drying), (4) sulphuring, (5) damage by wind, mold and insects (6) off color and appearance.

CLUSTERS OF FEMALE HOPS AT DIFFERENT STAGES OF GROWTH.

Standard hops should range from 100 to 50 points, the relative merit or value of the specimen being expressed in the percentage of points it receives.

For every per cent of hop-bitter acids below 20 and down to 15, inclusive, one point is deducted; for every per cent below 15 and down to 10 two points are deducted; for every per cent below 10 and down to 8 three points are deducted; for 1 per cent below 8 four points are deducted.

The scale of quality as to aroma will range from exquisite with fifty points, to inferior with twenty-five points, the grades being: Exquisite, 50; very good, 40; good, 35; fair, 30; inferior, 25.

Contents of leaves and stems and seeds will be penalized one point for each per cent; moisture 1 per cent for each per cent above 10, up to 14; dryness two points for each per cent below 8 and down to 6 inclusive, as indicated in schedule.

Hops will be disqualified if they contain: (1) Less than 7 per cent of soft resins or hop-bitter acids, (2) more than 14 per cent of seeds (3) more than 12 per cent of leaves and stems, (4) more than 15 or less than 6 per cent of moisture, (5) if strongly sulphured (heavy reaction in five minutes), (6) if heavily damaged by mold or insects, (7) if strongly discolored or strongly off in appearance, (8) if abnormal in odor, disagreeable, cheesy or rank.

THE AWARDS FOR EXHIBITS OF BARLEY.

Cash Prizes Totaling Seven Thousand Dollars.

Awards for exhibits of barley at the second international barley and hop prize exhibit at Chicago, Oct. 12-22, will be made as follows:

The awards will consist of over 100 cash prizes, totaling about $7,000, which have been contributed by a number of associations of brewers, maltsters and individual manufacturers. The highest individual prize is $300.

For the purpose of prize distribution each of the four botanically different types represented by (1) Manchuria, (2) Bay Brewing, (3) White Club, (4) Chevalier will constitute a class by itself.

Prizes are also awarded according to geographical origin—by states—and commercial importance of the crop in the discretion of the committee on awards. Special awards will also be made in accordance with the conditions imposed by contributors.

The amount of barley offered for exhibit must be at least sixty pounds in bulk, with a sheaf of barley of at least twelve heads each.

The specimens must represent a fair average product of one field on which they were grown and must be taken by the grower himself from a quantity of 2,000 pounds at least.

All samples of barley must be properly certified to have been grown by the exhibitor according to the "rules and regulations" to be obtained from the committee on awards, 1508 Republic building, Chicago.

AWARDS OF PRIZES FOR HOP EXHIBITS.

Conditions That Will Govern In This Class.

Awards of prizes will be made according to the following rules for hops entered in the second international barley and hop prize exhibition to be held at Chicago, Oct. 12-22, 1911:

The awards will consist of twenty-one prizes, the highest amounting to $150.

For the purpose of prize distribution each distinct hop growing section (foreign or domestic) will constitute a class by itself. The following American sections are recognized as distinct for this purpose: (1) New York state, (2) California, (3) Oregon, (4) Washington, (5) British Columbia.

Hops grown outside of these sections will be considered as belonging to that section which conforms most closely to their districts geographically and climatically, in the discretion of the committee on awards.

All samples of hops must be certified to have been grown by the exhibitor.

The amount of hops offered for exhibit must be at least ten pounds, with six clusters of about twelve cones each.

At Hymen's Altar

On Tuesday forenoon, August 8th, 1911, at the family home in Belmond, surrounded by relatives and a few intimate friends, Bessie Pollock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Ely, was united in marriage to Dr W. Frank Missman of Klemme.

The bride was prettily attired in white silk and carried an arm boquet of bridal roses. As Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Miss Anna Tiede the bride preceded by her sister, Miss Gertrude, passed down the stairway. They were met by the groom and his brother, Prof. I. E. Missman of Garner. The bridal party then took their places beneath an arch of asters and ferns, where the ceremony was performed by Rev. H. A. Keck, pastor of the English Methodist church of Garner, a classmate of Dr. Missman.

After the wedding breakfast was served, Dr. and Mrs. Missman left for a brief honeymoon trip, after which they will return to Klemme to make their home.

The groom has been a resident of Klemme for nearly three years and by honorable business methods and strict application to business has built up a lucrative practice. The bride is a popular Belmond young lady and a highly accomplished musician. She has had a class in music here and is well acquainted and universally liked. The Times, with a host of friends, wishes Dr. and Mrs. Missman happiness in the full sense of word and prosperity in abundance.

To Those Interested

In the movements of the planets of the Solar System the undersigned wishes to make the following statements:

The planet Venus appearing in the west as an evening star is now (August 10) at its brightest. It is setting earlier from evening to evening and by Sept. 10th will become lost in the twilight, or in other words, will be invisible to the naked eye. It will be nearest to the earth Sept. 15th, at which time it sets with the sun. After this date it sets and rises earlier than the sun. It will appear as a morning star the latter part of September and will be at its brightest Oct. 22d. It will continue as a morning star all winter but inasmuch as it is then moving away from the earth it will continue to grow fainter.

Jupiter appears in the southwest as a bright evening star but is growing fainter. Mars appears in the northeast as a bright morning star; it is growing brighter and will be brightest in November at which time it will be visible all night.

Yours truly.

IN STATE-WIDE WAR

Barney Declares Crusade After Conference with Cosson

WILL TEST ALL MEASURES

Commissioner Urges Everyone to Buy by Weight Instead of by Measure—Insists It is Most Equitable.

Des Moines.—A state wide crusade against short measures has been announced by W. B. Barney, state dairy and food commissioner, following a conference with Attorney General Cosson. The last legislature made it the duty of the commissioner to enforce the weights and measures law. The first step of the commissioner will be to instruct the department inspectors all over the state to make an immediate test of measures and scales in all the food handling shops. The inspectors will compare weights and measures to see if they are true and if they correspond. House wives and "ultimate comsumers all over the state will be advised to purchase scales and see that hereafter potatoes, apples and the like are purchased by weight instead of by measure. "I have made considerable investigation in this business," said Commissioner Barney, "and I find that the purchaser will be greatly benefited if he insists on purchasing by weight instead of by measure. It will be a wise thing for the housewife to have a good set of scales handy, that she may weigh potatoes and the like when they are delivered. The Iowa law establishes how many pounds shall constitute a bushel of potatoes, of apples, of beets, of blackberries, etc., and if a bushel measure does not hold the number of pounds designated by the statute the dealer must make up the difference.

Wheat, 60 pounds.

Heavy Penalty Provided.

"Hence, if a person buys a bushel of potatoes," said Commissioner Barney, "he should not be content to see a bushel basket heaped full—he should insist on being weighed out sixty pounds."

The crusade will not be confined to Des Moines alone, or to the large cities, but will be general and sweeping.

A heavy penalty is provided for a violation of the weights and measures law. For the first conviction a fine of from $10 to $100 may be imposed. The penalty for second offenses is not to exceed a fine of $500 or a jail sentence of ninety days.

New Iowa Corporations.

Articles for two twenty-year corporations each with a capital stock of $50,000 has been filed with the state secretary.

The King-Gilder Grain Co., a Cedar Rapids concern, and the Clinton Manufacturing company, filed amended and substituted articles changing the name to the Clinton Manufacturing and Investment company calling for the above amount.

STATE LOSER ON AUTO DEAL

Secretary of State Says That 15 Per Cent. Of Tax Will Not Pay Expenses.

Des Moines.—For the present, at least, the state of Iowa will go "in the hole" in complying with the new auto tax law, according to Secretary of State Hayward.

The first apportionment of the fund created by the new law will be made within a few days. The sum total of the fund is a little over $111,000. Of this amount the state will get about $16,000 to defray expenses and all the remainder will be divided among the counties for use in building good roads.

The contract price for the numbers sold to autoists by the state is $8,000. It is estimated that it costs a like amount to deliver the numbers to the motor car owners. Hence, it costs the state practically $16,000 to secure the official number plates and deliver them to auto owners.

"Hence, the state's share of the tax is eaten up to begin with. But in addition to the cost of securing the number plates, the state must bear the expense of postage—which is heavy—of the additional employes about the office by reason of the increased work occasioned by the law, and other incidentals. I doubt whether the state could come out even if the law were changed so that 25 per cent of the fund could be retained by the state to defray expenses."

The law provides that the distribution of the fund be made Aug. 1, but the state treasurer could not comply because of the failure of some county auditors to report to him the number of townships in their county.

Every City Should Have Market.

"The market place is certainly a good thing for the people of Des Moines," remarked Justice C. M. Aylesworth. "I was over the other day and puruchased a basket of corn, two dozen ears for 25 cents, and it was as fine a grade of sweet corn as anyone would want. It is a fine thing if it will drive out the grafters. I believe that the man who raises produce should have a right to sell it wherever he chooses. This market place is a good thing, as it brings the producer next to the consumer, and this is the object that should be aimed at. Anyone who has the impression that only the common people are the ones who desire to buy as cheaply as possible are mistaken, as the best people of the city are to be found at the market place with their baskets and arguing over the prices. Produce is what the people want and it should be so they could deal with the producer direct, and the middleman should be eliminated. I believe that every town in the state of any size should have a market place, and the council did a great thing when they started this one. The market place certainly gives the common people a chance."

New Normal Courses.

The first twenty-three cities and towns to be assigned as places in which the high school normal training course will be established were announced recently by A. M. Deyoe, state superintendent of public instruction. A total of forty-one high schools will be designated as normal training course schools this year. Next year the balance of the counties will be given the course.

The cities and towns whose high schools get the course are as follows: Newton, Guthrie county high school at Panora, Northwood, Waverly, Onawa, Spencer, Emmetsburg, Cherokee, Carroll, Osceola, Greenfield Marshalltown, New Hampton, Maquoketa, Elkader, Hampton, Wapello, Atlantic, Estherville, Waukon, Creston and Le Mars. Each of these high schools will receive $500 from the state for the support of the normal training course.

Inspector Seizes Vinegar.

Dr. A. Brown, government food and drug inspector, has seized thirty barrels of vinegar made by the Central City Vinegar company of Peoria and shipped to the company's local agent in Des Moines. The vinegar is put out by the company as cider vinegar and Dr. Brown declares the label is not correct. It is likely that suit will be brought against the company in the federal court for alleged violation of the pure food act.

All Are Being Watched.

Sixty immigrants from the cholera infected districts of Europe have entered Iowa during the month of July. Secretary Sumner has the name and location of every one of them and they are being watched by local boards of health.

Marke Named as Clerk.

Edward Marke, of Des Moines, was appointed clerk of the new state anti-toxin department by Secretary Sumner, of the state board of health. This department was created by the last legislature.

GIVES RIGHT TOUCH

EMBROIDERY ON BLOUSES IS OF DISTINCT VALUE.

Many Varieties That May Be Employed, and None of Them Hard to Girl Skillful With the Needle.

There has, in all probability, never been a season in which embroideries have played such an important part in the world of dress, for, nowadays, even the simplest of muslin blouses is beautified with needlework of every description. This fashion is really a godsend to the girl with a moderate dress allowance, if she is at all skillful with her needle, for quite a cheap cotton dress or blouse may be adorned with embroidery until it has all the appearance of a most expensive article. The embroidery can be almost any variety, from the plainest to the most elaborate, according to the taste and capabilities of the worker, and every description of fancy work may be utilized.

The most popular kind is satin-stitch, rather heavily padded, and this may be adapted to an infinite number of designs, from flowing sprays of flowers to conventional and geometrical patterns. A pretty design is the one shown, which consists entirely of butterflies. This is quite easy to execute and may be carried out in that variety of stitches which is comprised under the heading of Mountmellick work. The bodies of the butterflies should be embroidered in satin-stitch, thickly padded, the stitches going evenly across and across. The wings are outlined with satin-stitch and then filled in with any stitch the worker pleases. A very effective method of working them is to cut large eyelet holes, the edges of which are overcast and then buttonholed bars worked across them. This design is a very uncommon one, but looks singularly pretty when carried out with care and taste. The conventional design given in No. 2 is particularly well adapted for embroidering on one of the kimono and Magyar blouses, which are still enjoying a remarkable run of popularity, and may be carried out in white or in colors, according to the blouse itself.

Another idea for Mountmellick work is suggested in No. 3, the peacock's feather design, these feathers being worked apparently at haphazard, scattered over the front, back and sleeves of the blouse. Stem-stitch, buttonhole-stitch and feather-stitch are used in this design, while the eye of the feather is embroidered in satin-stitch. A very striking and handsome effect may be obtained by working this eye in color, the rest of the embroidery being, of course, in white, and a rather deep shade of Saxe or peacock blue will be found singularly suitable. A perfectly plain muslin or cotton blouse, which could be picked up for next to nothing at the summer sales which are with us now, could be ornamented with this design, which will be found perfectly simple to draw out and particularly quickly and easily worked. For those who are afraid of attempting a heavy pattern in satin-stitch there are a variety of charming and simple designs in stem-stitch or chain-stitch, which may be carried out by the merest beginner. Chain-stitch, worked in delicately colored washing silk or filoselle, looks exceedingly pretty on a muslin blouse, having a wonderfully light and graceful effect.

Pepper Sauce.

Grind one dozen and a half green, red and yellow peppers and a small solid head of cabbage in a meat chopper. They should be very fine. Add 5 cents' worth each celery seed and ground mustard with vinegar to make the consistency of catsup. This goes well with meats.

FREEING BRUSHES FROM DUST

Care That Is Necessary to Keep the Articles in a Hygienic Condition.

The hygienic condition in which both brushes and combs are kept so influence hair and scalp that if the former are not constantly freed from dust that which they contain will be directly applied each time either article is used.

Each time after it is used a brush should have its bristles freed from dust just as a dusting cloth is cleaned after being used. A good housekeeper would not dream of putting away a dusting cloth without shaking it, but the same woman will put down her hair brush with no thought of its being unclean.

To free the bristles from dust strike a flat surface, such as bureau top or table, with the tips of the bristles, the brush back being in normal position. Then rub across the table edge with the bristles, sawing across, as it were. If there is doubt in her mind of the need of this treatment, one cleaning in this way will convince her.

Once a week is, as a rule, often enough to wash a brush. More than that is apt to make the bristles limp, and if they are to be kept stiff, never must they be placed in very hot water.

There are specially prepared powders to cleaning brushes, but a few teaspoonfuls of borax in a basin of clear water is excellent. To cleanse a brush in this preparation hold the bristles down and shake them under water. To dry, the brush should be placed on end, that the water may run out quickly.

HOLIDAY WEAR

A mob cap of soft lace and black velvet ribbons with very long ends.

Follies of Investment.

The World's Work sets forth some of the absurdities that people for the most part intelligent will commit when they have money to invest. If a man is sick, he goes to a doctor; if in a row with his neighbors, he goes to a lawyer; if in spiritual trouble, he consults a minister or priest; if in business straits he calls upon the banker. If, however, he has a problem of investment on his hands, he calls upon merchants, lawyers, bankers, ministers and miscellaneous people quite indiscriminately—and with about the same practical results that he would get if he followed the some method in sickness, in legal trouble, in business trouble or in spiritual woe.

Care of the Baby's Feet.

Too much care cannot be given the baby's feet. The little child's foot is naturally pretty, but it is so soft and pliant that it is easily molded and an ill fitting, badly made shoe will only too quickly deform it and twist it out of shape. The shoes, regardless of whether they are buttoned or laced, must not be too tightly fastened or the circulation of the blood will be impeded. It is a good plan in summer to allow the baby to go barefoot as much of the time as possible about the home. This allows the foot to grow naturally.

The Boy Puzzle

By DR. J. S. KIRTLEY

His Employments

His sports form one kind of exer- but are not what we call em- ment. Some of his employments turns into sports, some of the ; but usually they are work, noth- but work.

here are three reasons why he t have some employment. One is he gets discipline by it, in in- try, in the adaptation of means to is, in foresight, in continuity and in mastery. Again that is the way is getting ready for his career, for se are the very qualities he must e when he gets out into his life k; and he must get them started, habits, at the habit making time his life. Two things are required— racter and efficiency; and he is ting them, by means of his work. third reason is that his services indispensable in the home, even ough his parents are rich enough to e everything they want done. A want cannot put the spirit of a son to his work and a child can be rtner. Yet his work is more im- rtant to him than to the rest of the ily.

Hardships and obstacles are a dis- ct advantage to him. Two mistakes often made. On the one hand, so ch may be done for him and so lit- through him and in partnership th him, that he will grow up with- any sense of responsibility to any- dy for anything; on the other hand little interest may be taken in at he is compelled to do that his rk will seem entirely unrelated to own interests.

Three characteristics of his work essential. It must be regular and finite. Even if it is a medley of disconnected chores, each must have own place in the day's schedule d he will be growing in the virtue system and order, anyhow.

While the ideal of all work is that shall be so congenial that he will ways delight in it, sometimes it is re to be irksome. Those for whom works or the aims he has in work- must so excite his interest that will be glad to do even disagree- le things. And even then he is t an angel.

His work must be in some degree munerative. He wants to see that gets something for it. Often he nts no more than the pleasure of lping. That reward he must always ve.

If there is no form of interest, it will be only eye service. Duty may demand work, but he is at cross pur- poses with duty. Co-operative part- nership is most congenial to him. That appeals to his self respect, en- lightens him about family interests and needs, and it gives him an un- selfish interest in others besides him- self.

But it is of the highest importance that he receive some of the rewards in order to gratify his sense of own- ership and his sense of right and to secure the uncoerced action of his will. The sharing may be in indirect ways. Even when his part goes back into the common funds for family sup- port, he is willing, provided he can be credited with being deliberately in the combine.

His ownership of his earnings is to be recognized, though he is not to be left without instructions as to the way he should handle it. Habits of thrift and economy may be taught both in the work done and in the care taken of his possessions.

Even employment with hobbies is of benefit, as it develops special tastes and sometimes fits him for special work in the future. In future years he is apt to find in the memory of those hobbies a source of recreative amusements. One boy of my ac- quaintance went into the white rab- bit industry and paid expenses, while getting in large returns of pleasure and information and sympathy with animal life. Another one went into photography, while a little gang, near by, studied wireless telegraphy. Draw- ing, ceramic work, sketching, music, vocal and instrumental, have given boys lots of pleasure and profit.

He must be guarded against some very definite perils. He is in danger of capitalizing his value to the family and thereby growing hard and selfish. Vanity and self-importance will kill kindness and prevent the fullest en- joyment of his rewards. He must be given an opportunity for the exercise of his power of initiative and fore- thought. He must be invited into the council chamber and be given a hear- ing, as a junior, in the enterprises in which he is to be a participant. Per- haps he can be easily taught that he is to put forth those powers which he will need in his future work. Thus he will be growing in the virtues of self-knowledge and self-direction.

The Boy's Beauty

As a rule, he is not a thing of beau- , nor a joy forever—not yet. The rrepressible conflict," of which we ve read and said so much, is the nflict between his desire to look well d his disinclination to use the meas- es that will insure good looks, if any- ing will. A presentable appearance impossible without cleanliness, and, om that standpoint, boys drop into ree classes. First are the few, the recious few, who like to use soap and ater and scrubbing implements, on rdinary as well as on state occasions, d the latter means Saturday nights; t it must be conceded that this is an most invisible, rather than invincible mpany of "Knights of the Bath." The econd group stands out in contrast ith a certain group of Illinois states- en, in that they must have high pres- re inducements to avail themselves special bath room facilities. The ird is the great middle class of boys ho, with more or less reluctance, will -operate in the care of their persons. will be different later

Then there comes a time when, even ith the best of clothes, it is hard to ecure the co-operation of his looks in aking a desirable impression. He ould like to be graceful, but is loose- jointed, like a mule. When he starts or a point he is likely to swing around d knock down a lamp, a vase and aluable bric-a-brac before he reaches s destination. His hair won't stay mbed, not even parted. He wears t his pants just where you don't want im to wear them out. When he smiles, is not just like Gladstone's smile, hich Joseph Parker described as like unshine breaking over a crag. But he oks as if he were trying to work up me fresh cuticle that had grown on s face since the day before, and if he ucceeds in working it all up into a mile he does not know what to do ith it—he looks as if he would like to allow the thing. But it is a fetching mile and makes a permanent impres- on on you. You are apt to wake up the night singing, "His bright smile aunts me still." His hands know no epose. His voice is liable any minute go clean out of sight, as a tenor, and e next minute to go rumbling down the bowels of the earth as a bass.

He can croak like a frog, chirp like a cricket and sing like an angel, all in the same breath. It is the awkward age and is incurable—until he ceases to be a boy. His framework is thrown up like a modern skyscraper, and he creeps up on it and takes possession of one story at a time, getting ac quainted with that part of himself gradually and suspiciously.

It is a paradox, but still true, that he is at his most fascinating and for bidding period at one and the same time, and his looks betray him, in both respects. Conceit and humilia tion, love and dislike are struggling within him.

There is a moral value in his looks because they react on his disposition and tendencies; and they affect his re lations with people whether that is de sirable or not. It is at the awkward age he is apt to become very con scious of the presence and attractions of the opposite sex. Then looks begin to count. Ablutions become a pleas ure. He shines the heels of his shoes washes every convolution in his ears and goes behind them, and he learns the decorative value of clothes. His looks affect his feelings and therefore his conduct. Any patch on his clothes in front distresses him and the thought that there may be one on the other side of him, which he cannot see, while others can, tortures him. His features must remain as nature made them, but they may be helped out with cleanliness and clothes and appropri ate decorations and the right kind of foods and scientific physical culture, till those same features will reshape themselves and assume manly beauty, especially when there is a noble and beautiful soul residing in the body and using it for the highest purpose.

Culture in good looks is one of the rights of a boy, in order to overcome present disadvantages and equip him with power for future use; and it can be carried on only with his co-opera- tion. But therein lies his peril. His vanity is such a curious thing, it may deceive him with conceit and torture him with dissatisfaction. To work for good looks, as an asset, is not bad, but perilous. He will need both ad- vice and example.

ECONOMY IN LAUNDRY

LITTLE WAYS BY WHICH TO RE- DUCE EXPENDITURES.

Buying Soap by the Box Is a Good Method—Stationary Wringer At- tached to the Tub Is a Necessity.

Soft water, for use in laundry work, saves soap, clothing, time, energy and money.

Buying soap by the box is more economical than buying it by the quar- ter's worth.

Removing the soap from the box, and piling it in such a way that it will dry, causes it to wash away less rapidly, and therefore it last longer, than if not dried.

Having a firm, substantial wash- bench, of a height suited to the work- er, so constructed as to hold the tubs securely in position, saves time and energy.

A good stationary wringer, or one which is so made as to be clamped securely to the tub, is a necessity. When through using the wringer, loosen the screws to relieve the pres- sure on the rubber rollers; wash clean, wipe dry and put it away where it will keep clean until needed. Occasional- ly cleaning the wringer with kero- sene, and then washing with soap- suds, rinsing and drying, tends to keep it in good condition.

The ironing-table should be of a height suited to the ironer; not low enough to cause the worker to stand in a stooped position, nor so high as to necessitate the lifting of the shoul- ders while ironing.

The ironing-pad and sheet should be perfectly smooth, and securely fast- ened to the table, if rapid, efficient work is to be done.

Irons should be of medium weight, smooth and clean. When through using the irons, remove them from the stove and set them on end in a dry place to cool. When they are cool, see that they are clean before putting them away. Irons that are left on the stove day after day are liable to be rough, dirty and unfit for use.

A slip for the ironing holder, made of some coarse white material, is convenient and desirable, because it can be so easily laundered.

Rub the iron, each time it is taken from the stove, on a piece of clean paper or cloth, before using, to pre- vent the possibility of soiling or scorching the article to be ironed.

A clothes-pin bag, which can be tied about the waist when hanging out or taking in the wash, saves many steps and keeps the clothespins clean.

A rope clothes-line should be taken down when not in use, and kept in the clothes-pin bag, where it will be pro- tected from dust and be handy when wanted.—Mary L. Bull, Extension Di- vision Minnesota Agricultural College.

Stuffed Cold Roast Beef.

This is delicious for supper. Butter a long French bread tin, put in a layer of thin sliced roast beef. Over this spread a thick layer of stuffing, then add another layer of sliced beef, and turn over this layer about a teacup of roast beef made gravy, add a very little hot water, just sufficient to keep from burning. Cover with another tin of same size and bake three-quarters of an hour in a quick oven. I make stuffing of crackers broken up and moistened with hot water, a small piece of butter, salt, pepper and poul- try seasoning, and a beaten egg, when eggs are cheap, but egg can be omit- ted.—Exchange.

Drawers for Pantry.

When we built our house we had, in the pantry, two good-sized drawers lined with zinc. These had covers hinged about half-way from front to back. They are the most satisfactory receptacles for bread and cake I have ever had. The cake drawer has a lock as a safeguard against preda- tory boys.

Sugared Cherries.

Sugared cherries are delicious. Use large, firm cherries for this dish. Have in front of you a soup plate contain- ing the whites of three eggs mixed with five tablespoonfuls of cold water, another plate filled with sifted pow- dered sugar at your right, the bowl of cherries at your left. Dip each cherry in the water and white of egg, turn it over and over in the sugar and lay on a chilled platter to dry. When all are done sift more powdered sugar over the fruit and arrange carefully on a glass dish.

Banana Fluff.

Slice six large bananas, sprinkle with lemon juice and grated cocoanut, and place directly on ice to chill and ripen for at least an hour. Mash them smooth with a wooden spoon, adding a scant cup of powdered sugar and the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, which should be lightly folded in; then pour into freezer and turn crank for four minutes, or until there is a slight resistance, when half a pint of cream may be added. Then freeze.

More Than That.

An Undefinable Definition.

A few days after school opened in the spring a teacher in a Brooklyn school was testing the members of one of her old classes on what they had remembered of the definitions she had taught them during the preceding term. Finally she asked the bright boy of the class this question:

"Now, Robert, tell me what a hypo- crite is?"

"A hypocrite," replied Robert with- out hesitation, "is a kid w'at comes to school wit' a smile on his mug."

Baffling the Mosquito.

Last summer we were pestered with the awful nuisance, mosquitoes, night after night, and on one occasion killed between thirty and forty in our bedroom, at midnight. The following day I took a woolen cloth, put a little kerosene oil on it, and rubbed both sides of the wire mesh of the screens with it. That night one lonely mos- quito disturbed our rest. Two or three times each week I rubbed the screens in like manner, and we en- joyed peace the rest of the summer. The odor from the oil remains only a few minutes, and the oil itself pre- serves the screens and keeps away flies.—Good Housekeeping Magazine.

STRONGER THAN MEAT

A Judge's Opinion of Grape-Nuts.

A gentleman who has acquired a ju- dicial turn of mind from experience on the bench out in the Sunflower State writes a carefully considered opinion as to the value of Grape-Nuts as food. He says:

"For the past 5 years Grape-Nuts has been a prominent feature in our bill of fare.

"The crisp food with the delicious, nutty flavor has become an indis- pensable necessity in my family's everyday life.

"It has proved to be most healthful and beneficial, and has enabled us to practically abolish pastry and pies from our table, for the children prefer Grape-Nuts, and do not crave rich and unwholesome food.

"Grape-Nuts keeps us all in perfect physical condition—as a preventive of disease it is beyond value. I have been particularly impressed by the benefi- cial effects of Grape-Nuts when used by ladies who are troubled with face blemishes, skin eruptions, etc. It clears up the complexion wonderfully.

"As to its nutritive qualities, my ex- perience is that one small dish of Grape-Nuts is superior to a pound of meat for breakfast, which is an impor- tant consideration for anyone. It sat- isfies the appetite and strengthens the power of resisting fatigue, while its use involves none of the disagreeable consequences that sometimes follow a meat breakfast." HOPS VALUED BY LOOKS AND AROMA.

Best Are Raised in Bohemia, Bavaria and Parts of England.

According to the prevailing opinions, which, according to some American growers, are mere prejudices, the best hops are raised in Bohemia, Bavaria and some parts of England, notably Kent. Most American brewers as well as their European brothers value hops largely by their appearance and their aroma. This matter is being thrashed out thoroughly in connection with the barley and hop exhibition which will be held in Chicago Oct. 12-22. As in the case of other aromatic plants, the sources of the aroma are not well understood. Aroma usually depends upon such minute particles of substance that even the delicate reactions in the chemical laboratory are frequently inadequate to discover them. The high prices which are paid, for instance, for certain wines are based upon their flavor or aroma, and yet this flavor or aroma cannot be discovered by chemical analysis. It is not surprising, therefore, that the substances which contain the flavor or aroma of hops have never been ascertained with certainty. There is a theory that they are closely associated with the soft resins contained in the lupulin, or the hop flour, which is found between the bracts of the cone and which is really the essential part of the hop plant.

LEAVES (BRACTS) OF THE CONE OF HOPS.

As for the color of the hops, various preferences prevail, some preferring the varieties which are entirely green, while others think the yellowish green is preferable. In this country the yellowish kinds are usually preferred, while in Germany the green ones have the call.

Inasmuch as the brewing value of hops depends largely upon the lupulinic acid and the soft resins and the American hops are unusually rich in soft resins, American hop growers need have no fear of entering the prize competition at Chicago under the rules which have been adopted for the jury which is to judge the hops.

"I suffered intensely after eating and no medicine or treatment I tried seemed to do any good," writes H. M. Youngpeters, editor of the Sun. Lake View, Ohio. "The first few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets gave me surprising relief and the second bottle seemed to give me a new stomach and perfectly good health." For sale by all dealers.

It is with pleasure that we advertise the IMPERIAL. When so doing it is hard to say too much in favor of this line of IMPERIAL Automobiles. They have the record up-to-date for running and covering more miles of hard road-going, with the least expense, least adjustments.

The Burd Auto Co., Waterloo, Iowa, says: "The Imperial Automobile has not been equaled yet regardless of price." They run out 37 last season. Up to date there hasn't been one adjustment made. Their contract calls for 100 Imperials for 1911.

The Imperial is built in ten models, from a 35 H. P. two-passenger gentleman's Roadster, to a 60 H. P. seven passenger touring car. Buy the car that bears the name IMPERIAL, and get a dollar's worth of automobile for every dollar you invest.

THAT AWFUL BACKACHE

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have the backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relielf you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

AT THE PARSONAGE.
Coffee Runs Riot No Longer.

"Wife and I had a serious time of it while we were coffee drinkers.

"She had gastritis, headaches, belching and would have periods of sickness, while I secured a daily headache that became chronic.

"We naturally sought relief by drugs without avail, for it is now plain enough that no drug will cure the diseases another drug (coffee) sets up, particularly, so long as the drug which causes the trouble is continued.

"Finally we thought we would try leaving off coffee and using Postum. I noticed that my headaches disappeared like magic, and my old 'trembly' nervousness left. One day wife said, 'Do you know my gastritis has gone?'

"One can hardly realize what Postum has done for us.

"Then we began to talk to others. Wife's father and mother were both coffee drinkers and sufferers. Their headaches left entirely a short time after they changed from coffee to Postum.

"I began to enquire among my parishioners and found to my astonishment that numbers of them use Postum in place of coffee. Many of the ministers who have visited our parsonage have become enthusiastic champions of Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

VICTIM OF PERJURY

"Lifer" Who Died in the Pen Believed Innocent by Many

HE WAS CONVICTED IN 1877

Though It Was Established That M. B. Fisher Was Convicted On False Testimony He Was Never Released.

Des Moines.—M. B. Fisher, the life prisoner in the state penitentiary at Fort Madison, who died recently is believed by many persons to be innocent of the crime of first degree murder, of which he was convicted two separate time. Fisher's case was a most unusual one. He was convicted and sentenced to death in 1877 for the alleged slaying of Emmett Reed near Bradford. The supreme court reversed the case. On the second trial he was again convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. In this second trial the most important state's evidence was given by a man named Howard, who claimed that he had seen Fisher near the scene of the crime the day after it was committed and that Fisher then had several horses and some wagons belonging to Reed. Howard also testified that Fisher told him that he "had the best of Reed" and not to say anything, if he heard anything "drop down at Bedford." After Fisher had been sentenced it was discovered that Howard's testimony was false. It was found that on the day he was supposed to have seen Fisher that he was doing time in the state penitentiary. Hence he was convicted of perjury. Fisher's attempts to secure a new trial by reason of this false testimony were fruitless, the Iowa law making no provision for a new trial in such instances.

During his confinement in the penitentiary Fisher made numerous efforts to be pardoned or paroled, but never had his case been before the state parole board. He was fifty-one years of age when he died.

Attorney Denounces Cosson.

County Attorney Chris N. Jepson, at Sioux City, emphatically denounced the methods taken in the Moon law test case against Charles Berger and declared he wanted to be set right in the matter.

"In justice to this office," he said, "I wish it to be known that neither my assistant, Carl Jones, nor myself had anything to do with arranging this Berger frameup. Attorney General Cosson personally employed the means of the untrue defendant and as his subordinate I was compelled to comply with his wishes. It was not a method I would have counselled." Following the disclosures that Berger is not a Sioux City saloon man and is not even a resident of the state, Judge David Mould declared that if information reached him that the supreme court would not receive the case he would drop it, otherwise he would let the case continue. The attorneys on both sides of the case refuse to discuss the matter.

Roe Back From Dubuque.

State Fire Marshal Roe has completed his investigations of the several lumber yard fires which have occurred in the past year in Dubuque. He stated that he believes that "Sleepy" Dixon, who is being held by the police of Dubuque, is the man who has started all the big fires. There is no question in my mind but that Dixon has had a hand in the starting of every one of those fires," said Marshal Roe. "I am convinced that he deliberately fired all of the places. I was unable to find any motive for his actions. Dubuque people are in a nervous state of mind all the time. They fear a disastrous fire every night. Insurance rates are increasing there as a result of the disastrous fires of this year. Business men are alarmed over the situation and are demanding vigorous action from the council."

Canning Compounds Dangerous.

Bulletin No. 5 of the state food and dairy department contains a warning by Commissioner Barney against canning compounds. The bulletin says: "Many so-called canning compounds are being sold to preserve vegetables in the home. Many of these products contain boric acid, borax, salicylic acid or other harmful preservatives. Preservatives are not necessary where products and containers are properly sterilized. The use of preservatives encourages lax methods and inferior materials."

The bulletin is the best the department has ever sent out. It contains copies of the new laws affecting the department, beside warnings against dirty ice, vinegars, so-called temperance drinks, ice cream renovated butter and other articles of food which are commonly adulterated.

DES MOINES GETS NOTHING

Capital City Does Not Share In Distribution of Funds From the Auto Tax.

Des Moines.—Despite the fact that it owns more automobiles than any other city in the state, Des Moines will receive nothing as its share of the new automobile road tax. This feature of the new road law was discovered by County Auditor Harry B. Frase. The law provides that all the money derived from the tax on automobiles shall be spent in the country and none of it goes to the incorporated towns and cities in the state. According to the new revision each township in the county will have $53 as its share of the automobile tax to spend on the roads.

"Bosh" Says Hayward.

Secretary of State Hayward brands as false the story in the Webster City Journel that he cost the state $6,000 by sending the auto number plates by express instead of mail. "That fellow doesn't know what he is talking about. His statement is all bosh. As a matter of fact I sent those number plates by express instead of mail to save money to the state. We get an average of from one to two cents cheaper rate by express on those plates than by mail. Taken all in all, counting the whole number of plates sent out it will be found by the actual charges made by the express companies that the sum total will be less than if the plates had been sent by mail. As to sending those single plates by freight, this is worse than bosh, that it absolutely silly."

War On Fake Scales.

The eleven inspectors of the state food and dairy department will be equipped next week with scale and measure testers, so that they can begin the work of inspecting all scales and measures in the state. Each inspector will carry a small sample case, which will contain the testers. They will visit every dealer in the state, as they make their rounds looking after food and milk. The office of state sealers of weights and measures cannot be moved to Des Moines from Iowa City until after the next legislature convenes and amends the law. Commissioner Barney of the food and dairy department has been trying to get the office moved to Des Moines to facilitate the work of his department, but he finds that a section of the code stands in the way.

Plan to Improve the River.

Plans for co-operation are being made by the Des Moines River Power company and the United States government, according to A. C. Miller, who has just returned from Detroit, where he attended a conference of representatives of both. Plans of the government call for twenty-three locks and dams between Keokuk and Des Moines and the power company plans to build dams along the same stretch. It is thought that the company will be allowed to build its power plants and improvements in case it is found that the interests of the people can be protected and the water power at the same time put to use by the company. Plans for company improvements will, of course, need to be approved by the government."

Strike of Button Workers.

Reports of a threatening situation among the button workers in Muscatine has occasioned a sudden trip to the river town this week by State Labor Commissioner E. W. Van Duyn.

Advices from the seat of trouble are meager. But little information on the subject was given out in the office of the state labor commissioner.

All that is known at this end is that the McKee & Bleven factory has discharged a number of employes. This action has stirred the ire of members of the button workers' union, it is stated, with the result that a general strike is being talked of unless the discharged employes are reinstated.

Mine Conditions Will Be Probed.

Secretary Sumner charges that the sanitary conditions in the mines of Iowa are the worst possible. This week he will make formal demand on the mine owners of the state to change this condition or stand prosecution. He charges that in many mines the men are compelled to work under the worst possible sanitary conditions. He declares that this condition must end, and end at once. In company with State Mine Inspector Sweney, Secretary Sumner will visit every one of the mines of Iowa, and after a personal investigation of the sanitary conditions, he will promulgate a set of sanitary rules for use in the mines of the state.

Marke Named as Clerk.

Edward Marke, of Des Moines, was appointed clerk of the new state anti-toxin department by Secretary Sumner, of the state board of health. This department was created by the last legislature.

A WALKING SKELETON.

Worn Out and Prostrated with Terrible Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Margaret Cook, North Market St., Logan, Ohio, says: "It is almost impossible to describe my sufferings. My back ached constantly and so awful was the bearing-down pain that I could scarcely drag myself about. Kidney secretions were in terrible condition and pains through my head were so intense I could scarcely refrain from screaming. I could not sleep, was nervous and lost flesh so rapidly I looked like a walking skeleton. I doctored all the time but had begun to think there was no help for me. Then I began taking Doan's Kidney pills and was entirely cured. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me a new lease of life."

The Wreck.

Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow, the eastern golf champion, was talking at the Cape May Golf club about the benefits of sea air. "To look at the cottagers and natives of Cape May," she said, "speaks of these benefits more eloquently than I would do. How pale and wan seem city people beside these brown, supple, vigorous men and women! An excursionist from the city said to a fisherman on the beach the other morning:

"'Do you have many wrecks here?'

"The fisherman looked contemptuously at the city man, who was in bathing dress. He looked contemptuously at his hollow chest and white, thin legs and arms, and then he replied: 'You're the fust I've saw this season.'"

TO KEEP THE SKIN CLEAR

For more than a generation, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have done more for pimples, blackheads and other unsightly conditions of the complexion, red, rough, chapped hands, dandruff, itching, scaly scalps, and dry, thin and falling hair than any other method. They do even more for skin-tortured and disfigured infants and children. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-page book on the care of the skin and hair will be sent post-free, on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 22 L, Boston.

Reason Enough.

"What's the trouble, old man?" asked the sympathetic friend.

"Well," answered the judge, "you see, my wife and I have never been able to get along very well. The relationship has become so unbearable that we both want a divorce."

"I see," answered the friend. "Then why don't you get one?"

"Because," answered the judge, sadly, "I have sent all the bogus divorce lawyers to the penitentiary."

Plenty of Stability.

Jugs for Flowers.

The girl who likes a few growing things around her, no matter how simple they are, should not bother about procuring handsome vases. She should take up the new fancy for using old English beer jugs. They are made in America as well as in England, and have all sorts of picture son them, from Westminster Abbey, in London, to the Independence hall, in Philadelphia.

The jugs are low and broad and have wonderful coloring. They come in purple, in green and in brown, and sell for reasonable prices.

Problem of the Glacier.

The curves of variation of glaciers which are collected in the Alpine museum in Berne show, according to Professor Brueckner, that the 26 great glaciers of Switzerland which were very extensve at the beginning of the nineteenth century thereafter receded, at first slowly and then more rapidly, until the close of the century. The course of recession was interrupted about the middle of the century by a brief advance, in which only two glaciers exceeded the limits that bounded them at the commencement of the century. The glaciers showed a second slight advance between 1890 and 1895.

Although the curves of the various glaciers are similar in general, each exhibits well marked peculiarities, which make it difficult to trace any connection between climatic changes and fluctuations in glaciation. The problem of the glaciers is still involved in obscurity, and much patient research will be required to effect its solution.—Scientific American.

Roast Beef Marseillaise Is a New Way to Serve the Roast—Perfection of a la Mode—Sweetbread Cutlets.

Roast Beef Marseillaise.—Have the ribs of a two rib roast removed and roast dressed up to retain the juices. Many persons prefer the bones left on, and while it is harder to cut this way, it makes a juicier bite. Put half a cup of olive oil into a pan and heat it. Then add the meat, well salted and peppered, cooking either rare or well done as preferred. The French way is well done.

Make a sauce as follows: Mince three onions and color in oil, simmering until tender. When slightly brown add two tablespoons of vinegar, a teaspoon of mustard, salt and pepper and a half pint of well flavored stock of bouillon. Boil for three minutes and pour over the roast, serving in a deep platter.

Beef a la Mode.—Have a juicy piece of top sirloin cut for this purpose and have it larded with salt pork. Brown in an iron pot, using butter and bacon mixed. When the meat is brown add a soup bouquet, two cloves of garlic and a large onion, whole; adding also a calf's foot, split in several pieces. This makes the gravy gelatinous. Add enough water to cover, then set on the back of the stove, simmering at the boiling point, but do not allow to bubble, as that extracts all the juice and makes the meat dry and unpalatable. It should be soft and full of juice. About half an hour before it is done add some small carrots. Some persons add potatoes, but beef a la mode, according to the French style, has no potatoes, these being cooked on the side. It is just as good cold, sliced with the gravey jellied, served on the platter. The gravy should be strained, eliminating the onions and any spices that may be floating loose.

Sweetbread Cutlets.—Wash, parboil, and simmer for 20 minutes one pair of sweetbreads, adding a slice of onion, one of lemon and a bay leaf, with a teaspoon of salt. Drain well and when cool remove the skin and membrane and cut in large slices. Make a sauce with four tablespoons of butter, six tablespoons of flour and one cup of milk, season well with salt, pepper and lemon juice. Cool this also and then put two slices of meat together with sauce, coating it well. Bread and fry like croquettes and serve with green peas or a creole sauce.

Creole Sauce.—Cut in pieces one small onion and two or three green peppers (after removing seeds), and fry slowly in butter. When tender add several tomatoes (also cut in pieces) and cook ten minutes longer. Season well and serve very hot.

Old Colonial Mint Cup.

Steep one bunch of mint in sufficient hot water to extract the flavor; remove from the fire and add the juice of six oranges and two lemons. Dissolve over hot water one-half ounce of pulverized gum arabic, which has soaked in one-half cupful of cold water for twenty minutes; add one cupful of sugar and cook until it spins a thread.

Pour this boiling hot upon the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, beating until cold and smooth. Stir in the strained fruit and mint juices and dilute to the required strength with carbonated water. Garnish each portion with lemon peel and sprigs of mint.

Parker House Corn Cake.

Mix one cup flour, one cup Indian meal, one and one-half teaspoons cream of tartar, one teaspoon soda and a little salt together. Then mix one egg and one cup warm milk together, then pour in dry mixture. Beat well and bake.

Lemon Ginger Made at Home.

Pour over six lemons, sliced thin, two gallons of cold water. Add a pound and a half of sugar and a scant ounce of ginger root. Let come to a boil, then add a tablespoonful of cream of tartar. Strain, set in a cold place and when nearly cool add a yeast cake dissolved in a little lukewarm water. Stir thoroughly, set in a cool place over night and in the morning bottle well, cork air-tight and lay the bottles on their sides in a cool place. Do not use until they have been laid away at least two days.

Citron Cake.

Two eggs, one-half cup butter, one and one-half cups sugar, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cream of tartar, one teaspoon lemon extract and thinly sliced citron to taste. Flour to make as thick as cup cake.

Lettuce Garnish.

Roll five or six lettuce leaves lengthwise tightly, then crosswise once, and cut into narrow strips with a sharp knife, and you have long, narrow fibers that make a most novel and pretty garnish.

REASONS FOR USING HOPS IN BEVERAGES

Taste and Aroma as Well as Preservative Quality Are Desired.

Some American growers claim that, inasmuch as American hops in many cases are just as rich in the soft resins as the best European hops, their brewing value ought to be equal to that of the Europeans. They have not, however, been able to convince American brewers of the accuracy of this view. They will try to do so at the barley and hop exhibition in Chicago in October, 1911. The principal trouble, however, with American hops as they reach the market is that they are picked carelessly. The only part that is of value to the consumer is the cone, and everything in the shape of stems and leaves that is mixed with the grains not only diminishes the amount of available material, but introduces a decidedly injurious element, the leaves and cones being rich in tannic acid, which imparts a stringent and harsh taste.

In the international barley and hop exhibition, which will be held in Chicago in October, 1911, the item of clean picking will cut an important figure in the valuation of the hops that will be entered for prize competition.

The great importance of this exhibition will lie in the fact that it will tend to put the valuation of hops upon a substantial basis of facts rather than of individual preferences.

All exhibits at this exposition will be in the names of growers, no dealers being admitted to the competitive exhibition. The exhibition is in charge of the committee on awards, 1508 Republic building, Chicago.

RELATIVE MERIT OF BREWING BARLEYS.

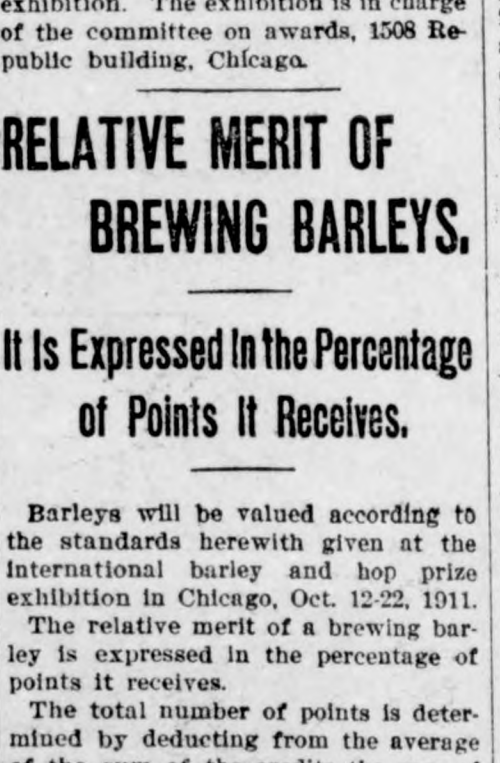
It Is Expressed In the Percentage of Points It Receives.

Barleys will be valued according to the standards herewith given at the international barley and hop prize exhibition in Chicago, Oct. 12-22, 1911.

The relative merit of a brewing barley is expressed in the percentage of points it receives.

The total number of points is determined by deducting from the average of the sum of the credits the sum of the penalties corrected for percentage.

The barleys will be valued on the basis of maturity, viability (germinating ability), berry weight, uniformity, albumen (or nitrogen) content. These five divisions standing as credits, while penalties are provided for excessive amount of moisture, for trimmings (screenings, etc.), for inseparable admixtures, damage indicated by off color, off odor or by general impression and irregularity of growth.



HEAD OF CHEVALIER BARLEY.

Barley is disqualified if in any credit division it receives below eighty point and contains more than 20 per cent of screenings or more than 5 per cent of inseparable admixtures; more than 15 per cent of moisture; if color, odor or general impression indicates heavy damage.

Four and six rowed barley should contain approximately for each middle or straight furrowed kernel two lateral or twisted kernels.

The viability (germinating ability) will be determined after proper artificial drying of the specimen.

Man a Back Number.

It is the year 2000. The famous and successful lady orator is addressing a large and enthusiastic audience. At the end of her speech she says:

"I believe that this is the time for me to publicly acknowledge by indebtness to one who has been my companion, my counsellor, and my guide, who has upheld my weary hands when the task seemed too great for my strength, who has cheered me with loving words when I returned worn and weary from my arduous duties in club and on platform, who has by thoughtful, constant ministrations given the blessed knowledge that always there is for me a haven of refuge and rest, a harbor of comfort and cheer—my home. All that I am, and all that I have, I owe to that inestimable man, my husband."

At the back of the hall sat a little pale-faced man, whose face, as those gracious words fell on his ears, brightened wonderfully. This was her husband. All his patience and self-sacrifice were rewarded at last.

Perfumes as Antiseptics.

New York dandies who perfume themselves are laughed at, and yet a scientist, writing in the Scotsman, says all sweet odors are conducive to health and are harmless. He asserts positive antiseptic properties are possessed by the oils of lavender, eucalyptus, clove, rosemary and other plants; moreover, they possess the power to destroy bacteria. And does not the doctor recommend the air of a sun-lit pine wood? It has been said by a famous writer that whenever the sun shines on the fragrant herbs they express their gratefulness in health-giving ozone. Lavender water, eau de cologne and attar of roses drive off headaches and invigorate the jaded mind. Even to robust persons in steady health, says Sir William Temple the effect of certain sweet odors is to stimulate the mental faculties and give positive pleasure to their exercise. They counteract or combat mental disease, have a beneficial influence on temperament.

He Is Getting the Rescue Habit.

Elsie Radford, the young man who rescued a small boy skater who had fallen through the ice in a deep pond, has again appeared in the role of rescuer. Thirteen-year-old Margaret Weston was dared to cross the thin ice to a little island that poked its head up through the ice about one hundred feet from shore. Margaret wouldn't take a dare, and in a few minutes she had crawled stealthily over to the island, and then started back. Almost at the first step the ice began to crackle under her, she lost her courage and retreated to the island, where she sat down to wait.

Radford saw her predicament, and, putting on a pair of hip boots, went to the rescue. He waded in and made his way through the broken ice and water to the island; hoisting the maid to his shoulder, he waded back again, waist deep, and carried her to dry land.—Philadelphia Times.

Justice and Judges.

A New York judge, it will be remembered, recently declared unconstitutional the new law that an automobilist, having run over a pedestrian, must stop and leave his name. The judge said that the automobilist had a perfect right to run away and leave his mangled victim to bleed to death alone for the reason that, in criminal cases, no man is obliged to bear witness against himself.

James Halden Wilkes, president of the Street Defense society of Atlanta, discussed this legal decision at the society's last meeting.

"And that," he cried, hotly, "is called justice. Well, indeed, it was a search after justice once defined as a blind man looking into a dark room for a black hat that isn't there."

Dramatic Criticism.

Kin Hubbard, the Indiana humorist, once was assigned to cover a performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Hubbard had his brain-child, old "Abe Martin," report the play. This was the critique: "'Uncle Tom's Cabin' played down t' Melodeon hall las' night. Th' dogs was good, but they had poor support."—Everybody's Magazine.

GRADING NEW ROAD

Work in Progress On Oskaloosa and Waterloo Interurban

LARGE FORCE NOW AT WORK

Estimates Fix the Cost of New Line At More Than $6,000,000—Will Be Over One Hundred Miles Long.

Waterloo.—J. F. Sloan of Circleville, O., who is superintendent of construction of the proposed interurban railway connecting Oskaloosa and Waterloo, is in the city with a large force of men, and will begin grading this week at a point about six miles south of this city. A force of 50 teams and 150 men will be employed at the start, and inside of two months it is claimed that the workers will number 500 teams and 700 men. There will be a large number of camps along the line, and grading will go forward simultaneously over a space of 100 miles.

Sixteen car loads of material and machinery will be unloaded this week. Coon & Co., of Omaha, have the contract for grading, and Mr. Sloan will direct the active field forces. A corps of engineers has been working on the surveys for several months, and $12,000 have been spent in that department alone. It is estimated that the new line will cost more than $6,000,000. It will traverse a section of country not now provided with transportation facilities, and much of the way the roadbed will be prepared easily, with few steep grades or expensive bridges. It is said that more than 2,000,000 cubic yards of earth will have to be moved by the graders.

Not a bit. Not a bit," Harry reas- ed him. The General waved his cordially as he strode down to street. Mrs. Blazes watched him ppear in the dusk, nodding her significantly.

Wild oats, eh?" she said. "Flirta- s, eh? Wait until I get home!"

She leaned out of the window and ed to Harry. He glanced up at and smiled wearily.

How in the world am I to get out ere?" she asked, petulantly.

I think I'll have that run as a puz- in the Sunday papers," Harry an- ed, grimly. "I'll say this, though: en you do get out you needn't be punctilious about making your y call."

She closed her window, and he resumed his meditations.

"Sometimes," he muttered, "it's against a fellow to be innocent. I could have straightened this out in two minutes if I had been guilty."

The front door opened, and Lucy appeared. She glanced down at Harry and smiled.

"May I come out with thee awhile?" she asked. "It is so peaceful out here—everything seemeth so calm."

"This is the headquarters for peace and calm," Harry observed, pleasantly, rising. Lucy came down the steps and sat on the lawn seat while Harry leaned over the table beside her, looking down at her.

"Well," Lucy asked, "what can thee say?"

"I can't say anything yet," he answered. "I can only ask you to trust me until I can explain everything."

"But surely thee can explain everything now."

"No. Not yet. I don't understand it myself yet."

Lucy's face changed, and Harry went on:

"Later, I'll tell you everything. I can't now, Lucy, because some one else is involved."

"I saw her," Lucy said, coldly.

"I don't mean that way, Lucy," he protested. "What you saw may have a peculiar look—"

"Indeed, she had!" Lucy asserted.

"But you must remember that often there is an unsuspected skeleton in the closet," Harry continued, manfully.

Lucy pursed her lips scornfully.

"My Boy," the General Said, "I Couldn't Help Coming Back to Assure You That I Am Deeply Sorry."

"Skeleton, indeed!" she said. "That skeleton weigheth at least a hundred and thirty pounds!"

Harry laughed nervously, and pleaded:

"Now, listen, Lucy. Won't you take my word that everything is all right, so far as I am concerned?"

"I might take thy word, but thee cannot explain so easily to Cousin Socrates nor to father."

"Cousin Socrates has been in the attic writing sonnets about you all evening, and I have talked with your father, bless his good old heart! He believes in me, and he is willing to trust me."

"So do I believe in thee, Harry—but thee cannot know how sorry I am that this has happened. I regret it."

With an earnest effort to turn her mind to a lighter view of things, Harry asked:

"So you regret it?"

"I do—very, very much."

"Then, if you regret it very, very much, I'll forgive you this time," he laughed, seating himself and taking her hand.

She took her hand away quickly and jumped to her feet in indignation.

"How can thee jest at such a moment?" she cried.

He rose and followed her.

"I shouldn't have jested," he said, humbly. "Lucy, you are not a city girl—and I'm glad of it—but you are apt to judge things too much on appearances."

Lucy turned and looked at him with a pathetic seriousness in her eyes.

"Until this morning, Harry," she said, "I wanted to be a city girl. I thought the little town where I have lived was a pitiful place."

"But it had you in it," Harry reminded her, gently.

"I am beginning to understand," Lucy said, "that here appearances are everything—but there isn't any everything. In the country, there is everything—and that takes the deceit from the appearances."

"Why, you're a genuine little philosopher," Harry said.

"We have the blue sky in the daytime back there," Lucy continued, "and here thee have clouds and smoke. There we have the stars at night, here thee have electric signs. There we get up at sunrise and the little birds sing us a welcome from the trees, but here—"

"Here the folks stay up until sunrise and eat the little birds before that," Harry finished for her. "You don't want a city home, then, Lucy?"

"I want a home where the heart does not have to be hidden," she told him.

"And so do I. I want a real home, with the best little girl in the world as my wife."

There was no mistaking his meaning. Lucy looked at him for half a minute, then said:

"When thee have explained, Harry."

CHAPTER XI.

Fifteen minutes later Count von Fitz cautiously crept beneath the window and whistled. Mrs. Blazes did not answer. He wistled louder. Still no answer.

"If you are gone, I'm glad," he said. "Cheer me by not replying."

But no such cheer was in store for him. Mrs. Blazes noiselessly opened the window and whispered:

"Sh! Be careful! Did you get my hat?"

"Not yet," the Count told her. "Dey haff to make him. I vouldn't trust dot Daffie voman. I vent to anudder hat place. Der name is T'erese."

"But they won't know the model," Mrs. Blazes feared.

"I eggsplain him perfectly. I tell her a shape like a smashed balloon, yellow on der outside mit a garden of red puppies."

"Red poppies, you silly man!"

"Puppies or poppies—dey look chust as bad to me from now on."

"You'd best go right back and stay there until it is finished," Mrs. Blazes suggested.

"No. I told dem to sent it here, so I make sure I get it."

"That's good," she said, with a tone of relief.

"Now you come right oud und ven der hat comes I giff it to you, und avay you go."

"Come out?" she asked sarcastically. "Am I an aeroplane?"

"Lissen. Make a rope yet, und I pull you oud."

"An idea!" she exclaimed with delight. "I'll tear up the sheets and things in here, tie them together in a rope, and let myself down."

"Splendid! I go und vatch for der messencher mit der hat."

The Count strolled away, while she closed her window.

A young couple came walking slowly through the flower garden. It was

"Well," Lucy Asked, "What Can They Say?"

Pigeon and Carolyn. The twilight spell had been cast upon them. Arm in arm, silently they strolled until they neared the bench.

Suddenly Pigeon said:

"Let's sit down here. I've got to see Harry through his racket, you know"—evidently continuing a conversation which had lapsed some moments before—"but after that—"

He looked down into Carolyn's eyes.

"After that?" she asked, softly.

For Carolyn had all a woman's intuition, in spite of her young years, and she diagnosed the symptoms of an approaching proposal. She did not intend to accept him, but no woman will allow a proposal to get away from her. Proposals to a woman are as the scalps the Indian brave ties to his war belt.

"After that," said Pigeon, beginning to sit down, "I can look after my own affairs. And I—"

An ominous, ripping sound came. Mrs. Blazes was beginning to make her rope, but the young couple, of course, knew nothing of that. Pigeon straightened up with a jerk and tried to look unconscious. He did not know what had given away. Carolyn tried to smooth over his embarrassment by saying:

QUEER FACT OF ELECTRICITY

Varying Fatality of Shocks Depends on Many Factors Other Than the Voltage.

Workers in electrical establishments who are familiar with the undoubted fact that men have withstood tremendous electrical shock without damage, while others have been killed by the same or even less voltage, will be interested in a paper published by the British Medical association. This paper, in considering the curious fact that an electric shock of 100 volts is sometimes fatal, while currents of 1,000 volts do not always kill, points out that the effects depend upon many factors. The volume, or amperage, of the current as well as its tension may count The character of the current —whether it is direct or alternating—may play some part and the duration of the shock and the point of application may signify much. Then, too, the resistance of the skin is not always the same. One individual may differ greatly from another in susceptibility, and even the condition of the mind is found to have an influence, as a person prepared to receive a shock is less liable to be affected than one receiving it unexpectedly.

QUEER DISEASE IS IN UNITED STATES

Many Here Afflicted With Odd Ailment, Says Prof. Munyon.

GREWSOME CREATURES VERY COMMON, FINDS EXPERT.

Many people in the United States are afflicted with a queer disease, according to a statement yesterday by Professor James M. Munyon. He made the following remarkable and rather grewsome statement:

"Many persons who come and write to my headquarters at 53d and Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia, Pa., think they are suffering from a simple stomach trouble, when in reality they are the victims of an entirely different disease—that of tape worm. These tape worms are huge internal parasites, which locate in the upper bowel and consume a large percentage of the nutriment in undigested food. They sometimes grow to a length of forty to sixty feet. One may have a tape worm for years and never know the cause of his or her ill health.

"Persons who are suffering from one of these creatures become nervous, weak and irritable, and tire at the least exertion. The tape worms rob one of ambition and vitality and strength, but they are rarely fatal.

"The victim of this disease is apt to believe that he is suffering from chronic stomach trouble, and doctors for years without relief. This is not the fault of the physicians he consults, for there is no absolute diagnosis that will tell positively that one is not a victim of tape worm.

"The most common symptom of this trouble is an abnormal appetite. At times the person is ravenously hungry and cannot get enough to eat. At other times the very sight of food is loathsome. There is a gnawing, faint sensation at the pit of the stomach, and the victim has headaches, fits of dizziness and nausea. He cannot sleep at night and often thinks he is suffering from nervous prostration.

"I have a treatment which has had wonderful success in eliminating these great creatures from the system. In the course of its regular action in aiding digestion, and ridding the blood, kidneys and liver of impurities it has proven fatal to these great worms. If one has a tape worm, this treatment will, in nine cases out of ten, stupefy and pass it away, but if not, the treatment will rebuild the run-down person, who is probably suffering from stomach trouble and a general anaemic condition. My doctors report marvelous success here with this treatment. Fully a dozen persons have passed these worms, but they are naturally reticent about discussing them, and of course we cannot violate their confidence by giving their names to the public."

Letters addressed to Professor James M. Munyon, 53d and Jefferson Streets, Philadelpha, Pa., will receive as careful attention as though the patient called in person. Medical advice and consultation absolutely free. Not a penny to pay.

VENTURA MAN IS MISSING

Ventura, Aug. 16 –Theodore Halverson has disappeared and no one knows where he went. He has been living on the Geist farm because there was no house available in Ventura and the last seen of him was on Thursday evening when he left Ventura, presumably to go home. He came here from Minnesota last winter and rented the blacksmith shop and tools of J. K. Overgaard and since his disappearance the fact comes to light that under pretense of owning the blacksmithing tools, he sold a half interest in them, amounting to $100, to Gus Reinhardt. Before leaving he sold his pigs, chickens and everything else saleable, taking the money with him, and all his family has is $8, which his wife happened to have in her possession. Selling property belonging to another is a criminal offense and it is liable to go hard with Mr. Halverson when found.—Mason City Herald.

Seemed to Give Him a New Stomach

"I suffered intensely after eating and no medicine or treatment I tried seemed to do any good," writes H. M. Youngpeters, editor of the Sun, Lake View, Ohio. "The first few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets gave me surprising relief and the second bottle seemed to give me a new stomach and perfectly good health." For sale by all dealers.

Harrigan Given Proposed Pact Which Carmen Favor

EXPECT COMPANY'S ANSWER

Company's General Manager States He Again Will Confer With Men — Arbitration Clause Changed in New Draft.

Des Moines.—Officials of the street car men's union have submitted the proposed new contract to General Manager J. R. Harrigan as a basis for negotiations which may commence next Monday. The principal changes made by the union in the existing contract have to do with the investigating of cases wherein employes are discharged, and with arbitration.

Mr. Harrigan had made public no statement as to the course he will pursue, but the union committee say that he has agreed to meet them Monday or perhaps before with full authority to act.

It is held by the union men that under the proposed contract no serious trouble will arise again, such as grew out of the Hiatt case. They say that by the terms of the new contract there can never be another "Hiatt case."

The oldest section with reference to arbitration provides that "if any question arises between its employes who are members of the amalgamated association and the officers of the company, as to the performance of the terms and conditions of this contract," and the question cannot be settled by the grievance committee and the company officers "then such question in regard to the performance of the terms and conditions of this agreement shall be submitted to arbitration."

The new section provides "that if any question arises which cannot be adjusted by the company officers and the association officers, that the question shall be arbitrated by submitting the same to a board of arbitration."

The phrase "performance of the terms and conditions of this contract" is omitted in the new agreement, the phrase being in contention in the present controversy.

In the case of an employe who feels himself aggrieved at the action of the company, such as a discharge, the old section provides for a "full and complete investigation by the general manager and superintendent, or either of them, and if found not at fault, he shall be reinstated and paid for all time lost."

The new section provides that "if the suspension is sustained by the general manager and superintendent, or either of them, and the employe feels himself aggrieved by the action of the officer or officers, he may take the matter up with the association for adjustment, as provided herein."

Will Offer $500 For Smitch's Arrest.

A reward of $500 will probably be offered by Governor Carroll for the arrest of Charles B. Smitch and his confederate in the shooting of Guardsman Hamaker at Anamosa reformatory and the jail delivery there. The state board of control will make formal request to Governor Carroll to offer that reward.

Reports from Warden Barr to the board of control are that Guardsman Hamaker will live. The bullet passed through his liver and lodged in his back. It has not been removed. Attending physicians say that Hamaker's grit and cheerfulness will be a large factor in bringing him through.

Work On Pardon Cases.

Recommendations in the cases of life prisoners in the state prisons will probably be made to the governor the last of this week. The parole board has just completed a trip to both Anamosa and Fort Madison, where hearings were conducted, and during the past two days, additional hearings were granted in the offices of the board at the state house. A report is expected in the case of the Rainsberger boys, up for a murder alleged to have been committed in Hardin county. Senator Berry, of the board, stated that the case of "Bill" Richards, former United States marshal has not been considered.

Ten Thousand Dollars Asked.

Judgment of $10,000 is asked of the Northwestern railroad in a petition filed in the district court by Archie Madison, of Ankeny. Madison claims that while a passenger on one of the company's trains he was assaulted by a man named Brewer and that as the result of the encounter he lost an eye. Brewer was intoxicated and swearing, he declares. Madison asserts the company is at fault in permitting Brewer to board the train while intoxicated and in that the conductor of the train did not come to his rescue when he was assaulted.

PLAN SUNDAY SCHOOL MEETS

Iowa Sunday School Association to Start Active Campaign During The Fall Months.

Des Moines.—F. F. Fitch of Des Moines, secretary of the Iowa Sunday School association, has arranged a series of county Sunday school conventions to be held in the state during the fall months. Mr. Fitch expects to be present at each of these county conventions.

The dates and places of these conventions announced by Mr. Fitch are: Orient, Sept. 28-29; Corning, Oct. 24-25; Shelisburg, Sept. 12-13; Madrid, Aug. 17-18; Fostoria, Sept. 9-10; Girard, Oct. 4-5; Minburn, Oct. 11-12; Burlington, Oct. 19-20; Lake Park, Oct. 28-29; Sidney, Sept. 26-27; Stanhope, Oct. 9-10; New London, Oct. 18-19; Fenton, Aug. 31-Sept. 1; Muscatine, Oct. 20-21; College Springs, Sept. 28-29; Emmetsburg, Sept. 7-8; Laurens, Aug. 21-22; Moville, Sept. 2-3.

Canadian Pacific In Iowa.

The Canadian Pacific railroad may enter Iowa and Des Moines since the recent election of Newman Erb to the presidency of the Hawley lines which include the Minneapolis & St. Louis and the Iowa Central railway companies. Mr. Erb, who recently acquired a large interest in both companies is said to have proposed joining with other major interests in the development of both properties. An eminent official of one of the Iowa lines states that Mr. Erb's election is a sure precursor that the Canadian Pacific would soon incorporate the so-called Hawley lines with the Soo St. Marie.

Announcement was also made by the same official that the Minneapolis & St. Louis road would be extended from its western terminus on the Missouri river, Le Beau, S. D., to a connection with the Canadian Pacific at Medicine Hat or McLeod. This will eventually open an entrance from the Pacific to Minnesota, Missouri and Iowa.

The Canadian Pacific Railroad company has had engineers in the territory southwest of Des Moines for some time, in view of constructing a line from here to Kansas City. The proposed road will probably pass through Winterset, Greenfield, Creston, Clarinda, St. Joseph and terminate at Kansas City. Such a line would connect in Des Moines with the Minneapolis & St. Louis road and afford for the Canadian Pacific a line no longer than the Rock Island's southern extension.

Discusses Railroad Valuation.

"I hope some day to see Iowa make an intelligent valuation of its railroads," said Clifford Thorne, state railroad commissioner, in discussing the subject which lies closest to his heart. "It will help the commission in its discussion of the advisability of raising or reducing railroad rates and it will be instructive to the state executive council in making assessments. It will help the railroad commission in cases which it has pending before the federal courts, wherein the railroads have specifically attacked the adequacy of their returns from their Iowa business. If we had an intelligent method of railroad valuation, it would be easy to ascertain whether their contention, that they are not getting fair returns on their Iowa investments, is correct or not. Our sister states have adopted the physical valuation idea and I believe that it is bound to come in Iowa sooner or later."

Farmers Aroused Over Raise.

Members of the state executive council are beginning to wonder how much longer they must endure the complaints of the farmers of this state over the recent action of the council in raising the taxable value of farm lands. In some counties the values were increased over 22 per cent and the farmers are kicking with a vengeance. Several of them have visited the state house during the past few days and have demanded an explanation of the action of the council. It is even intimated that the county officers in many of the counties of the state will not take the increase seriously and will only require taxes on the values made by the county assessors.

Faircloth Held As Bootlegger.

Bartholomew Faircloth, of Kellogg was arrested by George Bidwell, deputy United States marshal, on a charge of bootlegging. Faircloth was given a hearing before Commissioner W. C. McArthur. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and was released on bonds of $500 pending action of the federal grand jury.

Wall is Delegate.

Joseph Wall, tax clerk in the office of State Auditor Bleakly, will represent the state of Iowa at the national tax conference to be held the last of the month at Richmond, Va. He leaves the latter part of next week and will visit Washington and New York City before he returns.

Advice.

"Now that you've heard my daughter sing, what would you advise me to do?"

"Well," the music master replied, "I hardly know. Don't you suppose you could get her interested in settlement work or horseback riding or something like that?"

LAWYER CURED OF ECZEMA

"While attending school at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1882, I became afflicted with boils, which lasted for about two years, when the affliction assumed the form of an eczema on my face, the lower part of my face being inflamed most of the time. There would be water-blisters rise up and open, and wherever the water would touch it would burn, and cause another one to rise. After the blister would open, the place would scab over, and would burn and itch so as to be almost unbearable at times. In this way the sores would spread from one place to another, back and forth over the whole of my upper lip and chin, and at times the whole lower part of my face would be a solid sore. This condition continued for four or five years, without getting any better, and in fact got worse all the time, so much so that my wife became alarmed lest it prove fatal.

"During all this time of boils and eczema, I doctored with the best physicians of this part of the country, but to no avail. Finally I decided to try Cuticura Remedies, which I did, taking the Cuticura Resolvent, applying the Cuticura Ointment to the sores, and using the Cuticura Soap for washing. In a very short time I began to notice improvement, and continued to use the Cuticura Remedies until I was well again, and have not had a recurrence of the trouble since, which is over twenty years. I have recommended Cuticura Remedies to others ever since, and have great faith in them as remedies for skin diseases." (Signed) A. C. Brandon, Attorney-at-Law, Greenville, O., Jan. 17, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 3 K, Boston.

JUST WHEN TO PICK PEARS

Should Always Be Done Before Fully Ripe, Without Bruising and With Stems On—Also Graded.

Pears should always be picked carefully before fully ripe, without bruising, with the stems on. They should be laid carefully in the picking-baskets, which should hold half a bushel or so, and then be hauled to the packing-house or other convenient place and at once sorted into grades, and either packed or shipped or placed in the ripening house for future shipment. It is usually better, in most cases, especially with summer fruit, to pick the trees over two or three times, although this is not absolutely necessary, and unless the trees are overloaded may not be worth while. When the fruit has not been properly thinned and the trees are overloaded many growers begin to pick the fruit long before it is full grown and send it to market. By this means the trees are not only relieved somewhat, but the fruit that is left swells to the largest possible bulk; moreover, satisfactory returns are often secured from the early pickings. This method is particularly successful with Clapp's Favorite and Bartlett. Both of these varieties will ripen up tolerably well when they are not much more than half grown. The same principle is successfully used in handling LeConte and Kieffer pears, but these should be nearer maturity to be good.

COMBINATION RAKE AND HOE

Implement Will Be Found Very Handy in Cutting Channels in Which to Set Small Plants.

The implement shown in the illustration is a garden weeder combining a rake with a triangularly shaped hoe. The parts of the head of the rake can be separated for the insertion of new teeth when the old are bent or broken, Rake and Hoe Weeder.

the teeth consisting of twenty-penny steel nails. The triangular hoe is used for cutting channels in which to sow seed or set small plants.

Scalding Peach Borers.

A reader who wants information concerning the possibilites of hot water in fighting the peach tree borers will be interested in the following:

"The hot water cure is recommended by many for peach tree borers. It is a somewhat drastic treatment for the borer, though it does not hurt the tree. The borers work either at or directly beneath the surface of the ground, around the trunk. The tree may be hilled up in the form of a saucer, the dirt packed a little and the scalding water poured in. This will invariably bring out any borers. It is not believed to hurt the tree, although an excess of water should not be used. An emulsion of 1 part of naptholeum to 150 parts of water is also recommended."

Just Study Principles.

Everyone who attempts to decorate the home grounds should study the principles of plant arrangement with reference to harmony and general beauty, then plan and plant for himself.

The soil for strawberries should be a deep, rich loam, capable of holding much moisture.

Girdling or ringing consists in removing a ring of bark from the trunk or larger limbs.

Whenever a large limb is sawed from the tree the wound should be at once covered with wax or thick paint.

Horticulturists have for many years practiced various methods to induce fruitfulness and with some degree of success.

The longer apples remain on the tree, unless the weather becomes too cold to permit their exposure, the better the flavor and the keeping qualities.

FALSE BOTTOMS FOR RANGES

Economizes Summer Coal Consumption in Simple and Effective Manner.

Here is an invention which will appeal to housewives from two important standpoints, viz., economy of coal and reduced temperature for summer cooking. The woman who thought out this idea could not see why she should load her kitchen range up with coal every time she wished to prepare a meal, and then have half of the coal left to burn out as waste and heat the house to an uncomfortable degree. Since, however, the live coals must be kept in proximity to the griddles, a thin fire in the deep firebox would not accomplish the purpose. Therefore she developed the false botton shown in our illustration. As will be seen, this device is placed inside the empty fire box, having four side frames which rest on the regular grate, and the auxiliary grate is suspended several inches below the under side of the stove top. As the bottom is perforated, a sufficient draft is provided, and also ease of access to the fire with the poker for raking out the dead ashes from the bottom. While the fire is necessarily thin and light, it provides plenty of heat for cooking a meal, and soon burns itself out after accomplishing its purpose. Of course, the device is not confined to coal for fuel, but will operate equally as well with wood, charcoal or coke.

"Keeping Things Up."

In every estimate of housekeeping expenses there should be a generous margin for the keeping of things up. The wear and tear of usage, and, more strange and perplexing still, the wear and tear of non-usage, tell sadly upon our houses and their furnishings. Carpets which are constantly trodden grow thin in spots, are faded by the sun, and become threadbare; carpets in closed rooms are devoured by the moths; curtains fade; family linen gradually falls into decay. Everything must be replenished, kept up, gone over again and again, if the domestic machinery is not to creak and rust.

The wise housekeeper buys every season a few new articles, and, so to speak, has always her reserve stock on which to draw.

So, too, in other matters. The judicious housewife keeps everything up to the mark.

Egg Rolls.

Beat two eggs into one cup of milk, add one tablespoon of melted butter, one cup of flour, one teaspoon of baking powder; mix well, then add enough flour to make the dough stiff enough to roll. Cut into small rounds and bake in a hot oven.

Indian Cake.

One egg, one cup of milk or water, one cup of meal, one-half cup of flour, one-half cup of brown sugar, two teaspoons of baking powder and a little salt.

Preparing Mushrooms.

Fry a quarter of a pound of mushroom caps in three tablespoonfuls of hot butter, season with salt, pepper and a grate of nutmeg; add half a cupful of milk, cover and let simmer for eight minutes. Arrange the mushrooms on a round of bread in a mushroom dish, pour the liquid over them, cover with a glass bell, and bake about thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Send to the table without removing the glass, which confines the delicate flavor and the aroma of the mushroom.

Lettuce and Nut Salad.

Shred crisp lettuce leaves and place them in a cup made of a tender leaf of head lettuce. Place on each portion of salad a half-dozen English walnut meats broken in halves and cover with a generous portion of mayonnaise dressing to which whipped cream has been added.

Whips.

One quart of cream, one pint of milk, two lemons—the peel of one grated, vanilla to taste, sugar; whip until stiff and fill glasses.

Lark Now a Pest.

Assemblyman Struckenbruck, the farmer-blacksmith of San Joaquin, Cal., is devoting a great deal of his time to getting votes for his bill to permit the shooting of meadow larks. He says that the birds destroy not only grain, but have lately developed a fondness for melons that is proving disastrous to the cantaloupe crop.

One of the strongest bits of evidence cited by Struckenbruck is that when the agricultural demonstration train of the University of California was sent through the state to teach the farmers how to raise their crops on scientific principles the meadow lark, properly stuffed and mounted, occupied a dishonored place among the exhibits as a "pest."

Observation in the fields has also shown that the bird is too busy picking up the farmers' grain to devote any time to singing. He claims that the lark, whose rippling melody, which was once the harbinger of spring and the inspiration of rhymesters, has now become an ordinary thief.

Editor Times,
Klemme, Iowa,

Dear Sir — Enclosed please find one year's subscription, as we could not get along without the Times. We like our new home, two and one-half miles from the city, very much and we have attended the best Chautauqua in the state which just closed. The city is still booming, many new residences being built, besides the new Y. M. C. A. and five or six very substantial store buildings. Crops here are very good as we suffered here but a very short time on account of drouth, but the first four days of July were scorchers and done some damage to the very early corn. Oats averaged from twenty-five to forty bushels per acre and corn looks very promising, as we have had plenty of rain the last three or four weeks. Shock thrashing has been delayed very much. The last week it rained nearly every day and it will take about ten days threshing to finish the shocks still in the fields, which ought to have been thrashed or stacked two weeks ago, as grain is being damaged very much by the continuous rains.

With kindest regards to all our Klemme friends.

Yours very truly.
WM. SCHAPER.

A BOILING DOWN OF EVENTS

National, Political, Personal and Other Matters In Brief Form for All Classes of Readers.

Washington.

President Taft, in a special message to the house of representatives vetoed the joint resolution providing for the admission of New Mexico and Arizona to statehood.

Representative Norris of Nebraska introduced in the house a joint resolution requesting the president to invite the governors of the various states to send delegates to a congress for the purpose of proposing to the state legislatures a uniform law upon the subject of marriages and divorce.

The house committee on territories appointed a sub-committee of five to confer with the senate territories committee on the New Mexico and Arizona statehood situation, with a view to writing a compromise measuse, which could be adopted by both houses and signed by President Taft.

Every bit of the efficiency of the bureau of chemistry, which has the right to determine the purity or impurity of any food product, was destryed, its work nullified and the public's money squardered when the food and drug inspection board was created. So said Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief chemist of the department of agriculture.

"I'm silly, am I?" Pigeon asked, ...kily.

"I didn't say that," she answered.

"You did!"

"I didn't!"

Pigeon attempted to arise haughtily, ...r-r-r-r-rip!—and he sat down ...in.

"I suppose," he said to her, pettish... ..."you think I can't do anything?"

"And don't you forget, Mister Wil... ..." she snapped, with a heavy ac... ...on the "Mister," "that there are ...nty of other men!"

Then she arose, utterly ignoring a ...rific ripping noise, and strode into ...e house with the cold, heartless ...ead of a princess. But as she went ...r the steps, Pigeon, had he been ...tching, would have seen her clutch... ...g nervously at her skirt, while the ...ping went merrily on.

Pigeon got up with an air of gloom, ... grasped his belt in a tight clutch ... marched off, his steps being timed by staccato rips, which he did not locate as coming from the room wherein was Mrs. Blazes.

And in that room Mrs. Blazes was feverishly tearing and tying strips of sheets, and towels, and table covers, together, all unconscious that in her strenuous efforts to effect her escape she was creating the first bump upon the pathway of a young love—but then love, as Mr. Shakespeare observed long long ago, never did run smooth.

CHAPTER XII.

Mrs. Blazes opened her window silently, and lowered to the ground a rope that was fearfully and wonderfully made. She had used everything and anything, from pillow slips to the cords of the portieres. She had enough rope to let her out of a six-story building, instead of from a window a scant twelve feet from the ground. The end of the rope she tied to a table near the window. Then she looked down anxiously.

"It is dangerous," she sighed.

The Count wandered into view. He was growing weary of waiting for the hat. At sight of the rope he brightened up.

"Jump oud," he suggested.

"Silly!" she said; "I've got to climb down. Steady the rope."

He took hold of the lower end and straightened the rope against the building.

"But how in the world am I to climb down?" she demanded.

"Led yourselluf oud slow, und den slide for life," he told her.

Their argument grew more intense.

"This one they call a Count—this tutor. I thought he was trying to break into the house."

"Wouldn't be surprised if he was," Blazes asserted, vehemently. "Isn't your daughter in there? Isn't Harry's sister in there? These Counts will do anything to capture a girl with money."

"It iss not so!" Count von Fitz sputtered, rubbing his neck.

"It's a gam dood thing I happened along," Blazes observed.

"A what, friend?" Medders inquired curiously.

"A gam dood thing—doesn't count, you know when you cuss backwards."

"Verily," Medders said, "there be times when a man could cuss sidewise."

"Well," Blazes said, turning again to Count von Fitz. "It's a lucky thing for you there was nothing in the report that you were with my wife today. I'm a jealous man. I'm desperate when I'm roused."

"Don't rouse!" the Count begged.

"Once," the General said, "I caught a man flirting with her. What did I do?"

"Vat did you do?" the Count asked, weakly.

"They buried his hat," the General said. "Just his hat! Just—his—hat!"

"Chust his hat!" the Count echoed. Mentally he wondered if it had been a yellow hat with red poppies.

"Thou art a man of wrath, General," Medders said. "Once I grew angry at a man—in my youthful days."

"And what did you do to him, man of peace?" asked the General, laughing, while the Count listened nervously.

"In those days," Medders said, "I was vain of my strength and given to yielding to my angry passions. I went unto this man, and I seized him thus—"

Before the Count could dodge, Medders held him as though in a vise.

"And I said unto him: 'Thou condemned wretch, dost thou not know it is unwise so to conduct thyself in our midst?' And I smote him thus, and I shook him thus"—illustrating upon the helpless Count—"and then I said unto him that if he offended me again I should smite him full sore."

"Please," begged the Count, "please don'd remember anything else!"

"I beg thy pardon," Medders said, contritely. "I did forget myself."

"Come in out of the night air, gentlemen," suggested Harry, who came to the door just then. The trio, smiling over the unconscious way in which Medders had shaken the Count, started in, when a messenger boy arrived.

He carried a large hat box. The Count tried to intercept him, but Harry was as anxious as the Count to get that hat.

She turned it out quick enough," Harry murmured to himself, paying the boy the seventy-five dollars that was called for on delivery. When the boy had left, Harry chanced to look at the address and read:

"Count Herman von Fitz. Why, this hat isn't for me, after all."

"No," the Count said. "I ordered it, but it isn't for me."

Medders turned and said:

"Is there some mistake, Harry?"

Harry looked at the Count, but that gentleman was pretty well satisfied with the situation and made no move to correct matters.

"No, there isn't any mistake," Harry said.

"Did I understand aright," Medders asked, "that thee are paying seventy-five dollars for that hat?"

"I did—without taking chloroform, too," Harry ruefully asknowledged.

"Some hats are worth that much," the Count remarked.

"Sure!" boomed the General. "My wife often spends more than that for a hat."

"Is it for thy sister, Harry?" Medders asked, casually.

"I don't know if it will fit her," Harry answered, non-committally.

"Wouldst thee let us see it?" Medders asked. "Truly, a hat worth that much must be a wonderful thing."

Here the Count nervously interposed, afraid that the General would become aroused if he saw the hat.

"No, no. Der night air might spoil it!"

From the house came the lank form of Socrates Primmer. In his hand he carried the hatbox which all day he had been endeavoring to open in the presence of Lucy.

"What is the trouble?" he asked.

"No trouble at all—until you came," Harry replied, drily.

"Harry has simply been doing what I have often done," General Blazes explained. "He has bought a hat."

Primmer glanced at the hat box Harry held, and then looked at his own.

"This then, is for his wife?" he inquired, sadly.

"What?" the General said, misunderstanding Primmer. "Another man buy a hat for my wife? How dare you!"

Primmer shrank away from him.

"Nay," Medders soothed. "The hat Harry has is for his sister, Carolyn."

"No," Harry corrected him, fearing some further complication. "The fact is, I was going to give the hat to Lucy—with your permission, Mr. Medders. But I didn't like to ask your permission before all the others here."

"Bully for you, Harry!" the General beamed. "You couldn't do a finer thing."

"Thee hast?" Medders asked. "What is it, Socrates?"

"A hat," Primmer announced.

Harry leaped to a conclusion. Instantly he coupled Primmer with the mysterious man who had bought the duplicate hat at Mlle. Daphne's.

"Let's see it," he said.

He opened Primmer's hat box, and one glance was enough to confirm his suspicion. He dropped the lid quickly, took the box from Primmer's unresisting hold, and said:

"I'll take your hat to Lucy. She'll be—"

"No. I shall present it to her myself," Primmer declared, taking the box from Harry.

"All right," Harry said. "Don't let any one profane that hat by seeing it until it gets to the one for whom it is intended. And neither will I with mine. You won't let any one see it?"

"Surely not," Primmer agreed.

"All right. That's a sacred compact. Let's all go in now."

And as he ushered them into the house Harry said things to himself because of his foolishness in paying seventy-five dollars for a hat when the duplicate was in the house all the time.

"And," he growled, "I've still got one coming from Daphne!"

"What did thee say?" Medders asked, as they went into the reception room.

"I was saying that I hoped no one was coming this evening to break up our quiet little party."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"Isn't It a Lovely Evening?"

The Trimmer's Trick.

I took the trouble to watch a trimmer fill a basket with ordinary potatoes, writes "Tip" in the New York Press. He took an enormous potato too big to sell to any wise buyer. He put this potato on end with crowns up in the basket and then he built upon it a kind of trestlework or bridge, piling on the fine sized, nice, round baking boys on top. When the customer buys, the potatoes are poured as quickly as a flash into a big bag and it is only when the housewife gets home that she find the giant-sized potato nearly filling the bag, and she wisens up when she cuts up the big, fat boy for boiling. As a rule, the big ones have a great big hollow heart and insides as black as a man's hat. Nowadays they are selling tomatoes and other truck on baskets, not in them. They take a nice big wad of paper and fill up the basket to the top and then pile in the produce and put on the price.

Fully Informed.

"Is this Mr. Walsingham's office?" asked the gentlemanly solicitor, as he paused before the dignified old man who sat at the only desk in the room.

"Yes, sir."

"Are you Mr. Walsingham?"

"No, I'm just an inquisitive young scamp who has come in to paw over his papers, read his private correspondence and smoke a cigar that I have taken out of his vest pocket."

GET POWER.
The Supply Comes From Food.

If we get power from food why not strive to get all the power we can. That is only possible by use of skillfully selected food that exactly fits the requirements of the body.

Poor fuel makes a poor fire and a poor fire is not a good steam producer.

"From not knowing how to select the right food to fit my needs, I suffered grievously for a long time from stomach troubles," writes a lady from a little town in Missouri.

"It seemed as if I would never be able to find out the sort of food that was best for me hardly anything that I could eat would stay on my stomach. Every attempt gave me heartburn and filled my stomach with gas. I got thinner and thinner until I literally became a living skeleton, and in time was compelled to keep to my bed.

A few months ago I was persuaded to try Grape-Nuts food, and it had such good effect from the very beginning that I have kept up its use ever since. I was surprised at the ease with which I digested it. It proved to be just what I needed.

"All my unpleasant symptoms, the heartburn, the inflated feeling which gave me so much pain disappeared. My weight gradually increased from 98 to 116 pounds, my figure rounded out, my strength came back, and I am now able to do my housework and enjoy it. Grape-Nuts food did it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A ten days' trial will show anyone some facts about food.

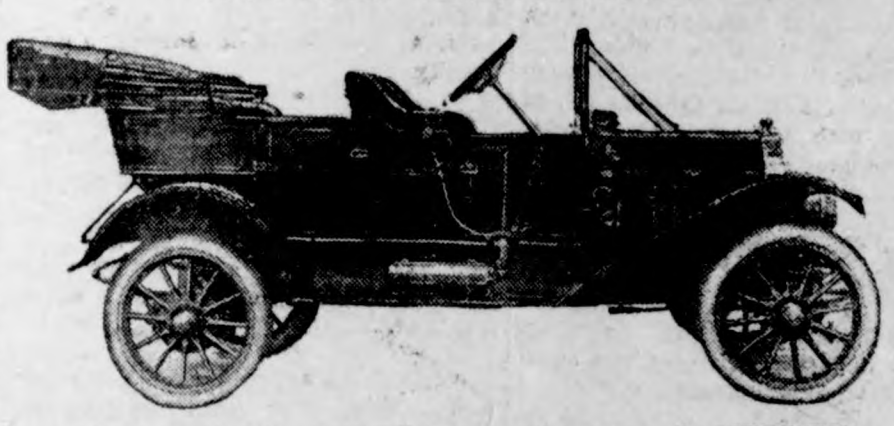
THE IMPERIAL

"THE GET THERE KIND"



It is with pleasure that we advertise the IMPERIAL. When so doing it is hard to say too much in favor of this line of IMPERIAL Automobiles. They have the record up-to-date for running and covering more miles of hard road-going, with the least expense, least adjustments.

The Burd Auto Co., Waterloo, Iowa, says: "The Imperial Automobile has not been equaled yet regardless of price." They run out 37 last season. Up to date there hasn't been one adjustment made. Their contract calls for 100 Imperials for 1911.

The Imperial is built in ten models, from a 35 H. P. two-passenger gentleman's Roadster, to a 60 H. P. seven passenger touring car. Buy the car that bears the name IMPERIAL, and get a dollar's worth of automobile for every dollar you invest.

Large Tract of Bearing Trees Near Council Bluffs Leased

EXPERTS TO STUDY METHOD

Experiment Station of Ames College to Learn If Industry in Iowa Can Be Put on Sure and Profitable Basis.

Ames.—If apple growing can be put on a sure and profitable basis in Iowa, the horticulture and soil experimentalists of the experiment station at Iowa State college have determined to find out how.

To this end the director of the station, C. F. Curtiss, has leased an established orchard of twenty-three acres in Pottawattamie county, near Council Bluffs, for a period of ten years. Here Prof. S. A. Beach of the horticulture section and Prof. W. H. Stevenson of the soils section and their assistants will apply the best known methods of cultivation so that the Iowa orchardists may be practically advised how to put their orchards on a paying basis. Laurenze Greene, station experimentalist, will have immediate charge of the project.

The orchard will be put into proper condition by pruning and otherwise as soon as possible. The ground will be divided into different plots and given different methods of cultivation. In the spring an organized fight against frost will be made with the best oil heater apparatus. In the spraying season the trees will be thoroughly treated for apple pests. In the fall the fruit will be harvested and marketed in a business-like way.

The GIRL of MY DREAMS

A NOVELIZATION OF THE PLAY BY WILBUR D. NESBIT AND OTTO HAUERBACH

NOVELIZED BY WILBUR D. NESBIT

COPYRIGHT BY W. D. NESBIT

SYNOPSIS.

Harry Swifton is expecting a visit from his fiancee, Lucy Medders, a Quakeress whom he met in the country. His auto collides into another machine containing a beautiful woman and a German count. The woman's hat is ruined and Harry escapes. His sister, Caroline, arrives at home to play hostess. Socrates Primmer, a cousin of Lucy's, arrives with a present intended as a present for Lucy. Harry is trailed to his home by the Count and Mrs. Gen. Blazes, who demands her hat, a duplicate of which she says has been delivered at Harry's house. She is in great fear lest her husband hear of her escapade. Lucy Medders and her father arrive and the count is hidden in another room and Mrs. Blazes in another. Harry is forced to do some fancy lying to keep Lucy from discovering the presence of the woman. The milliner, Daphne Daffington, who proves to be an old flame of Harry's, arrives to trace the missing duplicate hat and more complications ensue. Daphne is hustled into the room occupied by the Count. The latter, with whom Daphne had flirted at one time, demands the return of a ring he had given her on that occasion. She tells him that she gave the ring to General Blazes. But the Count had also given Mrs. Blazes a duplicate of the ring he becomes somewhat excited. Daphne leaves the room and seeks refuge in the one occupied by Mrs. Blazes. Mr. Medder discovers the Count, who is introduced as Harry's German tutor. General Blazes arrives and accuses Harry of concealing his wife. Daphne steps out and the general is confounded. Lucy gives way to tears. The Count takes the blame for the whole affair upon himself, but the verdict is reserved until Harry can vindicate himself. General Blazes admits to Harry that he has flirted with Daphne, and Mrs. Blazes overhears the talk. Mrs. Blazes attempts to escape with the aid of the Count and the latter is mistaken for a burglar. The duplicate hat arrives and Harry solves the mess.

CHAPTER XIII.

A short while later Harry left his guests gathered about the piano, singing, and quietly slipped outside. The Count made an excuse and left the room also. Harry went immediately to the front of the house and threw a pebble against Mrs. Blazes' window.

"Sat!" he cautioned, as she appeared.

"Oh, dear! I'm distracted!" she cried, almost hysterically.

"How do you think I feel?" he asked. "Listen. I've got the hat. I put it in my sister's room, until I get a chance to give it to you."

"Why can't I have it right away?" she asked.

"Some one would see me getting it from you. We can't take a chance. General Blazes is in there with the rest—don't you hear him singing?"

"Oh, yes. It is such a blessing that the dear old fellow can forget his troubles."

"He'll remember them soon enough." Around the corner of the house came Count von Fritz, laboriously carrying a long ladder that he had found.

"By gracious!" Harry said. "You're not such a fool after all. Here! I'll help you."

"Now you see," said the Count. "Ve get her oud."

With infinite pains, and as much silence as they could command, they raised the ladder and adjusted it against the window sill. Mrs. Blazes watched the proceeding eagerly.

"Am I to come down on that?" she inquired.

"No," Harry answered, with the sarcasm the occasion required. "We are going to train a morning glory vine on this."

"Smarty!" she sniffed at him. "That's just like a man!"

"Be careful, and be quiet. Get out on the ladder and creep down," Harry told her.

Mrs. Blazes stepped on a chair and mounted herself on the window sill. She was just swinging a neatly-shod foot over to the ladder when Harry paused:

"Get back! For the love of Mike, get back!"

She fairly fell back into the room, and as she did so Harry and the Count dropped their ladder to the ground among the shrubbery and dashed around the corner.

The irrepressible Carolyn had come to the front steps, adorned in a splendid hat of yellow straw, wreathed with gorgeous red poppies. Behind her came Pigeon Williams, his eyes blinking in the beauties of the girl and the hat.

"Say," he remarked, "that's a peach of a hat. Where'd you get it?"

"I found it in my room," she said. "Harry must have meant it as a surprise for me. Now I'm going to surprise him when he finds out I've found it. Let's stroll in the garden."

Nothing loath, the enamored Pigeon accepted the invitation. Harry and the Count peeped around the corner of the house, with grimaces of wrath and despair.

"Never mind," Harry whispered. "We've still got a hat up our sleeves." General Blazes came from the door, bidding the others good night.

"Tell Harry I'm sorry I had to hurry off," he said. "My wife will surely be at home by this time, worrying herself sick over my absence."

As he descended the steps Daphne Harrington, breathless, came up the walk. In her hand she carried a hat box containing the hat she had rushed to completion as a favor to Harry. That worthy and Count von Fitz nudged each other as they saw the general and the little milliner meet.

"General!" said Daphne, dropping the box and clasping her hands.

"Daphne!" exclaimed the General. The window above opened slowly and Mrs. Blazes peeped out upon the tableau.

"So!" the General said, bitterly. "Flirting, were you! And with that scrub of a Dutch count!"

"Loafer vat he iss!" mumbled the Count, and Harry clapped his hand over the Count's mouth in fear of being discovered.

"Any woman," said the General sternly to Daphne, "ought to be ashamed of being seen with him."

Daphne looked about her for some way of escape. But the General went on:

"And this ring you gave me! His ring! His ring that he—Didn't he give you this very ring?"

"No," Daphne answered, nervously. "He didn't give it to me, General. He—he wished it on."

"Well! I'll bet you the scoundrel doesn't wish it on any other woman!"

The General tore the offending ring from his finger and threw it away. It rolled directly to the Count, who grasped it fervently and whispered to Harry:

"For diss I forgif him all der rest!"

Harry kicked him, as a gentle signal for silence.

"I suppose," the General accused her, "you are back here looking for him, eh?"

Lucy opened the door and looked out, evidently wondering where Harry might have gone. She thought he would be waiting for her on the lawn bench. Seeing the General and Daphne

"So! the General Said. "Flirting Were You?"

she drew back, but she heard his question about the hat, and Daphne's answer.

"No," Daphne said, "I brought this hat for Harry Swifton."

Lucy silently came down the steps and stood in the shadows.

"What?" the General asked. "Is he getting up a hat trust? He must think a lot of that little flancee of his."

"Oh," Daphne explained carelessly, "it isn't for her. He told me it was for another woman."

Daphne passed the General, first picking up the hat box, and tripped up the steps and through the open doorway. The General walked away, shaking with laughter and chuckling:

"Harry is up to his old tricks."

Harry, from his place of concealment, was about to rush forth and speak to Lucy, but this time the Count restrained him. Lucy stood and sighed:

"Oh, Harry!"

Primmer appeared, still lugging his hat box. He almost fell down the steps, at seeing Lucy alone at last.

"My time has arrived!" he said, ecstatically. "My poor, poor Lucy! I have tried so hard to see you alone. Here! Let me present you this slight token of my affection—this hat! Wear it for my sake!"

He was surprised by the eagerness with which Lucy seized the box from his hands.

"A hat! Yes!" she exclaimed. "Give it to me. Yes, I will wear it!"

Primmer was about to burst forth into rapturous words, when she said:

"Nay! Do not speak to me! Leave me, I beg!" and rushed into the house.

Primmer followed her in, bewilderment holding him dumb for once.

Daphne came out of the door, saying:

"Well! They're all going crazy here. I can't find any one who will listen to me at all."

Harry came from his hiding place and said:

"Did you want to see me?"

"Yes. Here's your hat. Now, let's have our supper, Harry."

"It's no use, Daphne," he told her. "I can't accept your kind invitation. You're a couple of years late with it. I'll pay you any price for the hat, but—"

Daphne came down to him and looked at him with amazement.

"You don't mean that, Harry, do you?" she said. "Why, don't talk about the cost of the hat. It's the dinner I want."

Lucy again came to the door. She wanted to find Carolyn and tell her that she was going home. Now she saw Harry and the milliner. Daphne refused to be convinced by Harry's shaking of his head, and said:

"To think of you treating me like that! After all I've done for you."

"Yes, Miss Daphington, I know," Harry replied, soberly.

"Oh, Harry! How can you be so cold and cruel?" Daphne asked.

"No," Harry said, decisively. "That's all off the slate now. I'm engaged to be married to the dearest little girl in the world, and all this fluffing business is out for good."

"Is that so?" Daphne whipped out, angrily. "Suppose she knew about that other woman who is hiding in your room!"

Lucy gasped, and clutched her hands together.

"For heaven's sake, don't talk so loud!" Harry begged.

"Of course General Blazes is a good friend of yours," Daphne sneered, "but he might not relish it to hear that his wife"—

"Stop right there!" Harry ordered. "Don't pretend that you don't know I am perfectly innocent in this whole thing. You know how I accidentally ran over her hat this morning. You know that you, yourself, sent to this house a duplicate of that hat, and that I never met the woman before in my life. And you came here to see her and that was how you happened to be in that room with her. And you know that everything I have done, and all the lies I have told, and all the suspicions I have endured, have been because of my honest effort to protect her good name."

"Still, appearances are against you," Daphne argued.

Lucy smiled with joy, however.

Amos Medders strolled out and saw Lucy.

"Daughter," he said, "art thou not afraid of catching cold?"

Harry and Daphne turned, almost guiltily.

"Why, bless my soul!" Harry said. "I didn't see you folks come out."

"I just come," Lucy told him. "And what art thee getting, Harry?"

"He's buying a hat," Daphne said.

"What? Another hat?" Medders asked.

"Oh—er—yes, certainly," Harry replied.

"And for Lucy?"

"If you will let me give it to her, sir."

"What? Two? Why, Harry, my boy, thee art extravagant."

"Two?" Lucy asked.

"I wanted you to have your choice, Lucy," Harry said.

Daphne maliciously opened the box and placed the hat on Lucy's head. From her window Mrs. Blazes watched the proceeding in abject despair.

"Thank you, Miss Daphington," Harry said, taking control of the situation. "I'll let you hear from me tomorrow."

"Good evening all," Daphne said, sweetly, and left.

Mr. Medders, Harry and Lucy went in, but Lucy kept Harry back far enough to squeeze his arm and tell him he was a dear.

CHAPTER XIV.

Waiting until the coast was clear, Count von Fitz came from his hiding place and discreetly lifted the ladder.

Waiting Until the Coast was Clear Count von Fitz Came From His Hiding Place.

"Wait a minute," he said to himself. Quietly he went into the house, and as quietly reappeared in a few moments, carrying the hat box which Lucy had taken from Primmer, and which she had left in the hallway.

"Brains in der head beats cash in der pocket," he moralized.

He wedged the hatbox under his arm and crawled up the ladder to the window. Tapping gently upon it, he almost fell off the ladder when Mrs. Blazes swung it open.

"Be careful, voman!" he urged. "If I fall off diss ladder on diss hat you stay in diss house for life."

HE WAS ON THE WHITE LIST

Newcomer Learned Why, Having Subscribed, He Never Was Serenaded by the Local Band.

A Frenchman bought a house in the country, and had hardly settled there when the local band called and asked for his subscription to its funds. He put his name down for contribution, which, as he understood, entitled him to be serenaded on Sundays. Sundays came and went. The band played at various houses, but never at his. Finally, the London Telegraph says, the band called, not to play, but to collect the donor's subscription. He said: "But you have never played to me." The bandmaster looked surprised. "What does monsieur think of us? Does he suppose that if we had played we should ask him for money? Monsieur evidently does not know our band. Monsieur, having promised a generous contribution, is on our white list, that of the supporters whom we spare."

The Passion Play.

The now world-famous "Passion Play" at Oberammergau is said to have had its origin, about 1833, in the deep contrition of mind born of a great pestilence. Certain survivors of the plague resolved that ever afterward, at stated intervals, they would celebrate the "Passion of Christ" as a token of their reverential gratitude. Beginning on a small scale, the play gradually grew in importance until it is now known all over the world, having visitors from pretty nearly every civilized country on earth. While Oberammergau is still, and will probably remain, the center of the institution, Passion plays are beginning to be established in the surrounding regions, notably in Switzerland.

Horrors!

"She is always doing something original."

"Yes, but her latest stunt, if it becomes a fad, will upset society."

"Why, what is it?"

"She has employed a nurse to look after her poodle and insists on looking after her baby herself."

Improved Mechanical Process.

In France a process is being developed by which the hair is removed from a skin and placed on an artificial base, and then the skin is utilized separately.

Austrian School Gardens.

Over eight thousand gardens are cultivated in connection with Austrian schools, the pupils receiving expert tuition in horticulture.

Was He a Bostonian?

"John," shrieked a woman, "don't go under that ladder."

But under it John went with a swoop to the pavement.

"My dear," he said, coming up with a dollar bill in his hand, "if I hadn't gone under the ladder that boy would have beaten me to the currency."

CHILD'S HEAD A MASS OF HUMOR

"I think the Cuticura remedies are the best remedies for eczema I have ever heard of. My mother had a child who had a rash on its head when it was real young. Doctor called it baby rash. He gave us medicine, but it did no good. In a few days the head was a solid mass, a running sore. It was awful; the child cried continually. We had to hold him and watch him to keep him from scratching the sore. His suffering was dreadful. At last we remembered Cuticura Remedies. We got a dollar bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, a box of Cuticura Ointment, and a bar of Cuticura Soap. We gave the Resolvent as directed, washed the head with the Cuticura Soap, and applied the Cuticura Ointment. We had not used half before the child's head was clear and free from eczema, and it has never come back again. His head was healthy and he had a beautiful head of hair. I think the Cuticura Ointment very good for the hair. It makes the hair grow and prevents falling hair." (Signed) Mrs. Francis Lund, Plain City, Utah, Sept. 19, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 12 L, Boston.

Mrs. Chas. Stiehl had the misfortune to run a rusty nail through her foot last Saturday. She is getting along nicely although the wound was quite painful for a time.

Now is the time to begin to get your exhibits ready for the County Fair. There will be hundreds of Dollars given away in Premiums and Prizes and you might as well have some of this money as your neighbor. You can get a Premium List at any bank in the county. 3-2

In actual value of town lots, Klemme stands well up in the list of Hancock county towns as the following figures show—Garner $473,728, Britt $414.116, Kanawha $118,164, Klemme $99,344, Corwith $96.468, Goodell $42,736, Woden $36,616, Crystal Lake $30,580.

"Under the Harvest Moon" was played to a full house in Klemme Tuesday night and the play seemed to give good satisfaction. Some of the jokes they cracked brought back faint recollections of childhood and one song was rather—er—suggestive at least, and might have been omitted without detracting from the entertainment. When an audience quits applauding such features, actors will quit using them. Some of the actors in this company are very good. The parts of Uncle Si, Daisy and Ruth were all played in a pleasing manner and Rube played his part well, if he had cut out the song above mentioned and one or two jokes of not too refined a nature.

CHARLIE KLUCKHOHN PASSES AWAY

Charlie Kluckhohn, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Kluckhohn, was born in Ell township, Hancock county. Iowa, on May 3rd, 1890, and died at the home of his parents in Klemme last Sunday, August 27th, 1911, at 9:00 a. m., aged 21 years, 3 months and 24 days. Death was caused from appendicitis.

The news of the passing of this young man just in the prime of life came as a severe shock to the whole community as it was not known to many that he was seriously ill. A few weeks ago he went to Sibley, Iowa, where he had a position in the Rock Island depot. A week ago Monday he was taken sick and on last Thursday he started home, going as far as Estherville where he stayed over night at the Joe Nissen home, coming on home to Klemme on Friday. He grew gradually worse and in spite of all that could be done for him, he passed away on Sunday morning, August 27th. He leaves to mourn his loss a father and mother, three brothers and two sisters, besides a host of young friends. It is a sad blow to those near and dear to him, and they all have the sympathy of the whole community in their affliction.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the German Methodist church, Rev. H. W. Schneider and Rev. Wm. Zabilka officiating. Interment was made in Klemme cemetery.

The floral offerings were profuse and very beautiful.

Senator Berry Says Iowa Is Not Meeting Responsibilities

PRISON CONDITIONS ARE BAD

Chairman Of the State Parole Board Gives His Views Of the Lax Methods Of the State In Reformatories.

Des Moines.—In an address delivered by Senator W. H. Berry, chairman of the State Board of Parole before the Sunday School association at Indianola Senator Berry declared that the reformatory at Anamosa was far behind what it ought to be, and that the legislature ought to make the proper provision to improve the conditions and remove the surroundings that tend toward influencing the first offender in a life of crime.

Scores of lawyers of Iowa haven't the least idea what the indeterminate sentence is or what the parole system is, according to Senator Berry. After explaining the indeterminate law, Senator Berry declared that the parole board ought to be called a sentencing board, for in reality it fixes the time the prisoner shall serve in prison. "Iowa is a thousand years behind the times on the proposition of separating the young and the old criminals. There is much in our system that is good, but much in it is bad. The reformatory at Anamosa is as far behind what it ought to be as day is from night. There are no means provided to make it a reformatory. I would like to speak in Iowa to a hundred audiences to get the people roused and obtain the right kind of legislation for the criminal. There ought to be all manner of trades in the penitentiary, which a prisoner could learn, and which would fit him for a livelihood when he is free. If this were true, in a great many cases the prisoner would never get into trouble again. As it now is, there are only two trades, printing and tailoring, which a prisoner can learn to any advantage. The reformatory is not organized as it should be because the people through the legislature are lax in their duty."

Explains Postal Bank Ruling.

State Auditor Bleakly has notified the banks of the state that while they must carry their postal deposits as "bills payable" they "may interline them as postal savings deposits." In a letter to one of the Des Moines banks he outlines his position as follows: "Permit me to say that it has been held by the attorney general that postal savings bank deposits should be classified in your liabilities as bills payable. Said securities being tied up permanently, they could not be classified otherwise. Should you receive postal savings deposits you will understand that it will be necessary for you to classify them as a liability. This department will not ask you to report them as strictly bills payable, but you may interline them as postal savings deposits."

Make Permanent Tax Board.

The proposition to recommend to the Thirty-fifth general assembly the creation of a permanent tax commission in Iowa and the election of county assessors will be considered by the state tax commission when it meets. Chairman Cohen has called a meeting of the commission to begin the last week in August. At this time the two propositions mentioned will receive the careful consideration of the commission. It is quite probable that the commission, after a week of discussion, will incorporate in its recommendations to the next general assembly a proposition to create a permanent state tax commission, which shall do away with the state executive council.

Train Butcher Caught In Act.

J. O. Mahaffey, a train butcher of Des Moines, went to Newton to attend the Jasper county fair and homecoming celebration. He returned in the custody of Deputy United States Marshal George Bidwell, who arrested him on the charge of bootlegging. Mahaffey evidently intended to treat his old friends in Newton with perfectly good whiskey because thirteen pint bottles were found in his suit case by Deputy Bidwell.

Morrow Has Guest.

Hon. Alvin Reeves, formerly state treasurer of California, was the guest of State Treasurer Morrow at the state house during the past week.

Wants Into Iowa.

The Ward-Deutsche Insurance company of Hamburg, has asked State Auditor Bleakly for permission to sell insurance in Iowa.

OUSTER SUITS MAY FOLLOW

Governor Makes Plain His Position In Statement Reproving Sheriff Eckhardt For Negligence.

Des Moines.—Removal from office will be the portion of every Scott county official who had anything to do with permitting or failing to stop the prize fight which was held on the Iowa side of the Mississippi river at Davenport. This is the ultimatum which Governor Carroll issued to Sheriff Eckhardt of that county.

While Governor Carroll was visiting his wrath on the head of the unfortunate sheriff, Attorney General Cosson, by letter, was pulling the county attorney's office over the coals. Attorney General Cosson wrote a letter to Assistant County Attorney Becker severely criticising the county attorney's office. He charges open gambling and open liquor selling.

Attorney General Cosson's stinging letter to Waldo Becker, assistant county attorney, is as follows: "In the absence of the county attorney I am writing you directly concerning a series of prize fights which I am advised have been pulled off within the jurisdiction of Scott county. These fights have usually been announced in the public press, invitations to at least a part have been sent through the mails, and there has been sufficient notoriety attending them, or at least the last two, as to leave no excuse for a failure to take the necessary precaution to prevent the same. It is not my intention or purpose to needlessly interfere in the affairs of your office, but it is imperative that open and flagrant violations of the law must cease and your office will be held responsible for seeing that this is done."

Looks Dark For Thomas.

Friends and relatives of Charlie Thomas, convicted of the murder of Mabel Scofield, have despaired of ever getting a parole for him. It is generally believed that the precedent set by the state board of parole in the Van Tassel and the Watson cases will be followed hereafter. That means that the board will refuse to parole any prisoner who has been given a life sentence for murder.

This leaves it certain that the Rainsberger brothers will also be denied a parole.

The board of parole is being severely criticised over the state for laying down a hard and fast rule prohibiting the paroling of "lifers." It is claimed that this rule is all right when applied to murderers who have been convicted on positive evidence so that there can be no doubt of their guilt. But when a man is convicted on circumstantial evidence of such a character that there is doubt of his guilt, the critics of the board say that some provision should be made in the rules for his parole after he has served out his expectancy.

The new rule prohibiting the parole of life prisoners has caused such a commotion among district judges and county attorneys that it is feared that unless the board of parole recedes from its position the entire indeterminate sentence law may be revoked by some future general assembly.

Iowa Soil Can Come Back.

"Crop conditions at the several state institutions under the jurisdiction of the board of control have shown a wonderful improvement in the past two or three weeks," said Chairman Robinson of the board upon his return from a tour of inspection. "The recent rains and cooler weather have done wonders for the crops, showing that the Iowa soil can, to use a slang phrase, 'come back' when it gets the opportunity. The state farm at the Davenport institution will produce a good crop of potatoes, something we did not expect earlier in the season. The farms at Cherokee, Independence and Marshalltown are all looking fine after the rains and the cooler weather. The institutional farms in southwestern Iowa are in the worst condition, but even these have shown considerable improvement during the past two weeks. We are greatly pleased with the resurrection which has taken place on the state farms."

Gambling Must Stop.

Attorney General Cosson is after County Attorney Bock of Dickinson county for permitting gambling at Lake Okoboji. The attorney general ten days ago received a formal complaint from a responsible association at Lake Okoboji charging that gambling of all kinds, including slot machines, was being carried on at the various lake resorts.

Last week he hied himself up there. Sure enough he found gambling machines of all kinds operated in the hotel lobbies. Returning home he sent a sharp letter to the county attorney calling his attention to the condition and refreshing the aforesaid official's mind regarding the anti-gambling laws and also the removal laws.

Complaints of gambling are coming into the attorney general's office from other section of the state.

ON THEIR DAY OF DAYS

Labor's Changing Ideal

ORGANIZED labor's ideal of a short workday changes with varying conditions. At one time it was customary to work 12 or more hours per day, but as civilization advanced the working day has been steadily reduced.

In reducing the hours of labor the unions have been chiefly instrumental, as they have in various trades established a shorter workday and then followed it up by legislation wherever they have been strong enough.

Though "eight hours" may be the objective which organized labor now seeks to accomplish, it does not follow that eight hours is ideal, or that it will be the goal of the future. The short-hour movement rests fundamently upon necessity.

"The constant improvement in machinery and consequent displacement of labor, together with the further displacement of labor by the tendency toward consolidation in all lines of industry, must ultimately compel us to choose between three things: First, we may shorten the hours of labor to distribute opportunity for employment, or, second, we may tax property to support the idle, or, third, we may have revolution."

This masterly and unaswerable summing up of the underlying causes of the short-hour movement was by a statesman, no less than the late Thomas B. Reed.

It follows that as long as machinery and methods continue so to improve that less and less hours are required for productive labor, the ideal working day will be shorter and shorter.

Labor does not expect to live without work—it complains that there are too many who live without work, and it would like to make the hours short enough so that all will have to work.

It notes that banking and professional men work five hours or less, and hopes to reach the same ideal some time.

To provide work for the idle affects the supply of and demand for labor and favorably affects wages—as all short-hour trades well know—but the desire of the worker to have some time for recreation and amusement stimulates the demand for shorter hours.

As our wage-earners become better educated they become more determined to have more of the benefit of labor-saving machinery.

They desire more leisure that their industrial life may be prolonged.

They desire their fellow-men to be employed.

They desire good wages and realize that to preserve them their fellowmen must be employed.

The late George E. McNeill, called the father of the eight-hour movement, said "Eight hours for work, eight hours for rest, eight hours for what we will."

This seems like an equitable division as long as eight hours is the objective, but as invention follows invention, it is likely the figures will have to be revised.

The ideal short hour workday is the shortest day possible that will give good wages, and give the largest measure of freedom, recreation and enjoyment to the worker, enabling him to support his family, educate his children, and lay aside something for the rainy day.

SAMUEL GOMPERS.

Efficiency a Union Ideal

THE fundamental principles underlying the constitution of the united brotherhood of carpenters and joiners of America compel us to recognize that the intersts of all classes of labor are identical. We hold it as a sacred principle that trade union men, above all others, should set an example as good and faithful workmen, performing their duty to their employers with honor to themselves and to their organization. The mechanic, of whatever trade he may be, in taking this obligation, feels it his duty to become more skilled, and for the honor of his organization he becomes more industrious and takes a greater interest in his work, knowing that his employer, who has been carefully watching him, will be more willing to accede to any reasonable request that his union may make in the form of shorter hours, higher wages or more humane conditions.

I am well aware that the unfair employer holds that nonunion labor is more efficient than union labor, and that his arguments have had some weight in forming public sentiment against us in the past. But the fact still remains that we have the best skilled men in our ranks, enlisted under the banner of trade unionism. In every city costly buildings are being erected in which not only are the materials the finest but the highest class of skilled labor is required. Many of the more skillful workmen become experts in the various branches of the building trades. The fact that men are organized and meet every week to discuss enconomic and social questions does not make them less, but more intelligent. They take pride in their union.

Among the members of trade unions are the highest skilled workmen, who also represent the highest type of citizenship. Men who come together for mutual improvement are prompted by the loftiest motives.

As good citizens, the trade unionists are continually working and spending their money for the uplifting of humanity. We have reduced the hours of labor and raised the rate of wages and shared them freely with the nonunion man, who has allowed himself to become the dupe of the employer who has raised the question as to the efficiency of union labor.

The Boy Puzzle

By DR. J. S. KIRTLEY

SEEING THINGS BY DAY

"Seeing things at night" is tame compared with the way a boy sees things with his eyes wide open, things that are not so, at that. From the time he is four or five years old that power to see the unseen, to make images of invisible things, is perfectly riotous. Two facts about him seem to contradict each other. One is that his acute senses make very accurate observations of real things; the other, that his active imagination knows no bounds.

It is not hard work, either; it does itself. In that case we call it passive imagination. There is something in him like wings and they insist on flying. He does not yet care where they take him. So they flit from point to point, as they will, without restraint or direction from reason or will. After awhile he will be able to hold that sight on an object as long as he wishes and his imagination will enter on a new phase. At first the things he remembers attract him most and, for that reason, some have called it mere memory; yet it is something more. But when he begins to take charge of it, we say it is active imagination. And perhaps here is where we can appreciate Binet's remark that it is "the faculty of creating groups of images which do not correspond to any external reality." This day dreaming is not wrong either. He has to do it, whether right or wrong, though he may do it in a right or a wrong way.

After he is seven or eight, he sees things more in groups and connections; and still later, in his teens, his reason and purpose take charge of the aerial thing. Sometimes they succeed in killing it and, in that case, he is dead, from that time on. The reason the Wrights and Curtiss and Hamilton and the other flyers can navigate the air is that they have been doing it, in imagination, for a long time. So it is the magical power that begins, when he is very young, and stays with him till he dies, or till his heart dies. It is his Aladdin's lamp whose rays disclose all he wishes and changes stones into crystals; "Fortunatus' purse that holds the treasures of the universe."

It is the mother of his mirth, the spring of his smiles. It is closely and causally related to a saving sense of humor. That is why a boy in Kansas City rose from his seat in a crowded street car when a fat woman entered and said: "Gentlemen, I will be one of three to get up and give this lady a seat." Even his unconscious humor flows from this source, as when the teacher said: "Tommy, why do you think I scold too much?" "'Cause you git kinder fretful teaching school, I s'pose," was his honest reply.

That is one reason why he enjoys the present so much and anticipates the future so eagerly—he sees so much in them. And, it may be added, that is reason he can endure the present, when older people treat him so unjustly on the ground that he is only a boy, and it makes no difference how he is treated. In one respect, he is like Moses, who endured, because he saw the invisible.

There is no other way to explain how he can do so much—he sees it beforehand. Mr. Ferris was told that by the laws of mechanics no such wheel was possible, but, after long study, he suddenly saw that wheel, with his mind's eye, as he sat in a restaurant in Chicago; and then building it was the easiest part of it all. Von Moltke was in bed when the word came that France had declared war, and he quietly told the messenger to look in a certain pigeon hole for several telegrams and said "Send them.' Then he went to bed. He had foreseen it all and had every plan made.

Imagination gives wings to his hope, feet to his reason, force to his decisions and vividness to his memory. It furnishes him invincible armor and victorious arms for his battle against the false and vicious and vulgar; for he can picture to himself the ideal, true and virtuous and good and then make them real. It enables him to secure control of himself at the time when he is becoming acquainted with his own volatile and mysterious powers; for he can be made to see the vast benefits to come from such self-control.

Personal care of the body gets aid from the imagination, as the latter helps him fashion an ideal for his true self, which always works towards health and symmetry and artistic excellence. A good imagination is good hygiene. Experience and imagination join in teaching him to anticipate the results of a given action so vividly as to restrain from the wrong and constrain to the right. Gluskap, hero of the Micmacs, asked the animals, just before the appearance of man: "What would you do if you met a man?" The boy looks ahead. He will need it in his business, if he is a bootblack or a merchant or a lawyer or a—well, anything. But peril must be faced. If his imagination is not disciplined and if he is very fond of success, he will become a liar of the worst kind

CHAMELEON HUES

Two of his indispensable powers are imagination and imitation. They awake early and stay on the job till he is dead. With him imitation is not limitation; it is life and enlargement. He is like the chameleon that takes its hues from its environment.

At the start, it is blind impulse, automatic at that, as he bobs up and down and sways around on his springs; grasps at everything in sight, from his mother to the moon; and makes a specialty of foraging for refreshments.

Soon he gets to imitating and never stops. Nature was wise in ordaining it so. That is the way he grows, for imitation is appropriation. He answers your smile with a smile, your frown with a similar frown, your love with love, your hatred with hatred. He does this at first without knowing it, then he does it purposely, and, by this time he has the habit.

It is not contented that he has only imitation. He has initiative; also referendum. He is orignal. It was a boy who saw the steam lft the lid off his mother's tea kettle and got up an imitation that has lifted the life of mankind. If we could trace the history of aeronautics, we would find that some boy started the scheme by making a descent from the barn loft with his father's umbrella for a parachute, or some man has done it, with the gift of imitation cultivated so carefully in boyhood. He learns to apply the most recondite knowledge to the most common conditions. After giving a definition of the word "ransom," and using the case of Miss Ellen Stone, as an illustration, the teacher told the pupils to compose a sentence, having the word in it. Little Jack Walker would never have shown the "pome" he wrote, had not his nearest neighbor told of it. And it read: "Away out west in the town of Racine a Tom Cat sat on a sewing machine. The wheels began to buzz and the cat began to wail; for it took nine stitches in the end of his tail; and the cat ran some."

There are some things a boy naturally imitates with more or less ease simply because he is a boy; then there are some things he imitates at one stage, and others at another. There may be an unspoiled, but not an unsoiled, simplicity of boyhood. The dainty little girl will keep her white dress and pink ribbons up to the standard of the angels whom she imitates; while the dirty little boy emerges from the puddle where he has had a good time with his friends, the pigs, whom he imitates, when he can.

His words betray him, odd words, big words, long words, lurid words. They show their origin. The waiting boy in the reception room of a wealthy and cultured Bostonian made me feel that I was talking to the W. and C. B. himself. A newsboy of Mr. John L. Sullivan's town, with only a month's experience, was heard to say to another newsboy: "William Scott, if you corrugate your brow at me in that manner again, I will temporarily deposit my papers upon the sidewalk and cause the blood to coagulate under your left optic. Hear me William!"

He imitates actions as well as words; gathers the ideals as well as actions; most of all feels the spell of compelling personalities. Those two lads, sons of Jack Abernethy, United States marshal for Oklahoma, who rode horseback all the way from Oklahoma to New York to serve on the reception committee when Roosevelt was welcomed home from Africa, enjoyed that trip far more than if they had gone in a palace car, because their adored Teddy and their pa were Rough Riders. He is a hero worshiper from the beginning. It is the man he imitates. He would rather be like some fascinating man than be an angel—for awhile at least. In the first stage, from one to six years, it is automatic and impulsive and what appeals to those impulses he imitates. During the next stage the impulses get differentiated. He is a natural insurgent from eight to twelve. The strain on him is terrific as his habits get formed.

Royal Abbess of Seventeen.

The Archduchess Elizabeth Francesca, oldest unmarried granddaughter of the emperor of Austria, who made her debut at the first Viennese court ball of the season, did not present so picturesque a figure as her cousin, the Archduchess Elizabeth Mary, on a similar occasion.

Until her marriage with Prince Otto zu Windischgratz the Crown Prince Rudolph's daughter was abbess of the order of St. Theresa and wore the velvet and ermine robes of her office at all state functions.

With these she carried a pastoral staff, studded with jewels, presented to the order by St. Wenceslaus, king of Bohemia, 600 years ago.

A miter of peculiar shape perched on the curly head of the seventeen-year-old archduchess gave a piquant finish to her appearance when she made her first public courtesy to her grandfather.—Pall Mall Gazette.

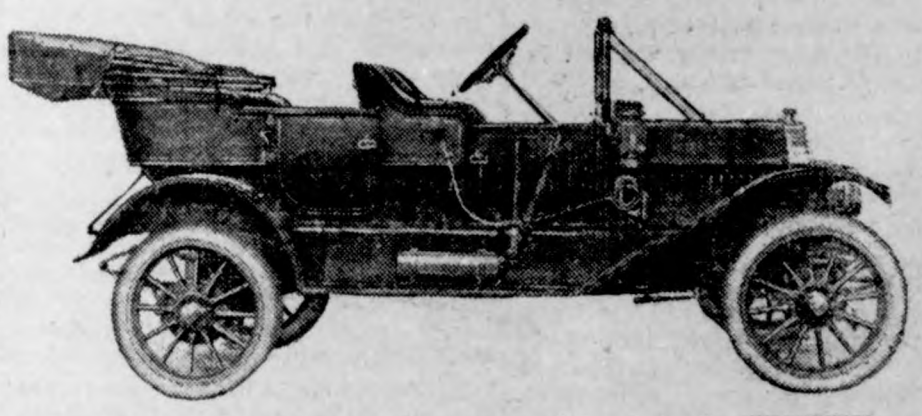
THE IMPERIAL

"THE GET THERE KIND"



It is with pleasure that we advertise the IMPERIAL. When so doing it is hard to say too much in favor of this line of IMPERIAL Automobiles. They have the record up-to-date for running and covering more miles of hard road-going, with the least expense, least adjustments.

The Burd Auto Co., Waterloo, Iowa, says: "The Imperial Automobile has not been equaled yet regardless of price." They run out 37 last season. Up to date there hasn't been one adjustment made. Their contract calls for 100 Imperials for 1911.

The Imperial is built in ten models, from a 35 H. P. two-passenger gentleman's Roadster, to a 60 H. P. seven passenger touring car. Buy the car that bears the name IMPERIAL, and get a dollar's worth of automobile for every dollar you invest.

INTERURBAN DEPOT

Cars Will Enter Rock Island Station After November 1

COME IN OVER SHORT LINE

New Line Is Being Built From the Interurban Tracks Near Kelley To Connect With St. Paul and Des Moines.

Des Moines.—After November the interurban cars of the Fort Dodge, Des Moines and Southern Railroad company will come into Des Moines over the St. Paul and Des Moines tracks to the Rock Island depot. Cars for Boone, Ames, Rockwell City, Fort Dodge and intervening points will leave and arrive at the Rock Island station.

Negotiations for the new arrangement have been closed with the Rock Island officials by the receivers for the Fort Dodge, Des Moines and Southern. Under the new system, the interurban cars on the line will not use the Des Moines city railway tracks to enter Des Moines.

Work has commenced already. A line is being built from the interurban tracks near Kelly to connect with the St. Paul and Des Moines, a mile north of Des Moines. From the intersection to the Rock Island depot the Short Line will be electrified to accommodate the interurban service.

Will Improve City Park.

Re-establish Still College.

Des Moines.—A campaign to raise $50,000 for the purpose of assuring the re-establishment of Still College of Osteopathy is being considered. The preliminary work for the campaign probably will be started within a short time. The GIRL of MY DREAMS

A NOVELIZATION OF THE PLAY BY WILBUR D. NESBIT AND OTTO HAUERBACH

NOVELIZED BY WILBUR D. NESBIT

COPYRIGHT BY W. D. NESBIT

SYNOPSIS.

Harry Swifton is expecting a visit from his fiancee, Lucy Medders, a Quakeress whom he met in the country. His auto crashes into another machine containing a beautiful woman and a German count. The woman's hat is ruined and Harry apologizes. His sister, Caroline, arrives at the home to play hostess. Socrates Primrose, cousin of Lucy's, arrives with a present intended as a present for Lucy. Harry is trailed to his home by the Count and Mrs. Gen. Blazes, who demands her hat, a duplicate of which she says has been delivered at Harry's house. She is in great fear lest her husband hear of the escapade. Lucy Medders and her father arrive and the count is hidden in one room and Mrs. Blazes in another. Harry is forced to do some fancy lying to keep Lucy from discovering the presence of the woman. The milliner, Daphne Daffodil, who proves to be an old flame of Harry's, arrives to trace the missing duplicate hat and more complications ensue. Daphne is hustled into the room occupied by the Count. The latter, with whom Daphne had flirted at one time, demands the return of a ring he had given her on that occasion. She tells him that she gave the ring to General Blazes. The Count had also given Mrs. Blazes a duplicate of the ring he becomes somewhat excited. Daphne leaves the room and seeks refuge in the one occupied by Mrs. Blazes. Mr. Medder discovers the count, who is introduced as Harry's German tutor. General Blazes arrives and accuses Harry of concealing his wife. The latter steps out and the general is astounded. Lucy gives way to tears. The Count takes the blame for the whole affair upon himself, but the verdict is reserved until Harry can vindicate himself. Finally Blazes admits to Harry that he has flirted with Daphne, and Mrs. Blazes hears the talk. Mrs. Blazes attempts to escape with the aid of the Count and the latter is mistaken for a burglar. The duplicate hat arrives and Harry solves the mess. Lucy overhears a conversation between Harry and Daphne which clears her of his innocence.

CHAPTER XIV.—(Continued.)

"Give me the hat! Give me the hat!" Mrs Blazes exclaimed.

"Giff me my ring," the count replied.

She slipped his ring from her finger and offered it to him hastily. But, with one hand clutching a round of the ladder and the other arm about the hatbox, he was hardly in a position to take it.

"How can I?" he sputtered. "It iss boxing, not der mumps."

"Put the hat in the window; then I can take the ring," she advised. "Und den you get der hat und giff der laugh?"

"Nonsense!" she answered. "I never want to see your ring, or you again!"

"Der same to you, und many off dem," he retorted, swinging the hatbox around and trying to shove it through the window. She caught hold of it also, but it was too wide to go through the opening. In the effort to force it through the count lost his balance and came perilously near going down with a crash. He saved himself by clutching the window frame, however. Mrs. Blazes fretfully said:

"Clumsy! Let me show you."

She untied the string on the box, took off the lid and took out the hat. She let the box drop to the ground, and with a little scream of delight stepped back into the room and hurriedly donned the hat.

"It's a perfect duplicate!" she said, happily. Then, while the count was descending the ladder she started to climb out of the window, but the count stopped her.

"My ring, iff you blease!" he said.

"For goodness sake! Take it and let me go!"

She thrust the ring into his hand, and he ran down the ladder and steadied it at the bottom. Mrs. Blazes carefully crept from the window, with much manipulation of her skirts, and anxiously let herself down a rung at a time. When she was half way down she cried:

"Oh! I'm scared! I'm going back!"

She started up the ladder again, and the count almost fainted. He shook the ladder violently and threatened:

"Iff you go up anudder round, I upset it!"

Timorously, she came down, and at last stood on the ground.

"Oh! How heavenly it is to be free!" she exclaimed.

Up the walk again stormed the general, and Mrs. Blazes at sight of him screamed, and would have climbed the ladder had not the count caught her arm and restrained her.

General Blazes had not found her at home, and had returned to hold counsel with Harry as to the best way to locate her. And now he found her in the company of the count, in Harry's lawn, with a ladder leading to a window in Harry's house.

"Aha!" he shouted.

"Merciful heavens! My husband!" she wailed.

"Und he only buries nodding of dem but deir hats!" the count reflected, keeping Mrs. Blazes between him and the general.

"So!" the general roared, confronting her. "This has been your plan, has it?" He turned on the count vindictively. "Trying to inveigle my wife to climb into that house!"

"My dear, you are wrong!" Mrs. Blazes wept. "Listen a moment, and I can explain."

"Wrong? Explain? Woman, I see it all now! You have planned an elopement with this—this pretzel!"

"Bretzel! Ach Gott! Und I must stand dis!" the count fumed.

"What?" Mrs. Blazes demanded. "Elope with that?"

She pointed a scornful finger at the count.

"Don't try to palaver me!" the general shouted.

All this noise and shouting of course was heard by those in the house, and first Harry came running out, followed by Lucy and her father.

"What in the world is happening?" Harry asked, rushing up to the excited trio.

"I have trapped this wretch!" General Blazes yelled, indicating the count with a gesture of his clenched fist.

Harry, helpless, looked from one to the other. Mrs. Blazes, desperate, glanced at him and said:

"Mr. Swifton can explain. I have nothing more to say."

She assumed an air of supreme indifference to whatever fate might hold in abeyance for her.

"Well, Harry," the general said, "if it's up to you, tell me how this happened."

"Tell you how what happened?" Harry asked, dazedly.

"How does it happen that I find my wife trying to climb into your house, assisted by this—noodle."

"Noodle! Gott in Himmel! I forget myselluf yet!" the count gritted between his teeth.

"Oh! What? Trying to climb into my house?" Harry repeated, brushing his hand over his brow. "Why—why—it must have been some kind of a joke, general. Yes—surely it was some kind of a joke."

"Joke!" the general blurted out.

"But why should she want to get into thy house, Harry?" Lucy asked, with a bit of mischievousness, for now she knew the whole story.

"Yes!" the general barked, turning to his wife. "Why should you want to get into his house?"

Mrs. Blazes saw light ahead.

"My dear, if you will only calm "I will tell you everything. I know you will think I am a foolish woman—but, darling, I have been jealous of you."

"Jealous of me?" said her liege lord.

"Forgive me!" she pleaded. "But when I heard those reports about you, I—"

"Reports? What reports?"

"That you were infatuated with a milliner—Mlle. Daphne."

"I? I infatuated with a milliner?" the general asked, with a look of terribly injured innocence. "I? Ridiculous!"

"And I saw her enter this house this afternoon," Mrs. Blazes continued, "and then I heard that you were here—and oh, darling, forgive me!—I came to spy on you!"

"Perfectly amazing!" Harry said to himself. "I'm in the primary class, compared to her."

"Why," the general said. "My own little pet!" He took his wife into his arms. "I—I forgive you! I want you to forgive me. The idea of my giving you even a moment's unhappiness of that kind!"

"T-take me ho-home!" pleaded Mrs. Blazes, from the shelter of his shoulder.

The twain, reunited, went slowly down the walk and into the street.

Mr. Medders observed that Harry and Lucy looked as though they had something to say to each other, and said to the count:

"The young man whom they call Pigeon is sitting in the summer house with Carolyn, and Cousin Socrates is again in the attic writing a sonnet. Wilt thou come in with me and see if thee can find a cigar?"

"I thank you, from my heart," the count replied. "But I haff some writing to do—und iff you excuse me, I go down to der hotel now."

"Then I will say farewell, until we meet again," Medders observed, shaking the count's hand and returning to the house.

Count von Fitz stood before Harry and Lucy a moment.

"I vant to say choost diss," he spoke. "I vant to say 'Bless you, my children!' Und I can't make a present off a hat, but iff you vill honor me, Mr. Swifton, by allowing Miss Lucy to accept a liddle token of my good vishes, I vill giff her diss."

He slipped his fingers into his pocket and produced a little case, which he opened and then took out a ring—not such a ring as either of the ones he had recovered—but a beautiful cluster of diamonds surrounding a ruby.

"Diss," he said, "is a ring I vas keeping to giff to der most beautiful,

"Give Me the Hat!" Mrs. Blazes Exclaimed. "Giff Me My Ring," the Count Replied.

der sweetest, der truest girl I shouldt find in America. I haff found her—und now I lose her, because you found her, Mr. Swifton."

He dropped the ring into Lucy's hand, and was gone.

Harry led Lucy to a seat.

"Now," he said, "I'm ready to explain."

"Nay," Lucy said, happily. "Thee need not explain now, Harry, dear. I I know all thee would tell me of that. Tell me something else."

And he told her.

THE END.

HEARD IN A SOUTHERN HOTEL

Little Girl Explains That Young Lady Is "Her Papa's New Stepwife."

It is said to have happened in a southern hotel, where those who seek perpetual spring spend the winter. The usual number of idle and curious old ladies sat upon the great veranda, discussing everybody but themselves, and attention was suddenly attracted by a handsome couple that passed through the hotel corridor, followed by a little girl, who, small as she was, appeared to be too old to be the daughter of the lady in the case. The handsome couple entered a motor car, and, waving an affectionate goodby to the little girl, sped out of the hotel grounds with a loud whirr and disappeared up the distant roadway. The little girl watched them until they were quite out of sight, and then turning around she sought out a chair not far from the group of gossips. It was not long before her loneliness was noted by one of the ladies, who called out a pleasant greeting.

"I don't think I have seen you here before, my little girl," she said, with a gracious smile.

"No, ma'am," said the little girl. "We only got here last night."

"And do you like it here?" she was asked.

"Very much," she replied. "It's lovely here."

"And you didn't go motoring with your papa and mamma, did you?" said the good lady, subtly.

"No, I don't like motor cars," said the child. "It makes me seasick to ride in them."

"Your mamma is a very young looking lady to have so big a child as you have," said the good lady.

"She isn't my real mamma," said the child.

"Oh, indeed," said the good lady.

"No," said the little one, gravely. "She's my papa's new stepwife."—Horace Dodd Gastit, in Judge.

A North Dakota Wolf Killer.

In crossing the Big Pembina on his way to Walhalla the other day Hans Bratlie of Osnabrock had a chance to put in a few new stunts in the way of hunting. A big timber wolf crossed the road just ahead of his team and in trying to jump the fence next the road got caught and tangled up in the barbed wire.

Bratlie had no gun, so it was a case of go for the beast with nature's weapons, which he did, and in trying to get the toe hold managed to get a good grip on the wolf's tail. The wolf then made a few hurried circles around Mr. Bratlie's head and landed head first kerplunk in the sleigh box, dead as a door nail, and Hans continued on his way to Walhalla after filling and lighting his corn cob.—Osnabrock correspondence Bismarck Tribune.

A Worry, Even in Eating.

"Well," smiles the wife of the customer, "you miss one worry that the rest of us have. With your husband in the grocery and meat business you don't have to worry about the high cost of living."

"Yes, we avoid that worry," says the market man's wife. "But the trouble is that Mr. Feedem never enjoys his meals. Every time he eats anything he frets about how much he could have sold it for."

FOUND RIGHT PATH
After a False Start.

"In 1890 I began to drink coffee.

"At that time I was healthy and enjoyed life. At first I noticed no bad effects from the indulgence but in course of time found that various troubles were coming upon me.

"Palpitation of the heart took unto itself sick and nervous headaches, kidney troubles followed and eventually my stomach became so deranged that even a light meal caused me serious distress.

"Our physician's prescriptions failed to help me and then I dosed myself with patent medicines till I was thoroughly disgusted and hopeless.

"Finally I began to suspect that coffee was the cause of my troubles. I experimented by leaving it off, except for one small cup at breakfast. This helped some but did not altogether relieve my distress. It satisfied me, however, that I was on the right track.

"So I gave up coffee altogether and began to use Postum. In ten days I found myself greatly improved, my nerves steady, my head clear, my kidneys working better and better, my heart's action rapidly improving, my appetite improved and the ability to eat a hearty meal without subsequent suffering restored to me. And this condition remains.

"Leaving off coffee and using Postum did this, with no help from drugs, as I abandoned the use of medicines when I began to use the food drink." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

For the Public Good

One hears a good deal about the power of the press, but the fact is that no newspaper has very much real power over men or events in these days unless it is known to be standing sanely and steadfastly for the welfare of the whole community and nation. The day of the party organs is past. Sensational papers appealing to popular passions cannot move thoughtful men—the men who make history. The only kind of newspaper that really has tremendous power in these days is the independent, reliable, disinterested journal of wide circulation, whose columns are known to stand always for the general good—for public honesty and a square deal, whatever happens. An excellent example of this sort of journalism is the Chicago Record-Herald. It has the enormous circulation that deservedly goes with the printing of all the news, but its power lies in its wise, conservative, independent, editorial policy, which is shaped with one sole end in view—the public good. Its news and critical columns show the same spirit. It is an ideal paper for the home.

BABY THEN TOOK HER NAP

Does Things to Unbreakable Doll That Inventor Had Believed to Be Impossible.

A New Jersey man and his wife went on a little vacation trip with some friends in an automobile last week. They left the baby at home with the maternal grandmother and the baby's uncle. All the while the parents were away the baby was uppermost in their thoughts. In one of the towns they passed through they saw a sign in a shop window advertising an "unbreakable" doll. They stopped the machine and hurried in to get one for the baby. It was just what they had been looking for, and it seemed a providential occasion to fill a long-felt want.

When they got home they gave the unbreakable doll to the baby. The baby is a little maiden not yet two years old, but already has a fondness for dolls. She has also a desire to destroy them that some of the friends of the family call abnormal. She has more ways of breaking up her dolls than have ever been noticed before. Therefore what would happen to the unbreakable toy was a matter that was watched with considerable interest not only by her immediate family but by those in the neighborhood who were informed of the experiment.

The baby did not have the doll in her arms more than two minutes before she tried her strength. At the first attempt to pull it apart she was unsuccessful, and appeared to be puzzled. After swinging her right arm to and fro and seeming to do a little shadow boxing, just to see if she was in good condition or whether the trouble was with the doll, she tackled it again. This time she did better, and the doll retired from the encounter with a fractured skull. This seemed to encourage the baby, and she hurled the doll with excellent air and all her force against the marble fireplace. The doll's neck was broken as the result. In half an hour, as the result of the baby's efforts, the unbreakable doll was reduced to pieces fit only for the scrap heap. Then the child lay down for her afternoon nap and went to sleep with a seraphic smile on her face. She had achieved what the inventor of the unbreakable doll had believed to be impossible. She did not know this, but she was well satisfied with the result.

Primary — Emelie Lenz of Klemme.

On the first day there were 61 pupils enrolled—20 in the high school room, 23 in the intermediate and 18 in the primary. The Times sincerely hopes that the teachers, pupils and patrons will all pull together for the very best interests of the school, in which all should take a pronounced interest.

GOMPERS' INTEREST

Said to Contemplate Coming to Investigate Injunction

SAYS IT'S "BACK TO SLAVERY"

Labor Leader Is Expected In City When Hearing On Injunction Which Stopped the Car Strike Is Held.

Des Moines.—President Samuel P. Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, is likely to be in Des Moines with his attorneys to fight the street car injunction which stopped the recent strike.

General Manager Harrigan, of the City Railway, says that the case would be fought out in the courts following fair week.

He is of the opinion that the injunction will not "hold water." But he admitted that it was a fine way to stop a strike.

"There is no one in the country that knows more about injunctions involving labor than does Samuel P. Gompers," said Superintendent W. E. Rolston of the City Railway, "'Back to Slavery," he said as soon as he read of the court's order. He grasped the deeper meaning of the proceedings immediately.

"If there is any possible chance for the injunction to stand it is probable that Gompers and all of the best lawyers in the employ of organized labor will be here to fight such a contingency. In case that happens Des Moines will be the scene of a hearing which will be of vast importance.

"If this injunction holds, it will affect labor and capital all over the nation. Railroads will be interested, and their millions of employes. If it does not stand the local situation will be just where it was before the trouble started.

"Newspapers all over the country are taking a great interest in this case. The Chicago Inter-Ocean has just printed an editorial on the case. It states that it will be a shame if the case is never tried out so that something may be learned of what authority was exercised by Judge De Graff in issuing such an injunction."

Escher Heads Iowa Beef Men.

Hon. Charles Escher, Jr., of Botna, counted one of the world's most extensive breeders of Aberdeen-Angus cattle, was chosen as the first president of Iowa Beef Producers' association. The association was formed by the beef cattle men at the Savery hotel last night. An attempt will be made to enroll 1,500 by the first of the year. The association has a state appropriation of $7,500 to spend in the development of the beef cattle industry of Iowa. The following o..cers were chosen:

President, Charles Escher, Jr., of Botna; vice-president, James Shade of Kingsley; membership secretary, A. R. Leffler of Bonaparte; recording secretary, George Burge of Mount Vernon; treasurer, C. H. Hetchner of Sheridan.

The board of directors was chosen by congressional districts, and is as follows: W. B. Seeley of Mount Pleasant, First district; Fred McCullough of Hartwick, Second district; H. J. Hess of Waterloo, Third district; B. McArthur of Mason City Fourth district; Howard Vaughn of Marion, Fifth district; Ralph Sherman of Grinnell, Sixth district; A. C. Sykes of Des Moines, president of the Corn Belt Meat Producers' Association, Seventh district; C. S. Huntley of Sheridan, Eighth district; B. W. Crossley of Council Bluffs, Ninth district; Charles Russell of Carroll, Tenth district; R. W. Cassady of Whiting, Eleventh district.

The department of animal husbandry at the State Agricultural college at Ames will co-operate with the new organization in making Iowa the beef cattle center of the world.

New System of Scholarships.

The state board of education has adopted a system of free scholarships good for four years tuition at the State Teachers' college, the State Agricultural college or the State university. The new system will be put into practice for the first time this year.

Two hundred and sixty-nine accredited high schools in the state will be entitled to elect a scholarship for a four years' course at any one of the three institutions. The person selected for the scholarship must stand at least among the one-fourth highest in the graduating class. For instance, if there is a class of twenty, then the candidate must be taken from among the five having the highest standings.

One hundred and thirty accredited schools have taken advantage of the new system and have distributed the scholarships.

DOCTORS MAKING CAMPAIGN

They Are Making Speeches All Over State Against Representative Charles W. Miller.

Des Moines.—Representative Chas. W. Miller, of Bremer county, is having a fight on his hands from an unexpected source. The source is Dr. J. W. Kime of Fort Dodge and Dr. Blocklinger of Dubuque, state lecturers on tuberculosis. They held their second meeting at Tripoli, at which they attacked the record of Miller, who, they claim, has blocked health legislation in the legislature and who has been at Washington in an effort to oust Dr. Wiley of pure food fame.

"Charlie Miller has delayed the campaign against tuberculosis in Iowa for two years," declared Dr. Kime. "Last winter, after Senator Frederick Larrabee had worked a bill through the senate providing for appropriations by county boards of supervisors of $500 for each county to help in the campaign against tuberculosis, Miller worked hard enough in the house to have it defeated."

Dr. Kime quotes Collier's Weekly in its declaration that Miller is a menace to the betterment of the public health. He quotes the result of Collier's investigation of Miller's record in the Iowa legislature.

That Miller's position in the legislature gives him prestige in the fight against Dr. Wiley is the belief of the two physicians. To oust him from the legislature will deprive him of much of this prestige and thus weaken his effectiveness.

About ten meetings in all will be held in Bremer county, closing with meetings in Waverly, Miller's home town. The usual tuberculosis lecture is first delivered and then addresses made attacking Miller's reputation. The two physicians are paying their own expenses incurred in making their invasion of Miller's territory.

Ft. Madison Hearing Sept. 5.

Attorney General Cosson will hold a preliminary hearing for investigation of the charges centering about conditions at the Fort Madison penitentiary on Tuesday September 5th. Those interested in the probe will be given the privilege of attending the hearing and testifying before the investigating committee. Following the first session of the committee, a second hearing will be held at Fort Madison. At the penitentiary it is expected that the most important evidence and testimony bearing on the case will be brought forth.

Gambling Must Stop.

Attorney General Cosson is after County Attorney Bock of Dickinson county for permitting gambling at Lake Okoboji. The attorney general ten days ago received a formal complaint from a responsible association at Lake Okoboji charging that gambling of all kinds, including slot machines, was being carried on at the various lake resorts.

Last week he hied himself up there. Sure enough he found gambling machines of all kinds operated in the hotel lobbies. Returning home he sent a sharp letter to the county attorney calling his attention to the condition and refreshing the aforesaid official's mind regarding the anti-gambling laws and also the removal laws.

C. A. Wilhelm Surrenders.

Charles A. Wilhelm of Salt Lake City, one of Maybray's prize jockeys, surrendered himself to Harry Hammond, deputy in charge of the United States' marshal's office in Des Moines. Wilhelm declared he was tired of dodging federal sleuths. He waived time for sentence and was given four months in the Polk county jail by Judge Smith McPherson of the federal court. A fine of $100 also was imposed.

Plenty of Teachers In Iowa.

Iowa will not suffer for lack of teachers this year, according to advices which are reaching the office of A. M. Deyoe, state superintendent of public instruction. He believes that there will be plenty of teachers for all the schools. Not only has the department issued more certificates this year than last, but the consolidation of several rural schools has increased the supply of teachers.

Morrow Has Guest.

Hon. Alvin Reeves, formerly state treasurer of California, was the guest of State Treasurer Morrow at the state house during the past week.

Train Butcher Caught In Act.

J. O. Mahaffey, a train butcher of Des Moines, went to Newton to attend the Jasper county fair and homecoming celebration. He returned in the custody of Deputy United States Marshal George Bidwell, who arrested him on the charge of bootlegging. Mahaffey evidently intended to treat his old friends in Newton with perfectly good whiskey because thirteen pint bottles were found in his suit case by Deputy Bidwell.

NOVEL BUT TOO ELABORATE

Device for Separating Whites and Yolks of Eggs Invented by an Oregon Man.

An ingenious but rather elaborate egg separator has been invented by an Oregon man. A concave plate with a lip on one side has a yolk-receiving socket and a revolving cup, mounted on a lever, fits down over this socket. By bringing the cup down the egg is cracked and the white flows out into the plate, while the yolk is retained in the socket. The cup also has a cleaning arm extending from it and by turning the cup this arm can be made to clean the plate, the contents of which can be poured through the lip into the cup or other receptacle waiting. Of course the yolk of the egg is not broken in this operation or it would run into the white. As it is, the yolk and shell are removed from the cup of the separator afterward. The experienced cook, however, would probably regard such an apparatus as more interesting than necessary.

Revolving Arm Cleans Plate.

CUCUMBER CUPS ARE GOOD

Salad-Like Dish That Is Attractive and Not at All Difficult to Make.

To make cucumber cups pare large, well-shaped cucumbers, cut each in four pieces crosswise, and cut a slice off the two ends so that they will stand cuplike; hollow out the centers, stand the cups on a few leaves of lettuce and fill with the tartar sauce, arranging the left-over bits of cucumber at the base.

To prepare the sauce set a bowl on some pieces of ice, and put into it a saltspoonful each of mustard and salt, with two of sugar, and a pinch of cayenne; drop in the yolks of two eggs, stir until mixed and begin whisking with a wire whisk while you add slowly a gill of olive oil, diluting, for fear it should become too thick, with three teaspoonfuls, gradually, of vinegar.

When ready to serve add a teaspoonful each of chopped capers, pickles, parsley, olives and shallots, and a few drops of Tarragon vinegar. Those who go in for changes may like this better than the ever-delicious plain French dressing, for tablespoonfuls of olive oil beaten with pepper and salt, and then, still beating, a tablespoonful of vinegar, drop by drop, on thinly sliced cucumber.

Lemon Pie.

Line pie plate with crust and bake. Make crust with two cups of flour and one-half cup of lard, a little water and teaspoon salt. Take double boiler and put in a cup of sugar with two rounding tablespoons flour. Mix well. Grate the rind of one lemon; add the juice and yolks of three eggs, with salt. Stir all together and add a cup of boiling water. Cook until thick. Beat the whites of the three eggs, add sugar and spread over the filling and brown in the oven.

Broiled Eggplant.

Remove the skin from a raw eggplant, cut it in slices a quarter of an inch thick. Lay them on a greased broiler, cook until done. Turn frequently to keep from burning. The same result may be achieved by laying the slices on a hot griddle such as you use for pancakes, greasing with a bit of suet. Draw griddle to back of stove where the eggplant will cook through slowly without burining. Serve on toast slightly moistened with hot water.

Melting Potatoes.

Wash, peel and boil in salted water about eight potatoes. When done drain and dry over the fire for a moment. Take each potato and press it firmly in a cloth so as to give it a round shape. Place in a buttered baking dish, pour over half a pint of stock, put a piece of butter on each potato, season with salt and pepper and bake in the oven until the potatoes have absorbed all the stock. Potatoes cooked in this way melt in the mouth, hence the name.

LIFE SAVED BY FRIEND'S ADVICE

About three years ago I suffered with appendicitis and after having an operation performed it left me with a severe case of kidney trouble. I was doctored by several physicians and getting no relief I took the advice of a friend and procured a bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. After taking the contents of the first bottle I felt greatly relieved and decided to continue it. After using the contents of three more dollar bottles, I experienced a complete cure.

I cannot recommend Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root too highly to anyone suffering from kidney or bladder trouble.

Yours very truly,

MACHINE THAT SHELLS CORN

Ears Fed Into Hopper and Kernels Are Separated Automatically—Lightens Farmers' Burdens.

Another device to lighten the farmer's labors has been invented by a Nebraska man. This is a machine for shelling corn, and, with it, one man can do the work of a dozen or more by simply feeding the ears into a hopper and turning a handle. Inside the body of the machine is a series of scrapers between which the cobs pass and these scrapers are so controlled that they will engage ears of any size. As the kernels are separated from the cobs they drop into a chute below the mechanism and are carried into bags waiting at the mouth of the chute. The cobs are ejected from the other side of the machine. As can readily be understood, this machine will save a great deal of labor, as the old method of shelling corn by hand was a tedious one at best, and was no gentle operation even for that type of citizen who has come to be known as "horny-handed."

Crop Should Be Cut When Grain Is Still In the Dough State—Haul In Before Heavy Rain.

Oats should be cut when the grain is in the dough stage. If cut when the grain is in the milk the grain will be light in weight, and if cut when full ripe there will be a loss of grain in handling, says a writer in the Baltimore American. We endeavor to cut when the milk is out of the grain. The crop is cut with self-binder, making small sheaves. Twelve sheaves are set to a shock, and as soon as the straw is cured and the grain hard and dry we haul in as quickly as possible. The crop should be hauled in before a heavy rain, as it is almost impossible to dry the bundles if the straw is once thoroughly wet. It is a hard task to take down the shocks, open out the bundles and spread out the sheaves to dry. Owing to the soft straw and chaff around the grain the moisture dries out slowly, even when the weather is hot and dry. Grain and labor are saved by getting the crop under cover before showers.

After the sheaves are hauled in the field should be raked. These rakings cut fine and mixed with a little mill-feed make an excellent summer feed for the horses. As soon as the oats are under cover the field should be cut over with the two-horse sulky cultivator or the steel disk. Run the cultivator both ways. This early working brings the wild seeds to the surface; it also prevents the soil from crusting over.

STACK HAY IN LARGE FIELDS

Modern Machine Shown Herewith Facilitates Work Considerably—Labor of Six Men.

On many western farms hay is stacked in large quantities, and the work is done by help hired by the day. Consequently it is necessary to push the stacking as fast as possible. The modern stacker shown in the cut with the sweep rake facilitates this work a great deal, says the Farm and Home. The hay is picked up by the sweep rake in bunches of about 1,000 pounds and delivered onto the stacker. The horse attached to the stacker pulls this onto the pile. Six men can put up hay at the rate of 25 tons per day with an apparatus such as this, using two sweep rakes, an ordinary rake and one mower.

Western Way of Stacking Hay.

GRASS OF GREAT IMPORTANCE

Great Problem of Maintaining Fertility of Soil for Future Crops Solved In One Way.

(By W. R. GARDNER.)

In attempting to farm without grasses the farmer is lifting without a lever; he is pulling a load with the weight on the hind wheels; he is cutting with a dull ax.

With grass as a basis grains, fruits, vegetables and meat, all the triumphs of farming are possible. The first thing that I would advise all those who contemplate buying a farm to look into, would be its capacity to grow clover and other nutritious grasses and learn what means would be available for fertilizing such meadows.

The grass can be converted into milk and products into beef, pork or mutton and returned to the land in the form of manure for the grain crops or you may sell the hay by the ton according to the facts of your particular locality.

I would not advise any one to think of buying a farm that did not have at least 20 acres of grass land that would produce at least two tons of hay per acre under favorable conditions.

The greatest thrift and profit made by farmers off their farms in ten of the leading agricultural states that I have visited during the past two years have been made by those who make dairying and the growing of live stock their chief reliance.

The great question of keeping up the fertility of the soil for future crops can be solved in only one way and that is by the growing of more clovers and grasses and feeding more live stock and returning all of the manure thus made to the fields.

GAS ENGINE FOR FARM WORK

Large Wheels of Carriage Make it Easily Managed, Even on Rough Ground—Shown In Africa.

At the recent agricultural exposition in Tunis, Africa, the makers of the Gnome motor for aeroplanes exhibited a six-horsepower motor designed for use on the farm, which, while not presenting any novel features of motor construction, attracted much attention on account of its unique mounting which closely resembles a gun carriage, says Popular Mechanics. The large wheels of this carriage make it easily managed even on rough ground, and two men can transport it from place to place. The motor is made for gasoline or oil consumption.

FARM NOTES

A full silo makes a fat pocket book.

The manure spreader is a profit collector.

The lead pencil is the most valuable tool on the farm.

Poorly shocked grain is a shocking display of poor farming.

You need a silo because with it you can make more money.

Manure and disking will renovate the worn out pasture or meadow.

Careful feeding is necessary to the economical use of the oat bin.

Corn is just right for the silo when it is a little too hard for roasting ears.

The most successful growers of alfalfa recommend sowing the seed in spring.

Fall rye will make good spring pasture at a time when pasture will be greatly needed.

You can usually tell a good farmer by the orderly appearance of his barn floor and granary.

It is best to manure and plow the garden as soon as the growing season is over and the crops harvested.

If you watch the thistles carefully and do not let them go to seed for two or three years you will rejoice in their absence.

A one inch pipe from the tank on the windmill to the house and another to the barn with 50 feet of garden hose attached to each is a great deal cheaper than a fire.

Plan to plant crops that live from year to year, like asparagus, rhubarb, strawberries and the like, at one end, so that they will not interfere when you cultivate the annual vegetables.

Fill up two or three water tubs and leave them handy to the barn door for quick use in case of fire. Keep them well covered or they will make good breeding places for mosquitoes.

Woman's Danger Periods Made Safe

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Here is proof:

Natick, Mass.,—"I cannot express what I went through during the Change of Life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold. I had creepy sensations and could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I had a tumor.

"I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it has worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Nathan B. Greaton, 51 No. Main St., Natick, Mass.

ANOTHER SIMILAR CASE.

Cornwallville, N. Y.—"I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time for Change of Life, nervousness, and a fibroid growth.

"Two doctors advised me to go to the hospital, but one day while I was away visiting, I met a woman who told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and I know it helped me wonderfully. I am very thankful that I was told to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Wm. Boughton, Cornwallville, N. Y., Greene Co.

The makers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have thousands of such letters as those above—they tell the truth, else they could not have been obtained for love or money. This medicine is no stranger—it has stood the test for years.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

BUSTER BROWN AND TIGE

Buster Brown and his celebrated dog Tige arrived in Klemme as promised last Monday afternoon. There was a good crowd in town to greet him when he gave his lecture and exhibition at four o'clock on a raised platform in front of the Wellemeyer Department Store.

Buster first visited each room of our school and gave a short talk on education. His lecture on the street was of course primarily to advertise the products of the Brown Shoe Co., of St. Louis, Mo., but his talk was quite interesting, especially to the children. He put Tige through some creditable stunts and distributed some nice souvenirs among the children.

While Buster is small, he is as he says, "no spring chicken," being nearly 52 years old and measuring only 41 inches in height. He is a married man and his wife is considerably smaller than himself. She is in charge of their general merchandise business in a Kansas town. Buster is bright and witty and easily holds the attention of his audience. He has traveled extensively in all parts of the globe. We predict that the children will not soon forget the visit of Buster and Tige to Klemme.

For bowel complaints in children always give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil. It is certain to effect a cure and when reduced with water and sweetened is pleasant to take. No physician can prescribe a better remedy. For sale by all dealers.

MISSED A SESSION

Prison Investigators Quietly Stole March on Warden Sanders

HAVE TAKEN MUCH EVIDENCE

On Friday Night After the Warden Had Gone to Bed, Committee Slipped Back and Held An Extra Session.

Des Moines, Sept. 11.—After Warden J. C. Sanders had locked the outer gates of the Fort Madison penitentiary behind the members of the prison probe commission Friday night and hiked off to bed, the commission went back to the prison and did a line of investigating unbeknown to the warden.

Attorney General George Cosson told about his night prowling with Parley Sheldon of Ames and Judge M. A. Roberts of Ottumwa, the other two members of the commission, on his return to Des Moines, yesterday.

The commission put in long days Friday and Saturday at the prison. Judge Roberts has business that will prevent the continuance of the hearing this week. The commission probably will reconvene at Fort Madison a week from today.

At Fort Madison the investigators went through all of the work rooms, looked into every branch of the prison work and prison conditions. A great many convicts were examined. All of the testimony was taken verbatim by C. L. Dahlberg of Des Moines.

David Brant of Iowa City, editor of the Iowa City Republican, whose charges brought on the present investigation regarding the management of the prison and the methods of the board of control, arrived at Fort Madison on the same boat with the members of the commission, Friday morning.

Neither he, nor anyone else, was permitted to hear the evidence given at Fort Madison until the commission adjourned Saturday night. He was not called as a witness. It is possible that the editor will be called when the commission reconvenes, but Attorney General Cosson did not say yesterday whether he would be called.

The night session in the prison, after the warden thought the commission had finished for the day, was occupied largely with visits with prisoners in the cell houses, according to Mr. Cosson.

CONVICTED OF MANSLAUGHTER

Sensational Trial Comes To Close—Attracts Much Interest—Will Go To Higher Court.

Keosauqua, Sept. 11.—The Warner manslaughter case terminated when the jury returned a verdict, finding the man guilty as charged. It is not thought that anything near the maximum penalty will be given as the circumstances surrounding the case point to accidental death.

Warner attempted to hit a nail head in a fence, so he avers, not noticing that Runyon was directly below, and as he shot the victim raised his head and received the bullet in the forehead, death resulting several hours later. The boys were friends and no malice was charged. The case has created considerable feeling in the county, owing to the prominence of the families involved.

Prouty Estate Divided.

Des Moines, Sept. 11.—Judge Hewitt of the probate court has signed an order authorizing W. R. Prouty, executor of the will of the late C. C. Prouty, to divide the property between the heirs. Cheney R. Prouty, only son of the deceased, will get $163,754.77 of the $245,632.16 estate. The remainder, or $81,877.39, goes to Mrs. Bell O. Prouty, widow of the deceased.

Big Fire at Garrison.

Vinton, Sept. 11.—Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the business portion of Garrison, seven miles west of here, at an early hour this morning, with a total loss of twenty-six buildings and their contents, nineteen of which were business buildings, amounting to approximately $100,000.

Mishap In Burglar Chase.

Glenwood, Sept. 11.—While chasing a man charged with burglarizing Miller & Phipps' store, the auto driven by Arthur Dice and carrying Deputy Sheriff Al Edwards and a number of bloodhounds went off a bridge at high speed near Pacific Junction, fell twenty feet into Pony creek.

CURED BABY BOY OF SEVERE ECZEMA

An Illinois Mother's Case.

No one can tell the torture of soul Mrs. F. Cox, of Chicago, went through when her little boy was suffering from Eczema. She tried everything without success until she finally hit upon Resinol.

The following is what she says: "I cannot speak too highly of Resinol Ointment and Soap. They cured my baby boy of Eczema. He had a very severe case. Numerous other remedies had been tried and failed to do any good. I would not be without them in the house."

The first application will relieve the itching and irritation in skin diseases, and stop the pain in burns or scalds. Chafing, Sunburn, Poison Ivy eruptions are often cured by an overnight application.

Resinol preparations are sold at all drug stores.

Mrs. Browning.

Apropos of the jubilee of the death of Mrs. Browning, it is not generally known that the event occasioned one of the tenderest things her husband ever wrote. He tended her alone the night before she died, and wrote of her passing in a letter of infinite pathos addressed to their mutual friend, Mrs. Blagdon: "Then came what my heart will keep till I see her again, and longer—the most perfect expression of her love to me within my knowledge of her. Always smiling and with a face like a girl's; and in a few minutes she died in my arms, her head on my cheek. . . . There was no lingering or acute pain, nor consciousness of separation. God took her to himself as you would lift a sleeping child from a dark, uneasy bed into your arms and the light."

GREW STEADILY WORSE.

Chicago Woman Experiences Terrible Suffering from Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Emma Kunze, 1649 N. Halsted St., Chicago, Ill., says: "A crick took me in my back and the pain was so terrible I could not straighten. I was confined to bed and could not turn without assistance. I grew enough better to sit up but began to suffer from rheumatic pains, so bad I often cried out. Kidneys were in dreadful condition and secretions suppressed. Finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured. My health is now fine and my kidneys act perfectly."

RST GOLDEN WEDDING IN IOWA GUBERNATORIAL HISTORY

t will not be possible for any of wa's governors who have served rious to this time to celebrate a den wedding for some years to me. Gov. and Mrs. Cummins et wait thirteen years or until 4 to observe theirs. Gov. and r. Frank D. Jackson and Gov. and n. Leslie M. Shaw will wait sixn years or until 1927. Both were married the same year—1877. Gov. and Mrs. Carroll celebrate their silver wedding this year, and they will wait another twenty-five years to be in the golden wedding class. Gov. and Mrs. Garst are mere spring chickens, and will not celebrate their golden wedding for twenty-eight years or until 1939. They were married in 1889.

William Larrabee and Ann M. Appleman were married on Iowa soil at Clermont, September 12, 1861. While both were born at Ledyard, Connecticut, they came to Clermont when quite young, and have been pleased to enjoy their home life in the beautiful hills of Fayette County. Their great brick residence, built thirty-five years ago, stands on the hilltop overlooking the Turkey river valley.

If the state has an architecture that is distinctly Iowan it is represented in the Larrabee residence. It was not brought from New England because there is little of the colonial in its arrangements. It is an eastern and southern composition, yet strictly all western. It was planned by Gov. and Mrs. Larrabee according to their own ideas of what a farm house ought to be. It was built for the family and the friends of the family have enjoyed it with them. While nearly all the sons and daughters have places of abode in other localities, there is but one home for them, and that is "Montauk," the Larrabee home at Clermont.

All holidays are celebrated at home, and the children return there to celebrate their parents' and their own birthdays and wedding anniversaries. The residence was built large enough to house the entire family and its increase during the lives of the parents. While the family of grandchildren has grown, there has never been a time when there was lack of room for the friends who have come that way upon the occasion of a family reunion.

Gov. and Mrs. Larrabee are the true lives representing Dr. Gunsaulus' description of a genuine aristocracy. They are plain people, and are enemies of anything that is tinctured with humbuggery or the unnatural.

Both are proud of their ancestry, because on both sides of both houses there were privates, non-commissioned officers and officers in the Revolutionary war, who fought for liberty. The Larrabee and the Appleman stock has not run out, nor is it likely to run out for generations to come. While they take a pride in this ancestry, they do not exploit it. There are no familytrees on the walls, nor are there any evidences in the home that tells of the prominence in New England of the forefathers. Their thoughts are entirely on the future and the bettering of humanity.

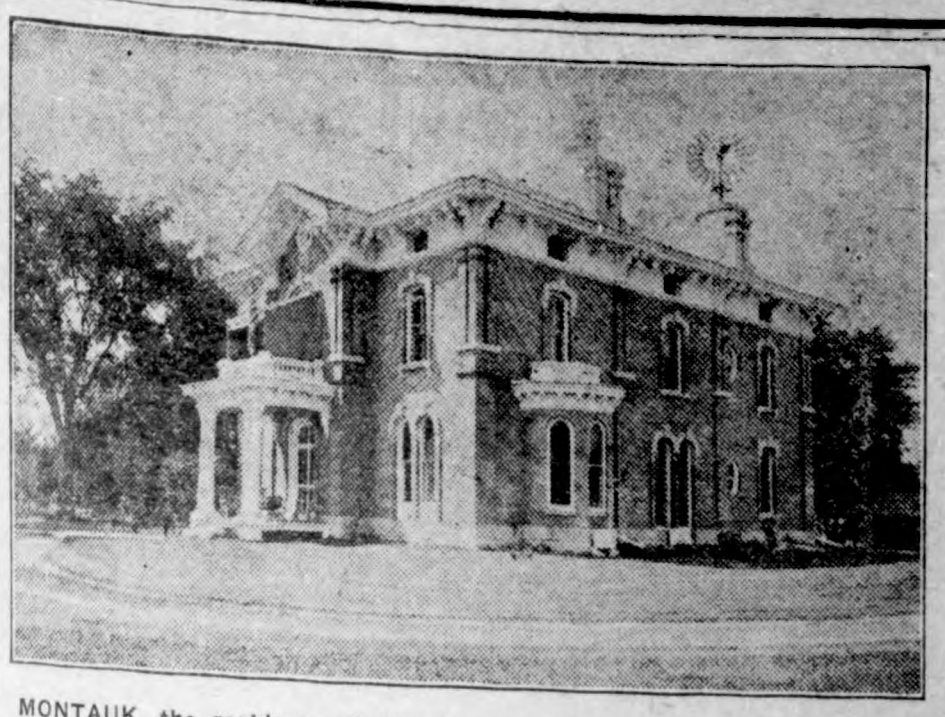
In early life, Gov. and Mrs. Larrabee wisely provided for the future. They made their way—he as a miller, using the water power from the Turkey river. He made flour and shipped it to other parts of the country, long before a railroad reached the state. Mrs. Larrabee was the homekeeper, and she brought up her family to become homekeepers. They prospered, but they never forgot their home and its duties, the community, state and nation. They have been generous with their means, placing it where the plain people would find enjoyment through their magnanimity. They have not built castles nor endowed great universities. They have helped the smaller colleges and assisted deserving young people to secure an education. They have placed organs and pianos in churches and in state institutions where the unfortunates had been deprived of the civilizing influences of music. Their bequests have not been heralded from the housetops, nor through the press. They have given for the love of giving. In the little town of Clermont, of about five hundred people, two pipe organs have been installed. One of these is in the chapel of the Union Sunday school, where Mrs. Larrabee has presided as superintendent for over a quarter of a century. In the absence of the regular organist, Mrs. Larrabee plays the instrument herself and leads the singing. Gov. Larrabee takes his turn at teaching the Bible class and when necessary sings tenor in the Sunday school quartette. They are a part of the community.

The people of Iowa rejoice with the grand man and the grand lady who now reach the glorious period of their married life, the time when they celebrate their golden wedding.

At this time when there is a great movement looking towards a sane Christmas throughout the country, the officers of the national association might receive valuable information from the methods employed at Clermont. Here Christmas is observed in the most elaborate simplicity and has been for many years.

MRS. WILLIAM LARRABEE

e of Iowa's former governor. Mrs. Larrabee has been superintendent of the Clermont Union Sunday school for over a quarter of a century.



MONTAUK, the residence of Governor and Mrs. Larrabee, at Clermont, Iowa. House was built thirty-five years ago, of Iowa brick.

There is probably not another place in the west where so much is made of the great holiday and where the "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men" is the sublime sentiment of an entire community. The Union Sunday school is always the scene of a Christmas festival where the old and young mingle in a happy peace of mind which an observance of the Christmas time brings. A great evergreen from the Larrabee pine woods is decorated in every branch and is loaded with a present for everybody. These presents are inexpensive but they carry a message of cheer and good fellowship. While there are many exchanges of presents and many furnished by teachers to the scholars the larger number are furnished by Mrs. Larrabee who carefully provides for everyone on the roll. The event is never complete unless the three Larrabee boys receive their regulation presents from town friends who have for many years provided a rag elephant for Charles, a red necktie for Frederic and a package of chewing gum for William. Charles and William have boys of their own they can transfer their gifts to, but Frederic is compelled to wear his necktie at once or as a penalty meet one of the young ladies of the village under the mistletoe. As the bashful bachelor of the family the red necktie always looks good to him.

But the real Christmas celebration at Clermont takes place at "Montauk" early Christmas morning. Here in the Larrabee home the living room is kept securely locked until all are ready for the event. When the doors are opened the tree in all its splendor is presented and there is a rush made to secure what is intended for them. No one receives greater enjoyment from the hunt than does Gov. Larrabee, who gets down on his knees and searches for the things intended for the little ones, but he is as demonstrative as any when he finds an article for himself. Some times he finds a horn on which is marked "Railroad regulation," or a drum with a card which reads "Down with the liquor traffic." He blows the horn and beats the drum until the perpetrators of the gift fights for control of the instrument of torture. Every one in the Larrabee home puts presents under the tree for every other member. There is a law, however, which is rigidly enforced, that no article shall cost to exceed twenty-five cents. The ingenuity of the Larrabee blood is tested to the extreme to keep within the law, and yet give presents which will be out of the ordinary. The ladies of the household have interpreted this rule to mean that the material which goes into a present shall not cost to exceed the quarter specified. Wonderful little novelties are produced, and, in every instance, they are useful affairs, "just the thing I have always wanted, but did not know how to get one." The boys go shopping, and, following out the Larrabee habit of buying in quantities and taking the cash discount, are able to secure suitable gifts which do not exceed the limit "per article." These may be shoe brushes, pencil sharpeners, rubber dating stamps, neckties, handkerchiefs, collar buttons, shoe strings, combs, tooth brushes and soap. There is never any waste to such presents, because all such articles are the handiest things about the house, and as a general rule the hardest to find. During the year the bargain counters are inspected every place the members of the family go, and when something attractive appears it is purchased and laid aside for Christmas. Gov. and Mrs. Larrabee, who passed the quarter law, and safeguarded it so that it could not be repealed or amended, have interpreted it to apply to the children only, and that their own gifts will not be limited to the twenty-five cents.

The Christmas cheer is not limited to the 25th of December at the Larrabee home. It lasts the year round and has its climax at Christmas time. A more sublime hospitality can not be found any place on earth than in the Larrabee home.

DEATH BEFORE 100 YEARS IS SUICIDE

Prof. Munyon Says Ignorance of Laws of Health Explains Early End of Life.

NOTED SCIENTIST HAS ENCOURAGING WORD FOR DESPONDENT MEN AND WOMEN

"Death before 100 years of age has been reached is nothing more or less than slow suicide. A man (or woman) who dies at an earlier age is simply ignorant of the laws of health."

Such was the original and rather startling statement made by Professor James M. Munyon, the famous Philadelphia health authority, who is establishing health headquarters in all the large cities of the world for the purpose of getting in direct touch with his thousands of converts.

Professor Munyon is a living embodiment of the cheerful creed he preaches. Virile, well poised, active and energetic, he looks as though he would easily attain the century age limit which he declares is the normal one. He said:

"I want the people of the world to know my opinions on the subject of health, which are the fruit of a life-time devoted to healing the sick, people of America. There isn't a building in this city big enough to house the people in this State alone who have found health through my methods. Before I get through there won't be a building big enough to house my cured patients in this city alone.

"I want, most of all, to talk to the sick people—the invalids, the discouraged ones, the victims of nerve-wearing, body-racking diseases and ailments—for these are the ones to whom the message of hope which I bear will bring the greatest blessing.

"I want to talk to the rheumatics, the sufferers from stomach trouble, the ones afflicted with that noxious disease, catarrh. I want to tell my story to the women who have become chronic invalids as a result of nervous troubles. I want to talk to the men who are 'all run down,' whose health has been broken by overwork, improper diet, late hours and other causes, and who feel the creeping clutch of serious, chronic illness.

"To these people I bring a story of hope. I can give them a promise of better things. I want to astonish them by showing the record of cures performed through my new system of treatment.

"I have taken the best of the ideas from all schools and embodied them in a new system of treatments individually adapted to each particular case. I have no 'cure alls,' but my present method of attacking disease is the very best thought of modern science. The success which I have had with these treatments in this city and all over America proves its efficacy. Old methods must give away to new medical science moves. I know what my remedies are doing for humanity everywhere. I know what they will do for the people of this city. Let me prove my statements—that's all I ask."

The continuous stream of callers and mail that comes to Professor James M. Munyon at his laboratories, Fifty-third and Jefferson streets, Philadelphia, Pa., keeps Dr. Munyon and his enormous corps of expert physicians busy.

Professor Munyon makes no charge for consultation or medical advice; not a penny to pay. Address Prof. J. M. Munyon, Munyon's Laboratories, Fifty-third and Jefferson streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE HAPPY MAN.

"Susie's getting married."
"Who's the happy man?"
"Her father."

"WHY SHOULD I USE CUTICURA SOAP?

"There is nothing the matter with my skin, and I thought Cuticura Soap was only for skin troubles." True, it is for skin troubles, but its great mission is to prevent skin troubles. For more than a generation its delicate emollient and prophylactic properties have rendered it the standard for this purpose, while its extreme purity and refreshing fragrance give to it all the advantages of the best of toilet soaps. It is also invaluable in keeping the hands soft and white, the hair live and glossy, and the scalp free from dandruff and irritation.

While its first cost is a few cents more than that of ordinary toilet soaps, it is prepared with such care and of such materials, that it wears to a wafer, often outlasting several cakes of other soap, and making its use, in practice, most economical. Cuticura Soap is sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, but the truth of these claims may be demonstrated without cost by sending to "Cuticura," Dept. 23 L, Boston, for a liberal sample cake, together with a thirty-two page book on the skin and hair.

The Recoil.

Tobacconist—You learned long ago how to pack a barrel of apples, didn't you, Uncle John?

Horticulturist—Sure thing, Billy; same as you packed that box of cigars I bought of you the other day—all the nice ones in the top row.

Dr. Agler reports favorably on the typhoid fever cases, and all are doing as well as can be expected.

Meservey crossed bats with Thornton last Friday, and was victorious with a 3 to 13 score. At Swaledale Monday they were not so lucky. The score was 6 to 3 in favor of Swaledale.

Gilbert Smith, residing about four miles northeast of Meservey, was kicked in the stomach by a colt Tuesday. The blow rendered him unconscious for a time, but no serious results are looked for.

The two large steel tanks for the water works have arrived from Decatur, Ill. Excavating has begun for the pump house and the work of installing the system will be pushed as fast as possible. All the material is expected to arrive within the next two weeks. Laying the mains and setting the hydrants will probably be commenced next week. With the extra building caused by the fire, and all, Meservey will be a busy place from now until snow flies.

Digestion and Assimilation

It is not the quantity of food taken but the amount digested and assimilated that gives strength and vitality to the system. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets invigorate the stomach and liver and enable them to perform their functions naturally. For sale by all dealers.

GOODELL

From the Globe:

Miss Laura Christie was at Garner last Monday and Tuesday.

Seymour Jennison is attending business college at Waterloo.

"I have a world of confidence in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for I have used it with perfect success," writes Mrs. M. I. Basford, Poolesville, Md. For sale by all dealers.

KANAWHA

From the Record:

There is another rumor this week that the Iowa Central will resume the old passenger run on this branch, commencing Monday, but we are not able to get official verification of the report.

Ole Fosen will build a new barn for Henry Kamp and also one on the Phil Hutchinson place. He will also do the work on Axel Johnson's addition to house, northeast of town.

Geo. Baldridge came up from Belmond last week to be in the field for the opening day of the prairie chicken shooting on Sept. 1st. The game is more plenty than for a number of years, but a hunter is in no danger of getting a surplus.

A Kanawha rural letter carrier is now one of the state officers of the letter carriers association. At the meeting in Des Moines last week John P. Larson, of route three, was elected to that position, which also makes him a member of the executive board of which there are seven members.

As usually treated, a sprained ankle will disable a man three or four weeks but by applying Chamberlain's Liniment freely as soon as the injury is received, and observing the directions with each bottle, a cure can be effected in from two to four days. For sale by all dealers.

Why Women Prefer It

When the newsboy comes through the train with the Chicago papers, watch the married couple across the aisle. If a man is a well-regulated husband he will ask his wife which paper she prefers, and then you may lay odds that the one chosen will be the Record-Herald. There is no mystery about it. The man knows that he will find all the news in the Record-Herald, to be sure, but the woman knows it is the only paper that also gives adequate attention to the things in which women are specially interested. In every daily issue she can find a bill of fare for the day's three meals, reliable society news, good book reviews, bright verses and jokes without vulgarity, a cartoon that anybody can enjoy and a fair share of the news of the day relating to women. Every Monday there is "Martha's Management," a very helpful column of culinary topics. In the Sunday edition a whole section is devoted to women, including Marion Harland's famous page, the latest fashions, Mary O'Connor Newell's breezy articles and interviews, Dame Curtsey's "Novelties in Entertainment," and many special articles of timely interest. Then there is the Sunday Magazine of the Record-Herald, a real magazine, full of good love stories and beautiful pictures. Do you wonder that women prefer the Record-Herold?

Emil Lau had his twenty-second birthday last Tuesday and in the evening he was the victim of a surprise party to which a number of his young friends were invited. A very fine time, is the verdict of all who were present.

By mistake last week in advertising the Sunday School Convention next Sunday, mention was made that all bring baskets and have a basket dinner. The church people of Klemme want their friends from the country to come to the meetings and take dinner with them at their homes.

The First National Bank statement is published in today's Times, to which your attention is directed. The man that has been in swimming and had his shirt-tail tied in about seventeen knots has no longing for the wild free life of the savage, nor their costume of goose-pimples and a straw hat; he knows what he wants–HE WANTS HIS SHIRT.

Now you may not want your shirt, but it's a cinch that when you drive ten or fifteen miles across the country to see a County Fair you want to see a LIVE FAIR. A Live Fair with "somethin' doin'" every minute is what the Hancock County Fair officials propose to pull off this memorable year of 1911. They have arranged one of the most interesting Race and Sport programs of any County Fair in this part of Iowa.

There will be plenty of exhibits of all kinds, the Floral Hall will be taxed to its limit, it now looks as if every stall and pen in the stock barns would be filled.

The Rumely Mfg. Co. and the Hart-Parr Company will both be on the Fair Grounds and give daily plowing exhibitions with their "Oil Pull" gasoline engines and gang plows.

The tree attractions, consisting of Roman Chariot races, four thoroughbred running horses to a team; the Roman standing races, Cowboy and Cowgirl races "Jerry" the trick mule, old "Jupiter" the champion high jump horse, the team of educated oxen and a dozen of other stunts pulled off by Miss Blanche McKinney and her troupe on the race track in front of the grand stand every day will be worth more than the price of admission to the Fair. The base ball games, the 20th and 21st, between the Estherville team and the famous colored team, the "Tennessee Rats," for the championship of Northern Iowa will be so fast that it will make the average base ball fan dizzy.

Two merry-go-rounds have signed up contracts and paid over their money, so the children will be entertained to their heart's delight.

Farmers, take a couple of days off and bring in your family and let them enjoy seeing a LIVE FAIR and have a visit with the EIGHT or NINE thousand other people who will be here for the FUN to be had. If you don't you surely will hate yourself for the next five years. And don't forget that Ex-Senator Col. Lafe Young, of Des Moines, will be on hand Sept. 21st to deliver one of his usual pleasing addresses.

Life Membership Tickets, admitting wife and all children under 21 years, can be bought at any bank in Britt, or at the gate for $10. Family tickets, good for yourself and family for the three days only cost you $1.50. Single admission 35c.

Remember the dates— Sept. 19, 20 and 21.

Same old place—BRITT. 1w

Mr. and Mrs. Slight and Mrs. Ely, of Belmond, came up last Thursday for a visit at the Dr. Missman home.

The Courtship of Miles Standish

With Illustrations by Howard Chandler Christy

(Copyright, The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

Miles Standish

In the Old Colony days, in Plymouth, the land of the Pilgrims,
To and fro in a room of his simple and primitive dwelling,
Clad in doublet and hose, and boots of Cordovan leather,
Strode, with a martial air, Miles Standish, the Puritan Captain.
Buried in thought he seemed, with his hands behind him, and pausing
Ever and anon to behold his glittering weapons of warfare,
Hanging in shining array along the walls of the chamber—
Cutlass and corselet of steel, and his trusty sword of Damascus,
Curved at the point and inscribed with its mystical Arabic sentence,
While underneath, in a corner, were fowling-piece, musket, and matchlock.
Short of stature he was, but strongly built and athletic,
Broad in the shoulders, deep-chested, with muscles and sinews of iron;
Brown as a nut was his face, but his russet beard was already Flaked with patches of snow, as hedges sometimes in November.
Near him was seated John Alden, his friend and household companion,
Writing with diligent speed at a table of pine by the window;
Fair-haired, azure-eyed, with delicate Saxon complexion,
Having the dew of youth, and the beauty thereof, as the captives
Whom Saint Gregory saw, and exclaimed, "Not Angles, but Angels."
Youngest of all was he of the men who came in the Mayflower.

Suddenly breaking the silence, the diligent scribe interrupting,
Spake, in the pride of his heart, Miles Standish, the Captain of Plymouth.
"Look at these arms," he said, "the warlike weapons that hang here
Burnished and bright and clean, as if for parade or inspection!
This is the sword of Damascus I fought with in Flanders; this breastplate,
Well I remember the day! once saved my life in a skirmish;
Here in front you can see the very dint of the bullet
Fired point-blank at my heart by a Spanish arcabucero.
Had it not been of sheer steel, the forgotten bones of Miles Standish
Would at this moment be mold, in their grave in the Flemish morasses."
Thereupon answered John Alden, but looked not up from his writing:
"Truly the breath of the Lord hath slackened the speed of the bullet;
He in his mercy preserved you, to be our shield and our weapon!"
Still the Captain continued, unheeding the words of the stripling:
"See, how bright they are burnished, as if in an arsenal hanging;
That is because I have done it myself, and not left it to others.
Serve yourself, would you be well served, is an excellent adage;
So I take care of my arms, as you of your pens and your inkhorn.
Then, too, there are my soldiers, my great invincible army,
Twelve men, all equipped, having each his rest and his matchlock,
Eighteen shilling a month, together with diet and pillage,
And, like Caesar, I know the name of each of my soldiers!"
This he said with a smile, that danced in his eyes, as the sunbeams
Dance on the waves of the sea, and vanish again in a moment.
Alden laughed as he wrote, and still the Captain continued:
"Look! you can see from this window my brazen howitzer planted
High on the roof of the church, a preacher who speaks to the purpose,
Steady, straightforward, and strong, with irresistible logic,
Orthodox, flashing conviction right into the hearts of the heathen.
Now we are ready, I think, for any assault of the Indians;
Let them come, if they like, and the sooner they try it the better—
Let them come, if they like, be it sagamore, sachem, or powwow,
Aspinet, Samoset, Corbitant, Squanto, or Tokamahamon!"

Long at the window he stood, and wistfully gazed on the landscape,
Washed with a cold gray mist, the vapory breath of the east wind,
Forest and meadow and hill, and the steel-blue rim of the ocean,
Lying silent and sad, in the afternoon shadows and sunshine.
Over his countenance flitted a shadow like those on the landscape,
Gloom intermingled with light; and his voice was subdued with emotion,
Tenderness, pity, regret, as after a pause he proceeded:
"Yonder there, on the hill by the sea, lies buried Rose Standish;
Beautiful rose of love, that bloomed for me by the wayside!
She was the first to die of all who came in the Mayflower!
Green above her is growing the field of wheat we have sown there,
Better to hide from the Indian scouts the graves of our people,
Lest they should count them and see how many already have perished!"
Sadly his face he averted, and strode up and down, and was thoughtful.

Fixed to the opposite wall was a shelf of books, and among them
Prominent three, distinguished alike for bulk and for binding;
Bariffe's Artillery Guide, and the Commentaries of Caesar,
Out of the Latin translated by Arthur Goldinge of London,
And, as if guarded by these, between them was standing the Bible.
Musing a moment before them, Miles Standish paused, as if doubtful
Which of the three he should choose for his consolation and comfort,
Whether the wars of the Hebrews, the famous campaigns of the Romans,
Or the Artillery practice, designed for belligerent Christians.

The Puritan Maiden, Priscilla.

Finally down from its shelf he dragged the ponderous Roman,
Seated himself at the window, and opened the book, and in silence
Turned o'er the well-worn leaves, where thumb-marks thick on the margin,
Like the trample of feet, proclaimed the battle was hottest.
Nothing was heard in the room but the hurrying pen of the stripling,
Busily writing epistles important, to go by the Mayflower,
Ready to sail on the morrow, or next day at latest, God willing!
Homeward bound with the tidings of all that terrible winter,
Letters written by Alden, and full of the name of Priscilla,
Full of the name and the fame of the Puritan maiden Priscilla!

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"Look at These Arms," He Said.

Optimistic.

Some time ago there was a flood in British Columbia. An old fellow who had lost nearly everything he possessed was sitting on the roof of his house as it floated along, when a boat approached.

"Hello, Jim."

"Hello, Bill."

"Are your fowls all washed away, Jim?"

"Yes, but the ducks can swim," replied the old man.

"Apple trees gone?"

"Well, they said the crop would be a failure, anyhow."

"I see the flood's away above your windows."

"That's all right, Bill. Them winders needed washin', anyhow."—Housekeeper.

His Sense of Humor.

Mrs. Youngwedd had been taking cooking lessons through a correspondence course.

Although there was a marked improvement in the culinary department of the Youngwedd homestead, the husband lost no opportunity for poking fun at his wife's cooking. One morning, just as he was leaving for business, she asked:

"My dear, what would you like for dinner this evening?"

"Well," he replied, smiling, "we'll have lesson 4 with exception 'c,' a little of lesson 9, and perhaps the postscript of lesson 12 for dessert."—Woman's Home Companion.

Physical Limitations.

There was a very stupid play presented early in the New York season, an "adaptation" it was called by the author. Even the best-natured critics went away in disgust. One newspaper representative turned to another and said: "If this jumble had been presented on the other side of the water it would have been hissed. As there were a lot of foreign visitors present I wonder that it was not."

"It really is a wonder," was the other's reply. "I would like to have hissed myself, but—you can't yawn and hiss at the same time."—Metropolitan Magazine.

IN THE ITALIAN WAY

HOW THE PEOPLE OF SUNNY LAND COOK CHICKEN.

Recipes for Italian Tripe, for a Risotti, and for a Delicious Fruit Dish Designed for Holiday Feasts.

Chicken Italian.—One large fricassee chicken, cut up in pieces as for fricassee. Take two good sized onions and chop fine and fry in olive oil until about done. While onions are frying add one-fourth teaspoon each of powdered cinnamon, nutmeg and allspice. Add chicken and let the pieces sear a little in the olive oil, then add some clear soup stock boiling hot, or hot water will do. Some Italian conserve, about tablespoon diluted in some of the stock, and a cup of dried Italian mushrooms previously soaked in hot water. Let all cook slowly about one hour, then add some parsley and garlic chopped fine and about two or three French carrots cut in fine strips. Cook slowly again until chicken and mushrooms are tender. Serve on deep platter. Do not have too much gravy. In using Italian conserve be careful about putting in salt, as the conserve is already salted.

Italian Tripe.—Take the tripe and cut into strips about two and a half inches long. Boil in salted water about one minute, drain and put on to boil in fresh water. Let come to boiling point, drain and once again put on in clean, fresh water. Take onions (as many as needed for the amount of tripe), chop fine and fry in olive oil to a golden brown. While onions are frying add half teaspoon each of powdered cinnamon and nutmeg, add to the tripe. Add a can of strained tomatoes and some clear soup stock, some garlic and parsley and the top green part of one stalk of celery chopped very fine. Take half tin of sardines and mash fine and add to the tripe. Let all cook slowly until tripe is tender. Salt and pepper to taste.

Italian Dish for the Holidays.—Take large ripe peaches and remove the stone without cutting the peach in two pieces, place them in bake pan with some melted butter in bottom. Take some macaroons and mash them up in good port wine into a thick paste. Take almonds, blanch them and chop very fine and add to macaroon paste. Fill up the peaches with this paste, put a good sized piece of butter on top and bake in medium oven until peaches are soft. Baste frequently with the melted butter. These are delicious. Serve hot.

An Italian Risotti.—Wash about half a dozen large potatoes and boil until done with their skins on. Remove skins and mash them, adding as much flour as the moisture of the potatoes will take up. Roll out on bake board about half an inch thick and cut in squares about inch square. With the thumb press in the center and roll toward edge; they will form into shapes like little shells. Let them dry for about fifteen minutes, then put on to boil by dropping them into boiling salted water. Boil for about three-quarters hour. Drain and put in large bowl, add a good sized slice of butter, some thick strained tomatoes and a cup of grated Parmesan cheese. Mix all together and serve at once.

Apples and Red Jelly.

Take six good-sized apples and core them. Put two cloves into each apple and as much granulated sugar as it will hold. Place them in a baking pan, without touching, and add a cup of water, or more, as you think fit. Look at them often and try to keep them whole. When done, take out carefully and place in dish. Strain the sirup they were cooked in and put in another saucepan, with a little gelatine (dissolved) and a few drops of red coloring. Boil till quite clear and then put around apples. Set away to cool till supper time.

Glass Tops.

Clever housekeepers are beginning to discover that the most practical covers for dressing tables and library writing tables are plain glass sheets.

Lace and embroidered doilies and runners show under them as well as if on the top, and the glass protects them and keeps them clean indefinitely.

These glass tops are not expensive and they safeguard the handsome oak or mahogany table and dainty linens from the careless guests, who are so apt to lay fruit and burnt matches about wherever they happen to be.

Deviled Whitebait.

Wash the whitebait thoroughly and drain on a soft cloth. Dip them in milk, then roll in flour and fry, about a half-cupful at a time, in deep, smoking hot fat. Drain on soft paper and sprinkle with cayenne, then send at once to the table.

Try Cocoanut.

If fond of cocoanut, try sprinkling the baked apple for breakfast with a little shredded cocoanut. Eat this with rice as a cereal, substituting cocoanut milk for other milk or cream.

Cartwright Farm Sold.

Boone.—The old home place which R. N. Cartwright purchased from the government in 1853 and which has never been transfered since that time, fifty-seven years ago, has just been sold. The farm consists of 160 acres and is nicely improved. The price brought was $151 per acre.

During the storm on last Monday afternoon a threshing crew at work at Mr. C. Sorensen's had a very close call from lightning. When the storm came they went into the driveway between the corn crib and granary and busied themselves at elevating grain into the granary, when a bolt of lightning struck the cupola of the building. They received a severe shock but none were injured. The damage to the building was slight.

A SUCCESSFUL SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Goodly Number in Attendance and Some Interesting Papers Read—Music was Pleasing Feature.

The District Sunday School convention, comprising Ell and German townships, held in the German Methodist church, Sunday, was a success in many ways. The attendance was fair.

In the forenoon session, J. E. Harlan presented a paper on: "The importance of adults attending the Sunday School." The writer was fair in the presentation of real facts as we find them today. Miss Emilie Lenz presented a paper on: "Weak Points in the Sunday School." The writer was fearless in uncovering some of the defects of the School, and also outlining some methods of improvement. The pastor gave an address on "The Prosperous Sunday School."

At the afternoon session Prof. Holaday outlined some very practical methods in attaining success as teacher, in an address, laying special stress upon the necessity of the teacher having a Christian experience He referred to his own experience in his home town where his Sunday School class grew from seven to seventy, all being converted men when he resigned his position as teacher. Miss Callison of Garner read a paper which enthused the audience to labor with greater zeal for the Master. We will quote among the many good things said by the speaker just one statement: "If a mother relies entirely on the Sunday School for the religious training of her child, she thus sacrifices her motherly crown." Mr. Ramsay of Garner addressed the people on: "Walking with God." His points were very practical. He was followed by Rev. McConnell of Garner who impressed the people with the need of reading and studying the word to be able to present it to others.

Superintendent R. T. Stivers interspersed many good tho'ts during the day, and gave a review of the Sunday School work from its beginning, in the evening. The choir of the German church rendered some special songs during the day; as also a solo by Miss Johnson.

A collection of $15.72 was raised for the county work. District officers elected for the present year: President, George I. Schaper; Vice President, J. E. Harlan; Sec'y and Treas., Emil Bettin.

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Elwood, Ind.—"Your remedies have cured me and I have only taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. The doctors said I could not get well without an operation, for I could hardly stand the pains in my sides, especially my right one, and down my right leg. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle of Compound, but kept on as I was afraid to stop too soon."—Mrs. SADIE MULLEN, 2728 N. B. St., Elwood, Ind.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

SURE.

She—Religion is a wonderful thing.
He—Yes; but some people only look on it in the light of fire insurance.

Practical Illustration.

To shorten a long Sunday afternoon for Fred, aged eight, his mother told him that he might illustrate the twenty-third Psalm in any way he chose. Quiet reigned for a time, as Fred, busy with pencil and pad, drew "shepherd" and "green pasture," "rod and staff." Then a silence ensued, followed by a noisy clatter, which brought his mother to the room. Fred was busily arranging a train of cars, a toy gun, marbles, etc., on the table.

"What are you doing, Fred?"

"Why," he answered, "these are the presents of my enemies."

In Seclusion.

"Is your mistress at home?"

"Are you the manicure lady?"

"No, indeed!"

"Then she ain't at home, mum."

State Commissioner Will Duplicate North Iowa Association Plans

MANY FARMS TO BE VISITED

Field Agent Will Be Employed To Give Instructions To Farmers —More and Better Butter Is Purpose.

Des Moines.—So marked has been the improvement in the quality and quantity of butter produced in Winnebago and Worth counties through the educational campaigns carried on by the North Iowa Dairy association that the plan will be taken up by the state dairy and food commission and promoted in every corner of Iowa.

The state dairy and food commissioner says that the force of the dairy men now in the field for the state will be put to work on the new plan just as soon as the rush of the summer business is over.

The plan of the North Iowa association is as follows: Ten creameries agree to an assessment of one-tenth of one cent per pound on their output. The total of this assessment goes to pay the salary and expenses of a field agent, who devotes his entire time to the work. The creamery benefits through its increased output and the better quality of its butter. "In the case of the North Iowa association, G. W. Patterson, a graduate of Ames, who formerly was employed by the Iowa State Dairy association, is the field man," said Mr. Barney, speaking of the proposed campaign for better butter and more of it. "He works among the farmers winter and summer. He is an expert dairyman, knows animal husbandry, in fact, a lot about everything connected with farms and farmers. He is the kind of a man who drives up to a farmer's barn and jumps out and helps him finish the milking before going in to eat supper. He points out where the farmer can increase his profits by building up his dairy herds, encourages the building of silos, tells him what to feed, what to do for his sick stock, and does some good wherever he goes.

"There has been approximately an 18 per cent increase in the amount of butter produced by the patrons of the ten creameries in this association during the last year from the same number of cows," Mr. Barney continued. "I am confident we can make that increase and increase the quality at the same time all over the state." Mr. Barney plans to have his men encourage and assist in the formation of improvement associations like the North Iowa organization. The field men also will aim to do some educating wherever they go.

Mr. Barney is enthusiastic over the success of the North Iowa venture and his plans for a broadening of the idea apply to every community in Iowa. He believes the state will get considerable assistance from the government in the work. A government expert has been assisting Mr. Patterson in his work in the northern part of the state.

The North Iowa Dairy Improvement association is the first association of its kind to be organized. During its short life of less than two years it has attracted attention from every part of the United States.

Board Buys Iowa Sugar.

Iowa sugar will be used in the state institutions of Iowa for the first time in the history of the state during the ensuing year.

The state board of control has closed a contract for 190,000 pounds of beet sugar through the Smith, Lichty & Hillman company of Waterloo.

The beet sugar factory at Waverly is to fill the contract. The beets are the product of Bremer county. The company has educated the farmers of Bremer county in the growing of sugar beets. It is said the industry is beginning to prove profitable in Bremer county and that the output will continue to grow in that section of the state.

Final Hearing In Stock Case.

Final disposition of the "minimum weight on livestock shipments" case, which has been pending for many months, will be made by the state board of railway commissioners at a rehearing on Nov. 2, granted the railroads.

Adds To Capital.

The Farmers' Savings bank of Bernard has filed an amendment to its articles of incorporation increasing the capital stock from $10,000 to $15,000.

WANTS STATE DIRECTION

Former Solon Wants State Insurance, Baths, Roads and Correction of Dishonest Business.

Des Moines.—Paternalism in state government practically became a joint debate between Hon. E. W Weeks of Guthrie Center and Col John P. Irish of Oakland, Cal., in addresses at the annual old settlers picnic held at Iowa City. Mr. Weeks, speaking upon the relation of people to government, advocated the creation of state insurance, the installation of public baths by the state, state correction of dishonest business and state road maintenance. Colonel Irish, following him, took Weeks to task for paternalistic views, saying that in the old pioneer days it was a theory that the people should run the government and not the government run the people. "Our Iowa pioneers took their own baths and did a pretty good job of it," said Mr. Irish. He also opposed state insurance as unnecessary in view of present satisfactory conditions.

Army of Tennessee Will Meet.

General Samuel Fallows will deliver the annual address at the forty-first reunion of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee in Council Bluffs, Oct. 10 and 11. Gen. Grenville M. Dodge has received assurances of this arrangement and the program for the reunion now is practically complete. Four societies of army organization are to take part this year in the meetings of the Army of the Tennessee. Col. Cornelius Cadle of St. Louis, for many years secretary, has been apprised by President Dodge of these later arrangements and will include them in the official program now nearly completed.

The Iowa commander of the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, the Association of Fourth Iowa Volunteer Infantry and Dodge's Second Iowa battery will meet with the society, it being the fiftieth anniversary of the enlistment of the two latter organizations.

At one of the business meetings of the society Cornelius Cadle will read a paper on Gen. H. V. Boynton's book, "Sherman's Historical Raid: The Memoirs in the Light of the Record, as Annotated Autobiographically by General Sherman."

All surviving leaders in the civil war have announced their attendance at the reunion, health permitting, many of them being of an age that they cannot decide far in advance concerning their movements. General Dodge, assisted by the local committee, has made arrangements for an elaborate banquet and for other social festivities during the stay of the delegates.

Expects Soo Line Into Des Moines.

"Des Moines will soon have the Soo railroad running into it, according to a report that is now current in railroad circles in the Twin Cities," says George R. Lally, traveling freight agent for the Great Northern railway. "It is reported that the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie system is dealing for the purchase of the Minneapolis & St. Louis and Iowa Central lines. Although no official confirmation of this report has been given out, prominent railroad men in Minneapolis and St. Paul credit it. The Soo has been branching out to all parts of the continent of late years, but as yet has not turned south. The M. & St. L. would give it a good start on a gulf line. If such a deal should go through, Des Moines will have excellent railroad connections with the northeast and northwest. The Soo has a big coast line in each direction, and the line through Des Moines to the south would probably be made one of their principal lines. Some official confirmation of this report may be expressed before many weeks pass."

Delegates to Conservation Congress.

JERSEY COW'S GOOD RECORD

Pedro's Estella, Bred by Missouri Agricultural College, Produces Much Butter.

(By C. H. ECKLES.)

This Jersey cow, Pedro's Estella 197245, as bred by the Missouri Agricultural college. Her record for 12 months as a three-year-old is as follows: Milk, 11,068 pounds; fat in milk, 605 pounds.

The average per cent. of fat for the entire year was 5.476 pounds. Computing the yield of butter on basis of 85 per cent. according to the rule of the Jersey Cattle club, this cow produced 712.12 pounds of butter in the 12 months.

Her weight was 880 pounds at the beginning of the test and increased to Pedro's Estella.

960 pounds at the end of the year. The best previous authentical year's record for an animal of this age is 518 pounds fat, which is exceeded 87.8 pounds by the record of Pedro's Estella.

The average amount of grain fed per day was about fourteen pounds, or a total of 5,110 pounds during the year, which consisted mostly of corn, oats, bran and oil meal.

Clean Milk.

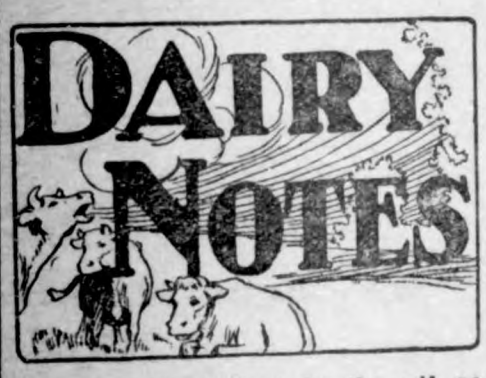
A maker of certified milk, and head of a company which owns 800 cows, kept for this purpose at a sanitary milk producing plant, asserts that every dairyman can get clean milk in any barn if he takes proper care. This statement should prove interesting to those who lay so much stress on changes in the barn equipment, rather than upon the one all important item of care.

Green Food for Cows.

As in the case of cows, swine also should be fed plenty of green food in order to keep their digestive tracts in the best condition. They should be supplied with plenty of pure, cold water and an abundance of shade and sanitary wallowing place.

Pastures "Cowed Down."

Most of the pastures on our dairy farms are "cowed down."



Warm milk is best for the calf, no matter how old it is.

Milk clean, but do not "tug" to keep up the milk flow.

Never forget the importance of cooling milk in a clean place.

Dairying is one of the profitable lines in which a farmer can engage.

Churning is soon out of the way when the cream is in proper condition.

Notice the cream once or twice the first ten minutes after starting the churn.

To do good work the cream separator must be level and on a good solid foundation.

Stop the churn as soon as the butter granulates if you want to work out all the buttermilk.

Veal calves in hot weather will grow better if kept during the day in a dark, cool stable.

A bull tied in the stall will get lazy and useless, besides making extra work in his care and feed.

If you have not a good cellar, nor ice, nor cold water, making good butter in hot weather is out of the question.

There is no line of general agriculture in which well-directed effort will pay so large a profit as in dairy farming.

The cream separator, the silo and the manure spreader should find a place in the equipment of every dairy farm.

Dairy farmers should not raise or buy timothy hay for cows. Clover or alfalfa is much better as a milk producer.

The amount of feed used by cows depends somewhat upon their body weight, larger cows requiring more feed for maintenance.

Experienced butter makers know that firmer butter can be secured from thick than thin cream; and light cream sours more easily.

The better condition the cows and calves are in at the beginning of the winter, the better profit for their owners, and the less feed will be needed

HAVE YOU SUSPECTED YOUR KIDNEYS?

Thousands suffer from backache, headache, dizziness and weariness without suspecting their kidneys.

Henry C. Leonhardt. Liberty St., Sturgeon Bay, Wis., says: "My kidneys were in such bad shape, the kidney secretions passed every few minutes. I doctored with the best physicians and treated with a prominent specialist, but received only temporary relief. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me at once and soon I was permanently cured. I really feel that Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life."

SECOND BIBLE A NECESSITY

Experienced Minister Knew What He Was Talking About When He Advised Junior.

"Now that you are married," said the experienced minister to the young curate, "you will have to stop using the church Bible for home study. Oh, yes, I know how it is. You get attached to a certain Bible, and can study better with that right under your nose, and would willingly pack it back and forth for the inspiration it affords. I've been through it. Used to do that very thing myself, but after half a dozen veils and a pair of gloves and some little lacey things that I shall not attempt to specify floated down from the pulpit on Sunday mornings in view of the astonished and amused congregation, I accustomed myself to two Bibles. The women folks will put things into the Bible to press. It is a habit you can't break them of, and the first thing you know these feminine knick-knacks go sailing away to humiliate you."

That night the curate turned the pages of his Bible carefully. A veil and a scrap of lace fell out. He sighed. The next day he began to cultivate an affection for a second Bible.

PHYSICIAN SAID ECZEMA CAME FROM TEETHING

"When my little girl was about eight months old, she was taken with a very irritating breaking out, which came on her face, neck and back. When she first came down with it, it came in little watery-like festers under her eyes, and on her chin, then after a few days it would dry down in scaly, white scabs. In the daytime she was quite worrysome and would dig and scratch her face nearly all the time.

"I consulted our physician and found she was suffering from eczema, which he said came from her teething. I used the ointment he gave me and without any relief at all. Then I wrote for a book on Cuticura, and purchased some Cuticura Soap and Ointment at the drug store. I did as I found directions in the Cuticura Booklet, and when she was one year old, she was entirely cured. Now she is three years and four months, and she has never been troubled with eczema since she was cured by the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. (Signed) Mrs. Freeman Craver, 311 Lewis St., Syracuse, N. Y., May 6, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 2 K, Boston.

Order of Incependents.

Larry O'Neil had no love of discipline save as he administered it. When he decided to "jine the p'rade," he breathed defiance with every order issued by the military leader.

"Here, you! Look out for yer feet!" muttered the man next him. "Keep shtep, can't you?"

"Get along wid yer shteps," said Larry, turning on him. "I've a shtep o' me own, an' I'll take it or lave the p'rade to get on Widout me."—Youth's Companion.

How to Find Fault.

Find fault, when you must find fault, in private; and some time after the offense, rather than at the time. The blamed are less inclined to resist when they are blamed without witnesses; both parties are calmer and the accused party is struck with the forbearance of the accuser, who has seen the fault and watched for a private and propert time for mentioning it.

Why Women Prefer It

When the newsboy comes through the train with the Chicago papers, watch the married couple across the aisle. If a man is a well-regulated husband he will ask his wife which paper she prefers, and then you may lay odds that the one chosen will be the Record-Herald. There is no mystery about it. The man knows that he will find all the news in the Record-Herald, to be sure, but the woman knows it is the only paper that also gives adequate attention to the things in which women are specially interested. In every daily issue she can find a bill of fare for the day's three meals, reliable society news, good book reviews, bright verses and jokes without vulgarity, a cartoon that anybody can enjoy and a fair share of the news of the day relating to women. Every Monday there is "Martha's Management," a very helpful column of culinary topics. In the Sunday edition a whole section is devoted to women, including Marion Harland's famous page, the latest fashions, Mary O'Connor Newell's breezy articles and interviews, Dame Curtsey's "Novelties in Entertainment," and many special articles of timely interest. Then there is the Sunday Magazine of the Record-Herald, a real magazine, full of good love stories and beautiful pictures. Do you wonder that women prefer the Record-Herold?

A Huge Earth Dam.

The big Belle Fourche irrigation dam in South Dakota, which is the largest earth embankment in the world, is nearing completion. Construction of the project was authorized by congress on May 10, 1904, at a cost of $5,000,000.

From an engineering standpoint the Belle Fourche project is one of the most interesting which the government has yet undertaken. Its principal structure is the earthen dam. This wonderful dike, which closes the lowest depressions in the rim of a natural basin, is 6,200 feet long, 20 feet wide on top and 115 high in the highest place.

The inside face of this structure, which has a slope of two to one, will be protected from wave and ice action by two feet of screened gravel, on which will be placed concrete blocks, each 4 by 6 feet and 8 inches thick. The cubical contents of this dike will be 42,700,000 cubic feet, or about half of the famous pyramid of Cheops. The reservoir created by this dam will cover about 9,000 acres, and will be the largest lake in the state. —Popular Mechanics.

A Wise Mayor.

Mayor Crump, at a Democratic banquet in Memphis, said of a political turncoat:

"He is as inconsistent in politics as man is in love.

"Man's inconstancy in love is, you know, proverbial. The average man, as soon as he wins a woman, tires of her. The advice I'd give to every girl is this:

"'There is only one way to keep a man's love, and that is never to return it.'"

One of those red hot ball games that you read about but seldom see, was played here last Friday—North Side vs. the South Side. Lack of time, space and inclination prevents an extensive writeup of the hair-raising and sensational plays made on both sides, but there were some plays made that you have never seen before on any diamond. The South Siders were victorious by a score of 19 to 12. but the Northerners were handicapped by the absence of a few of their heavy stickers, while the Southerners were strengthened by two Chicago players.

William Fuller At Rest

It is with a feeling of great sadness that we chronicle the death of Wm. Fuller, one of our most highly respected citizens, and for many years a resident of this vicinity, whose death occurred on Sunday afternoon, September 17th, after a lingering illness of several months, aged 53 years, and 27 days.

Deceased had been a patient sufferer with cancer of the stomach for a long time, and last spring submitted to an operation for same at a hospital in Chicago, but which gave him little or no relief. In his last days loving hands administered to his every want or desire, but medical aid and best of care were unavailing.

Wm. Fuller was born in Wicken, England, on August 20. 1858. He came to this country with his parents when he was 16 years of age and settled in Hardin county. On January 8, 1884, he was united in marriage to Miss Anna Yahnke and they moved to Hancock county in 1889, first settling in Avery township, then about five years ago moving onto the place just in the edge of Klemme where the family now reside. He leaves to mourn his loss, an aged mother, a devoted wife, two sons, Albert and Elmer, two daughters, Mrs. Ralph Elder and Miss Minnie, two sisters, Mrs. Dan Palmby of Owassa, Iowa, and Mrs. Wm. Leach, of Dows, Iowa, besides a large circle of old friends and neighbors.

This death is a blow, not only to the immediate family, but to the whole community. In the Klemme camp M. W. A. there is a vacant chair and in the heart of every neighbor there is a feeling of personal loss. Deceased has been a most honored member of that order for fifteen years and at the time of his death was our camp's presiding officer. He was always a faithful member and officer and no one took a greater interest in the camp than did he. We know that we voice the sentiment of the whole camp when we say that never can the place in Klemme Camp M. W. A. left vacant by his passing be filled and all feel the loss of a beloved neighbor.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the English Methodist church, Rev. Carne of Buffalo Center, assisted by Rev. Schneider officiating. The burial services were conducted by the Modern Woodmen, the local camp being ably assisted by some kind neighbors from Buffalo Center The floral offerings were most beautiful and were only one evidence of the universal love and respect for the deceased by the relatives. friends and neighbors The community has lost an upright citizen and a good man, but his memory will live long in the hearts of all. To the sorrowing ones, all extend heartfelt sympathy.

The following neighbors from the Buffalo Center Camp M. W. A. were present to assist in the last sad rites: Henry Gloryfield. Frank Raddle, Ben Steinberg. J. N. Day, Matt Bohl and Wm. Collins.

thing was heard in the room but e hurrying pen of the stripling, occasional sigh from the labor-
g heart of the Captain, ng the marvelous words and chievements of Julius Caesar.
a while he exclaimed, as he mote with his hand, palm downward, ly on the page: "A wonderful an was this Caesar!
re a writer, and I am a fighter,
t here is a fellow could both write and fight, and both was equally skilful!"
tway answered and spake John lden, the comely, the youthful:
he was equally skilled, as you
y, with his pen and his weapons.
here have I read, but where I rget, he could dictate letters at once, at the same me writing his memoirs."
," continued the Captain, not w to the Grave of the Dead.

eeding or hearing the other,
a wonderful man was Caius ulius Caesar!
be first, he said, in a little berian village,
e second in Rome; and I think
e was right when he said it.
e was he married before he was wenty, and many times after;
s five hundred he fought, and a housand cities he conquered;
o, fought in Flanders, as he him-
lf has recorded;
y he was stabbed by his friend,
the orator Brutus!
, do you know what he did on a rtain occasion in Flanders, the rear-guard of his army re-
reated, the front giving way, too, the immortal Twelfth Legion was rowded so closely together
e was no room for their swords?
Why, he seized a shield from a oldier, himself straight at the head of his troops, and commanded the aptains,
g each by his name, to order forward the ensigns;
to widen the ranks, and give more room for their weapons;

So he won the day, the battle of something-or-other,
That's what I always say: If you wish a thing to be well done,
You must do it yourself, you must not leave it to others!"

All was silent again; the Captain continued his reading.
Nothing was heard in the room but the hurrying pen of the stripling.
Writing epistles important to go next day by the Mayflower,
Filled with the name and the fame of the Puritan maiden Priscilla;
Every sentence began or closed with the name of Priscilla,
Till the treacherous pen, to which he confided the secret,
Strove to betray it by singing and shouting the name of Priscilla!
Finally closing his book, with a bang of the ponderous cover,
Sudden and loud as the sound of a soldier grounding his musket,
Thus to the young man spake Miles Standish, the Captain of Plymouth:
"When you have finished your work, I have something important to tell you.
Be not, however, in haste; I can wait; I shall not be impatient!"
Straightway Alden replied, as he folded the last of his letters,
Pushing his papers aside, and giving respectful attention:
"Speak; for whenever you speak, I am always ready to listen, Always ready to hear whatever pertains to Miles Standish."
Thereupon answered the Captain, embarrassed, and culling his phrases,
"'Tis not good for a man to be alone, say the Scriptures.
This I have said before, and again and again I repeat it;
Every hour in the day, I think it, and feel it, and say it.
Since Rose Standish died, my life has been weary and dreary;
Sick at heart have I been, beyond the healing of friendship.
Oft in my lonely hours have I thought of the maiden Priscilla.
She is alone in the world; her father and mother and brother
Died in the winter together; I saw her going and coming,
Now to the grave of the dead, and now to the bed of the dying,
Patient, courageous, and strong, and said to myself, that if ever
There were angels on earth, as there are angels in heaven,
Two have I seen and known; and the angel whose name is Priscilla
Holds in my desolate life the place which the other abandoned.
Long have I cherished the thought, but never have dared to reveal it,
Being a coward in this, though valiant enough for the most part.
Go to the damsel Priscilla, the loveliest maiden of Plymouth,
Say that a blunt old Captain, a man not of words but of actions,
Offers his hand and his heart, the hand and heart of a soldier.
Not in these words, you know, but this in short is my meaning;
I am a maker of war, and not a maker of phrases.
You, who are bred as a scholar, can say it in elegant language,
Such as you read in your books of the pleadings and wooings of lovers,
Such as you think best adapted to win the heart of a maiden."

When he had spoken, John Alden, the fair-haired, taciturn stripling,
All aghast at his words, surprised, embarrassed, bewildered,
Trying to mask his dismay by treating the subject with lightness,
Trying to smile, and yet feeling his heart stand still in his bosom,
Just as a time-piece stops in a house that is stricken by lightning,
Thus made answer and spake, or rather stammered than answered:
"Such a message as that, I am sure I should mangle and mar it;
If you would have it well done—I am only repeating your maxim—
You must do it yourself, you must not leave it to others!"
But with the air of a man whom nothing can turn from his purpose,
Gravely shaking his head, made answer the Captain of Plymouth:
"Truly the maxim is good, and I do not mean to gainsay it;
But we must use it discreetly, and not waste powder for nothing.
Now, as I said before, I was never a maker of phrases.
I can march up to a fortress and summon the place to surrender,
But march up to a woman with such a proposal, I dare not.
I'm not afraid of bullets, nor shot from the mouth of a cannon,
But of a thundering 'No!' point-blank from the mouth of a woman,
That I confess I'm afraid of, nor am I ashamed to confess it!
So you must grant my request, for you are an elegant scholar,
Having the graces of speech, and skill in the turning of phrases."
Taking the hand of his friend, who still was reluctant and doubtful,
Holding it long in his own, and pressing it kindly, he added:
"Though I have spoken thus lightly, yet deep is the feeling that prompts me;
Surely you cannot refuse what I ask in the name of our friendship!"
Then made answer John Alden: "The name of friendship is sacred;
What you demand in that name, I have not the power to deny you!"
So the strong will prevailed, subduing and molding the gentler,
Friendship prevailed over love, and Alden went on his errand.

Glass Confusing to Them

Birds and Fish Do Not Easily Learn That They Cannot Penetrate It.

A correspondent recently reported what he described as the "curious freak" of a blackbird flying against a parlor window many times at the same spot.

Such an incident is not uncommon. Birds have been known to fight for hours at a time, day after day, with their own image reflected in a pane of glass, pecking and fluttering against the pane and quite exhausting themselves in their fury to demolish the supposed rival. It is another instance of how the arts of our civilization corrupt and confuse the birds. It is the same with fishes.

Darwin tells a story of a pike in an aquarium separated by plate glass from fish which were its proper food. In trying to get at the fish the pike would often dash with such violence against the glass as to be completely stunned. It did this for more than three months before it learned caution. Then when the glass was removed the pike would not attack those particular fishes, but would devour others freshly introduced.

It did not at all understand the situation, but associated the punishment it had received not with the glass, but with a particular kind of fish. Darwin's American monkeys proved themselves more "knowing." When they cut themselves once with any sharp tool they would not touch it again or else would handle it with the greatest caution.

Thus they gave evidence of the simpler forms of reason of which monkeys are no doubt capable, but birds are evidently lacking in reasoning powers.—The Scotsman.

Color of the Eye.

Brown eyes are due to a brown pigment laid down in the iris; blue eyes are due to a lack of such pigment. When both parents are brown-eyed the children get the tendency to form iris pigment from both sides of the house, and the condition of the pigment is said to be duplex. If the children get the tendency from one parent only, they will have brown eyes, but the condition is said to be simplex. Two parents lacking brown in the iris (blue eyed) will never have children with brown eyes, but only with blue eyes. If both parents have brown eyes simplex, then one in four of the children will have blue eyes. If one parent has simplex brown eyes and the other has blue eyes, one-half of the children will have blue eyes. But if in both or either one of the parents the blue iris pigmentation is duplex, all of the offspring will have brown eyes.

Names for "Good Friday."

Perhaps no Christian festival has so many names as Good Friday. Our Anglo-Saxon and Danish forefathers called it "Long Friday," in allusion to the length of the day's services and fasting; in France it is "Holy Friday;" in Germany either "Stiller Freitag" (Quiet Friday) or "Charfreitag," in allusion perhaps to the exhibition of the crucifix for adoration after being veiled all through Lent. In the Greek church it has been known at various times as "The Pascha of the Cross," "The Preparation, "The Redemption" and "The Day of the Cross," and to these names the Latins have added "The Day of the Lord's Passion," "The Sixth Holy Day of the Pascha," and many others. "Good Friday" seems to be peculiar to the English language.

Japanese Pastime.

Combats between animals of different species are a source of great amusement among the Japanese. One of the most popular contests is that between monkey and goose. The monkey is tied to one of the goose's legs, by means of a cord, and both animals are set down near the bank of a river, or pond. The goose, standing in dread of the monkey, seeks for safety in the water, and the monkey, afraid of the water, exerts himself to the uttermost not to be drawn into it. As a rule, the goose draws the monkey into the water, and then the cunning simian sits astride of the goose, in equestrian fashion. The goose then tries to dive, and the monkey prevents her if he can; and so the fight goes on until the spectators tire, and the animals are released from an uncongenial companionship.

A HiT
What She Gained by Trying Again.

A failure at first makes us esteem final success.

A family in Minnesota that now enjoys Postum would never have known how good it is if the mother had been discouraged by the failure of her first attempt to prepare it. Her son tells the story:

"We had never used Postum till last spring when father brought home a package one evening just to try it. We had heard from our neighbors, and in fact every one who used it, how well they liked it.

"Well, the next morning Mother brewed it about five minutes, just as she had been in the habit of doing with coffee without paying special attention to the directions printed on the package. It looked weak and didn't have a very promising color, but nevertheless father raised his cup with an air of exceptancy. It certainly did give him a great surprise, but I'm afraid it wasn't a very pleasant one, for he put down his cup with a look of disgust.

Mother wasn't discouraged though, and next morning gave it another trial, letting it stand on the stove till boiling began and then letting it boil for fifteen or twenty minutes, and this time we were all so pleased with it that we have used it ever since.

"Father was a confirmed dyspeptic and a cup of coffee was to him like poison. So he never drinks it any more, but drinks Postum regularly. He isn't troubled with dyspepsia now and is actually growing fat, and I'm sure Postum is the cause of it. All the children are allowed to drink it and they are perfect pictures of health." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

An Honor to Allison.

"Do you know," inquired Wilbur Reaser, the New York portrait painter, "that when my painting of Senator Allison was hung in the lobby of the senate, the precedent of 40 years was broken?"

Surprised being expressed Mr. Reaser explained.

"It is a fact that since the beginning of the constitutional government the senate had bought only nine portraits for the lobby. The first was Washington's and the eighth was Charles Sumner's. For almost 40 years nobody was considered worthy to follow in the distinguished line.

"It was generally thought that no other portrait would ever be added to the group; but when Senator Allison died, after serving longer in the senate than any other man in the history of the government, the rule was broken, and his picture became the ninth."—Washington Times.

To remove potato, onion and other vegetable stains from the hands, rub with ripe tomatoes.

Get the stoves in order for the first cold snap, when you really feel the cold more than in winter weather.

Skim the fat off the chicken broth and use it to shorten biscuits. These are much more delicious than when you use lard.

A bank lately received the following note from a lady: "Please stop payment on the check I wrote out today, as I accidentally burned it up."

If a tablespoonful of sweet milk is added to each yolk of egg when making custards, the mixture will not curdle when added to the boiling milk.

When cake icing is too hard so that you cannot spread it on, add a little water, a drop at a time. When it is too thin, add sufficient powdered sugar, first rubbing out the lumps.

By inspecting the canned fruit occasionally, the housewife will be able to save any that has begun to spoil, by carefully removing that which is tainted and cooking the rest over, recanning it as in the start.

Have you tried baking eggs? Grease a baking dish with butter, break the eggs into it, cover with cream. Add salt, pepper, and a tablespoonful of butter. Set it in a moderate oven a few minutes. Length of time depends on whether you like them soft or well done.—From October Farm Journal.

Conan Doyle at His Best

The story-reading world seems to be unanimous in the verdict that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is at his best in his Sherlock Holmes stories. The Chicago Record-Herald is now in the act of breaking another record by printing in its columns all the Sherlock Holmes stories ever written, both short and long. Some it has published in the past, but many of the best are still to come. It is the only paper in Chicago now running Sherlock Holmes stories.

The Record-Herald has only recently begun on the "Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes," a series of thirteen of these famous detective tales. The stories, which have been appearing only on Sundays, are now to run right along through every day of the week until completed. This series is to be followed by two long Sherlock Holmes serials—"A Study in Scarlet" and "The Sign of the Four." Many persons are taking advantage of this chance to read the world's best detective stories.

Sherlock Holmes has the honor of being the most widely known character in fiction. The fascination of his adventures and of his marvelous detective powers is felt by all classes of readers. You can always find some of the best popular fiction of the day in the Record-Herald, but this Conan Doyle series is something out of the ordinary, even for that enterprising paper.

IOWA BANK SHOWING

25

Conditions In Hawkeye State Are In Most Satisfactory Condition

DEPOSITS GAINED $6,000,000

During the Summer, When Business Is Slack, Fine Increase Is Shown As Compared To the Last Statement.

Des Moines.—Deposits in the 1,003 banks under the jurisdiction of the state banking department increased $5,967,714.19 in the year from September 14, 1910, to August 30, 1911, according to a statement compiled by the state auditor, and the state banking department. The gain in deposits between May 29, 1911, and August 30, 1911, amounted to $2,931,041.78. These gains are the largest which have been recorded for similar periods in some years and show a uniform prosperity in Iowa such as has not existed in some years in this state.

An interesting feature of the report is found in the fact that while the banks have reduced the amount of their bills receivable they have at the same time strengthened their legal reserves. This is regarded by the state bank officials as a most encouraging sign. The total increase in banks for the three months was seven, while the increase for the year was 33. When it is remembered that while the number of banks increased only seven and the deposits increased nearly three million it is seen that the people have faith in the stability of the Iowa banks.

Simpson College Improves.

Indianola.—Within the next year the trustees of Simpson college expect to begin the erection of an auditorium to cost between $50,000 and $75,000. Hopper of $50,000 for a gymnasium has made the donations available for a separate auditorium. It is said that other buildings are in prospect for the college.

Barnett, an aged farmer living near Valley Junction, has begun in the criminal division of the district court. Moore is indicted on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder. The assault is the result of family difficulties existing between Barnett and his daughter.

No Prospects of Consolidation.

Des Moines.—No change in ownership will occur in the Iowa Central railroad and the Minneapolis & St. Louis railway will not be merged with the Canadian Northern if reciprocity with Canada succeeds in the dominion election and all reports to this effect were branded as false by Vice-President W. J. Bird of the M. & St. L., who was in Des Moines with a party of railroad officials.

Roy Griffith Wanted In Nebraska.

Des Moines.—Extradition papers were issued by Governor B. F. Carroll for the return to Nebraska of Roy E. Griffith, who is wanted in Richardson county on a charge of embezzlement. Griffith has been apprehended at Clarion. He formerly was an agent for the Missouri Pacific Railway, and made away with funds belonging to the company.

the strong will prevailed, and Alden went on his errand, of the street of the village, and into the paths of the forest, the tranquil woods, where bluebirds and robins were building in the populous trees, with hanging gardens of verdure, ful, aerial cities of joy and affection and freedom.
around him was calm, but within him commotion and conflict, contending with friendship, and self with each generous impulse.
nd fro in his breast his thoughts were heaving and dashing, a foundering ship, with every roll of the vessel,
the bitter sea, the merciless surge of the ocean!

ugh the Plymouth Woods John Alden Went.

t I relinquish it all," he cried with a wild lamentation,
t I relinquish it all, the joy, the hope, the illusion?
it for this I have loved, and waited, and worshiped in silence?
it for this I have followed the flying feet and the shadow the wintry sea, to the desolate shores of New England?
y the heart is deceitful, and out of its depths of corruption
, like an exhalation, the misty phantoms of passion;
ms of light they seem, but are only delusions of Satan.
is clear to me now; I feel it, I see it distinctly!
is the hand of the Lord; it is laid upon me in anger,
I have followed too much the heart's desires and devices, shiping Ashtoreth blindly, and impious idols of Baal.
is the cross I must bear; the sin and the swift retribution."
through the Plymouth woods John
Alden went on his errand;
e to an open space, and saw the disk of the ocean,
ness, somber and cold with the comfortless breath of the east wind;
the new-built house, and people
at work in a meadow;
ard, as he drew near the door, the musical voice of Priscilla ing the hundredth Psalm, the grand old Puritan anthem, ne that Luther sang to the sacred words of the Psalmist,
Full of the breath of the Lord, consoling and comforting many.
Then, as he opened the door, he beheld the form of the maiden
Seated beside her wheel, and the carded wool like a snow-drift
Piled at her knee, her white hands feeding the ravenous spindle,
While with her foot on the treadle she guided the wheel in its motion.
Open wide on her lap lay the well-worn psalm-book of Ainsworth,
Printed in Amsterdam, the words and music together,
Rough-hewn, angular notes, like stones in the wall of a churchyard,
Darkened and overhung by the running vine of the verses.
Such was the book from whose pages she sang the old Puritan anthem,
She, the Puritan girl, in the solitude of the forest,
Making the humble house and the modest apparel of homespun
Beautiful with her beauty, and rich with the wealth of her being!
Over him rushed, like a wind that is keen and cold and relentless,
Thoughts of what might have been, and the weight and woe of his errand;
All the dreams that had faded, and all the hopes that had vanished,
All his life henceforth a dreary and tenantless mansion,
Haunted by vain regrets, and pallid, sorrowful faces.
Still he said to himself, and almost fiercely he said it:
"Let not him that putteth his hand to the plow look backward;
Though the plowshare cut through the flowers of life to its fountains,
Though it pass o'er the graves of the dead and the hearths of the living,
It is the will of the Lord; and His mercy endureth for ever!"

So he entered the house: and the hum of the wheel and the singing
Suddenly ceased; for Priscilla, aroused by his step on the threshold,
Rose as he entered, and gave him her hand, in signal of welcome,
Saying, "I knew it was you, when I heard your step in the passage;
For I was thinking of you, as I sat there singing and spinning."
Awkward and dumb with delight, that a thought of him had been mingled
Thus in the sacred psalm, that came from the heart of the maiden,
Silent before her he stood, and gave her the flowers for an answer,
Finding no words for his thought. He remembered that day in the winter,
After the first great snow, when he broke a path from the village,
Reeling and plunging along through the drifts that encumbered the doorway,
Stamping the snow from his feet as he entered the house, and Priscilla
Laughed at his snowy locks, and gave him a seat by the fireside,
Grateful and pleased to know he had thought of her in the snow-storm.
Had he but spoken then, perhaps not in vain had he spoken;
Now it was all too late; the golden moment had vanished!
So he stood there abashed, and gave her the flowers for an answer.

Then they sat down and talked of the birds and the beautiful spring-time,
Talked of their friends at home, and the Mayflower that sailed on the morrow.
"I have been thinking all day," said gently the Puritan maiden,
"Dreaming all night, and thinking all day, of the hedge-rows of England,—
They are in blossom now, and the country is all like a garden;
Thinking of lanes and fields, and the song of the lark and the linnet,
Seeing the village street, and familiar faces of neighbors
Going about as of old, and stopping to gossip together,
And, at the end of the street, the village church, with the ivy
Climbing the old gray tower, and the quiet graves in the churchyard.
Kind are the people I live with, and dear to me my religion;
Still my heart is so sad, that I wish myself back in Old England.
You will say it is wrong, but I can not help it: I almost Wish myself back in Old England, I feel so lonely and wretched."

Thereupon answered the youth: "Indeed I do not condemn you;
Stouter hearts than a woman's have quailed in this terrible winter.
Yours is tender and trusting, and needs a stronger to lean on;
So I have come to you now, with an an offer and proffer of marriage
Made by a good man and true, Miles Standish, the Captain of Plymouth!"

Thus he delivered his message, the dexterous writer of letters—
Did not embellish the theme, nor array it in beautiful phrases,
But came straight to the point, and blurted it out like a schoolboy;
Even the Captain himself could hardly have said it more bluntly.
Mute with amazement and sorrow, Priscilla, the Puritan maiden,
Looked into Alden's face, her eyes dilated with wonder,
Feeling his words like a blow, that stunned her and rendered her speechless;
Till at length she exclaimed, interrupting the ominous silence:
"If the great Captain of Plymouth is so very eager to wed me,
Why does he not come himself, and take the trouble to woo me?
If I am not worth the wooing, I surely am not worth the winning!"
Then John Alden began explaining and smoothing the matter,
Making it worse as he went, by saying the Captain was busy—
Had no time for such things;—such things! the words grating harshly
Fell on the ear of Priscilla; and swift as a flash she made answer:
"Has he no time for such things, as you call it, before he is married,
Would he be likely to find it, or make it, after the wedding?
That is the way with you men; you don't understand us, you can not.
When you have made up your minds, after thinking of this one and that one,
Choosing, selecting, rejecting, comparing one with another,
Then you make known your desire, with abrupt and sudden avowal,
And are offended and hurt, and indignant perhaps, that a woman
Does not respond at once to a love that she never suspected,
Does not attain at a bound the height to which you have been climbing.
This is not right nor just: for surely a woman's affection
Is not a thing to be asked for, and had for only the asking.
When one is truly in love, one not only says it, but shows it.
Had he but waited a while, had he only showed that he loved me,
Even this Captain of yours—who knows?—at last might have won me,
Old and rough as he is; but now it never can happen."

Still John Alden went on, unheeding the words of Priscilla,
Urging the suit of his friend, explaining, persuading, expanding;

And Gave Him a Seat by the Fireside.

Spoke of his courage and skill, and of all his battles in Flanders,
How with the people of God he had chosen to suffer affliction,
How, in return for his zeal, they had made him Captain of Plymouth;
He was a gentleman born, could trace his pedigree plainly
Back to Hugh Standish of Duxbury Hall, in Lancashire, England,
Who was the son of Ralph, and the the grandson of Thurston de Standish;
Heir unto vast estates, of which he was basely defrauded,
Still bore the family arms, and had for his crest a cock argent
Combed and wattled gules, and all the rest of the blazon.
He was a man of honor, of noble and generous nature;
Though he was rough, he was kindly; she knew how during the winter
He had attended the sick, with a hand as gentle as woman's;
Somewhat hasty and hot, he could not deny it, and headstrong,
Stern as a soldier might be, but hearty, and placable always,
Not to be laughed at and scorned, because he was little of stature;
For he was great of heart, magnanimous, courtly, courageous;
Any woman in Plymouth, nay, any woman in England,
Might be happy and proud to be called the wife of Miles Standish!

But as he warmed and glowed, in his simple and eloquent language,
Quite forgetful of self, and full of the praise of his rival,
Archly the maiden smiled, and, with eyes overrunning with laughter,
Said in a tremulous voice, "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"Why Don't You Speak for Yourself, John."

First Calculating Machine.

The first calculating machine was invented and constructed by Blaise Pascal, a Frenchman, in 1642, in which year he was but nineteen years of age. It was made by him with the aid of one workman and was presented to the chancellor of France. During the revolution it was found in a junk shop at Bordeaux and at present is the property of M. Bougouin of that city. All of the four simple mathematical operations can be made with it.

An Indication.

"Is Bliggins the superior influence in his own house?" "I'm afraid not. He's one of those men who understand exactly what their wives are talking about when they describe what other women wear."

WHAT THEY THOUGHT OF HIM

Remark by No Means Complimentary Made by Constituent of Representative Underwood.

Representative Underwood, chairman of the ways and means committee in congress, represents what is known as a "manufacturing district," because it contains all the factories and smelters in and about Birmingham, Ala. But he also has among his constituents a lot of farmers—of which fact he is now painfully aware.

He drove out to a settlement in Bibb county one afternoon to persuade the farmers they ought to vote for him. As he stepped up to the porch of a little store an old man rushed up to him with the request:

"Please sign this paper. It's a petition to Congressman Underwood to have a young lady postmistress here."

"I'd be glad to sign it," said Underwood politely; "but as I'm not a resident of this community, my name wouldn't help you."

"Oh, yes, it would," the old farmer assured him. "We're getting everybody to sign it, strangers and all. Go ahead and put your name down! That fool congressman will never know the difference!"—The Sunday Magazine.

Of Course He Cried.

"Jimmy! What on earth are you crying about now?"

"Tommy Jones dreamed last night that he had a whole pie to eat an' I didn't."

His Telephone Sweetheart

According to the rules and regulations of the telephone company, an operator has no right to listen to conversations over the wires in her charge, but sometimes Edna could not help overhearing snatches of conversation when she tested to see whether some one in one of the booths was still talking. Naturally, too, she became interested in the young man who always called one address uptown.

His first name was Frank, that much she knew, and she knew also that he worked in the big office building in which she operated the public station switchboard. Most offices had their own wires and the work was light, so gradually she began to take especial interest in Frank and his calls.

Her own lonely little life contained no romance and she entered heart and soul into this stranger's love affair. Every day on his way in from lunch and again in the evening he called up "Dearest." It was the only name he ever used, and Edna wished that sometime some one might talk to her like that, whether it was over the wire or face to face. She hoped it might be some one like Frank, with laughing, brown eyes and a kindly smile that seemed perpetual, and her hungry heart took to itself the tender message she heard over the wire when she deliberately cut in.

She had some share of his visits for he had always a pleasant smile and a "good afternoon" for her, but she wanted more. She used to whisper very softly her own answers to his tender messages and she was genuinely distressed when, some months later, the messages were discontinued. She still looked for his pleasant greeting as he passed her desk and wondered that he should take his disappointment so well. She sometimes planned to call up the old number and pretend that it was a mistaken call just to see if the girl was still there.

Then there were other times when she was selfishly glad that the calls had stopped, for she was jealous of his telephone sweetheart and now occasionally he stopped for a word of chat with her. Then, one afternoon there came the call. She recognized the voice instantly and her generous spirit rose superior to her selfish jealousy and without thinking she laughed into the receiver.

"I'm so glad you're back," she cried then the voice at the other end recalled her to her duty. For the first times he knew his last name, for the caller asked that Mr. Frank Howard be sent for and gave the number of his room.

Presently he came down in the elevator, his face beaming with gladness and Edna fought down a desire to listen. She wanted to know that he had won back his telephone sweetheart and yet she could not bear to learn the fact.

Howard came out of the booth with an odd look upon his face. There was no one there beside the girl and he leaned against the desk.

"What did you mean by saying that you were glad?" he demanded curiously. Edna's face grew red.

"Did she say that?" she asked Howard nodded.

"She wanted to know what you were glad about. She thought at first she had the wrong number."

"I was glad that she had come back," explained the girl. Somehow those brown eyes compelled the truth "You didn't call her for so long I knew that you had quarreled and I was glad that you were going to be happy again."

"Been scenting a romance?" he said with a smile. "She's been my sweetheart ever since I was old enough to love anyone. She's been out of town Just got back and wanted to tell me."

"I'll bet you're glad." It was not a brilliant remark, but it was the best Edna could do. Howard smiled.

"I bet I am," he agreed. "You see I don't go home until late and she's all alone, so I call her up to cheer her."

"Then you're married?" asked Edna in dismay. Howard shook his head.

"That's my mother," he said with a laugh. "She's the best sweetheart a man ever had. I want you to meet her some time. The night law class comes to an end next week, and after that I want to take you up to see her."

"Me? What for?" Edna's eyes grew large.

"I've been telling her a lot about you," explained Howard. "She said before she went away that she wanted to meet you when she came back and I told her that I would try and get you to come up. Will you come?"

"Sure," said Edna, feeling her conversational limitations, but too startled to give expression to her feelings. "I can tell from her voice that she's an awfully nice person. You learn to tell voices when you hear so many of them over the wire."

"I am glad you like her," said Howard simply, "for I want you to like—us both. Do you think you will?"

"You mean—" Edna did not complete the sentence, but Howard understood.

"Just that," he agreed.

"I guess I do—now," confessed the girl, "because I was awfully jealous of your telephone sweetheart."

A Setback.

He—Don't you like all kinds of birds.

Shes—No, I don't. I hate a jay.

His Reason for Secrecy.

Every fight fan in New York, says the correspondent of The Cincinnati Times-Star, knows little "K. O." Brown, who has won that title because he wins most of his battles by a knockout. When he is in the ring he is a muscular youngster, all wire and muscle, and with a most formidable fighting frown. Outside the ring he is just a schoolboy, blonde, smooth-faced, modest and everything but pugilistic in appearance. The other night the coppers raided the street on which he lives and caught "K. O." and a dozen other youthful malefactors. They had been playing football in the open street. They were taken to Night Court.

"C'n I give a name that ain't me own?" asked "K. O." of the court.

The magistrate wanted to know what was up, of course, and expressed astonishment when he was told that the quiet, pleasant looking little chap was the fighter who is working his way toward the top of the pugilistic tree.

"And why do you want to keep your name a secret?" asked he of young Brown.

"Because," said the fighter, "if me mother hears that I have been pinched she'll lam the daylights out o' me."

BULL NEEDS SOME EXERCISE

Animal Should Not Be Allowed to Run With Cows or Heifers—Exercising Pole Is Excellent.

After the bull is old enough for service he should not be allowed to run with young heifers or cows, but should, in suitable weather, be exercised daily. An exercising pole with chain, balanced by swivel joint (a one and one-half or two-inch wheel axle with box) upon the top of a stout post, which stands seven or eight feet above ground, is satisfactory. Make the pole as long as requisite strength and convenience will permit, that the bull may cut a good-sized circle about the post, says the Country Gentleman. On the top of the small end of the pole fasten a sash pulley, and, at a point just forward of the line of the post, a corresponding pulley; also, at intervals between the pulleys, put two or three screw-eyes to guide the chain from pulley to pulley.

Bore holes vertically through the pole for the ends of the chain to fall through. At the outer end of the chain attach a strong swivel snap hook, and at the other end hang a weight just heavy enough to take up the slack chain as the bull raises his head. The chain should be, when the weight is raised up against the pole, only long enough to permit the bull to lie down comfortably. When the bull is old enough for service he should thereafter never be allowed to have his liberty; but daily exercise should not be omitted. The exercising pole might be placed under a roof or building, but in winter it should be under cover and in the shade in summer.

Exercising Merry-Go-Round.

KEEP BROOD SOWS SEPARATE

Should Be Kept Away From Pork Makers and Most of Corn Removed From Their Ration.

Breeding sows should be separated from the porkmakers and most of the corn removed from their ration. Fatty tissues and padded internal organs work disaster to the breeding sow, for as she fattens she becomes lazy and takes very little exercise. This tardy task is costly to the breeder of swine, for instead of vigorous, active pigs, he will have uneven, puny squealers, that persist in crawling under the bedding and around the place where the mother usually settles, and then he is done for. Exercise above all else is conductive to strong litters, while the sow's ration should be made up largely of muscle and bone-growing feeds, such as oats, bran, skim milk, short cut clover or alfalfa. It is not the fattest nor the biggest pig at birth that makes the heaviest hog, but rather the one that has the ability to move about freely and fight for his special platter at the nurse table.

Market Hogs Early.

How should we manage the hog marketing proposition? It is a simple proposition, but few farmers have backbone to carry it out. We would advise a farmer with thrifty shoats to purchase corn during the summer months, if it does seem high, and crowd his hogs on the market at the earliest possible moment. As to the exact date of profitable marketing we would suggest early September as the most propitious season, the weather being about the proper temperature to promote the fattening process. Simply begin to push the fatteners at once and about the time farmers begin to hog down their corn or to feed it to their hogs in various ways you dispose of yours, avoiding the drop that invariably follows the fall shipment of fat hogs.

Rye for Grazing.

Rye makes good winter and early spring grazing and liberal acreage should be planted in this crop. It is also a good cover crop and affords ample protection against the loss of nitrates in the soil. Plant rye for grazing and for winter cover.

HORSE FEED IS NOT WASTED

Bag Invented by Massachusetts Man Supplies Oats Only as Fast as Animals Can Eat Them.

Any person who has watched horses eating their noonday meals along the streets cannot fail to have noticed how much of the feed was wasted when the animals tossed their heads to get at the oats in the bottom of the bags. A Massachusetts man has designed a feed bag which saves all this waste and in addition makes the horse eat slower, so that he gets all the benefit of the food. The bag is made in two sections, one for the animal's head and the other for the feed. An opening at the bottom allows the oats to flow into the compartment in which the horse has his head, but only as fast as he eats them. He does not have to toss his head about and even if he does there is no waste as the compartment containing the feed is closed at the top. By eating slowly, too, he is satisfied with less feed than if he bolted it. When not in use the bag can be folded up and carried in the tool box under the seat.

Horse Feed Bag.

PURE WATER FOR THE STOCK

Receptacle Shown in Illustration Overcomes One of Greatest Difficulties of Farmer.

One of the greatest difficulties that confronts the stock raiser during dry summer weather is that of keeping pure water for the stock. The illustration shows a method employed by an Illinois farmer for several years, says the Homestead. Bury an old zinc tank or some other construction that will hold at least 50 gallons of water, in this place a large size water barrel, bore some three or four holes in the bottom end of this just below the top of the outside tank, in these holes place an iron tube as much as an inch in diameter and the enclosure tank will always be full of water and there is no waste.

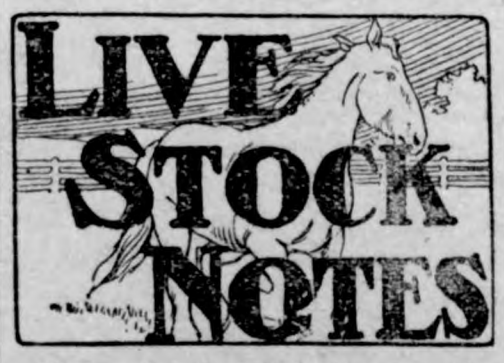
Blinders on Horses.

A horse with blinders on the public road is about as comfortable as a woman wearing a poke bonnet walking through a field where a vicious bull is kept.



Many of us could increase the number of hogs we carry and do it at a profit.

At the first sign of trouble in a horse immediate attention should be given to remedying it.

The housing of the horse should be looked after much more carefully than is generally the case.

Study over your situation carefully and figure whether you cannot handle a few more hogs at a profit.

Root crops are almost too expensive to use on any considerable scale in fattening sheep for market.

Many of us who give every care to our cows, sheep and other animals, give little care to our horses.

FASHIONS OF THE MOMENT

ALL FANCIFUL IN VOGUE

SEASON'S BLOUSES MUST BE OF UNUSUAL DESIGN.

However, Too Much Contrast Between the Bodice and the Coat Suit Is to Be Avoided—Some Possible Good Effects.

Never was more art shown in the making of blouses than now. The conventional style has no place in the realm of fashion. Cut, texture and coloring are all fanciful—in fact, the popular choice is all for the unusual thing. Yet the compact, girlish lines of past seasons are still preserved, and this despite incrustations of the richest trimming.

The Waist for Various Informal Functions.

Strictly speaking from the fashionable point of view, a broad contrast between the bodice and the coat suit is not allowable except in the case of the all-white blouse. The material of the fancy waist is different from that of the suit, but in color or trimming it matches, and this is needed for harmonious sequence. Where the bodice contrasts in color it still harmonizes with the gown tone, and the note of it may be repeated in the hat and coat trimmings. For example, with the brown or gray coat suit it is possible to wear a waist in that ubiquitous shade of purple known as "coronation;" but the hat will match, and often the gloves and shoes. The waist itself will be of crepe and made in a very soft and clinging style.

The white marquisette that reigned so long for the finer bodices is being replaced by colored marquisette, the delicate material now coming in all the shades of the new gown textures. But this is made resplendent with embroideries in Turkish colors, and the same gorgeous needlework will show on every gauzy fabric that permits it. The linings for the thinner waist textures are all odd, English eyelet, lace, fishnet, brussels net, and point d'esprit being used. Lovely effects are made with the new one-sided jabot, and if the waist is for house use it is pretty apt to display one or two of the huge directoire revers, this being always in a note different from that of the waist proper. On a waist of saffron-colored momie cloth, with a side frill of fine plaited white muslin, there was a single one of these great revers in black satin. Where an evenly-balanced effect is liked at the front of the waist there are ruchings put down the button flap that give a very dressy look and are the proper touches for a high stock and long sleeves.

An exceedingly valuable kink which is to be continued is the jumper in thin material women have found so useful these past seasons. The little smarteners are still seen in black and colored chiffons and veilings, and they seem to look well over any sort of a bodice.

The waist shown in the illustration is of gray marquisette with a trimming of guipure in exactly the same color. The undersleeves are of a thinner white lace and the skirt is of gray silk. The pretty get-up in its entirety demonstrates the sort of thing many women need for the various social functions that do not call for full dress, and if the bodice is wanted in odd form the style is equally adapted to this.

Rose Leaf Sachet Bag.

Have you ever made rose petal sachets? If not, try utilizing the leaves of roses by spreading them on a tray and exposing them to the sunlight until they are perfectly dry. Then crumble them lightly in the hand and add any favorite fragrant ingredient, such as cassia buds, orris root or sandalwood, and, to complete, a little of the essential oil of roses. Fill tiny bags with the powder and scatter them through the linen drawers and clothes closets, where they will impart an exquisitely elusive perfuse to lingerie and gowns. Such a subtle frograance is refined, but never obtrusive; wonderfully like the odor of the real rose

THIMBLE PARTY THE LATEST

Pleasant Method of Entertaining a Guest or for the Passing of Pleasant Afternoon.

If a girl friend is visiting you for a few days and you are not in a position to give a formal affair in her honor, invite some of the girls you know for a porch thimble party.

In extending the invitation ask them to bring their needlework for a chatty afternoon and allow no trace of formality to enter into the appointments, the introduction or the serving of the refreshments. Arrange the porch chairs in a circle or half circle, pile them with pillows and have handy all the sewing requisites, such as needles, different sizes of white thread, thimbles and plain embroidery scissors. A guest often neglects to place one or the other of these in her work bag and will be grateful for the thoughtfulness of the hostess in supplying them without the trouble of explanation.

Ask the complimented guest to move about among the girls and talk with them all, so that congeniality may predominate throughout the circle. A graphophone will add merriment to the occasion and keep pleasant chatter going.

Refreshments may be very light, consisting of dainty sandwiches, ice cream or ices and cake and fruit punch. Ice cream and cake is quite enough at one of these "drop in" parties.

Later in the afternoon, if your visitor sings or plays, ask her to favor the guests. When she has responded extend the invitation to any other musician present.

IN VIOLET MARQUISETTE

This original waist is of violet marquisette with odd yoke of black mousseline de soie embroidered in colored beads.

The little guimpe, the sleeve bands and cuffs are of white lace, the girdle is of black satin.

Daintily Dazzling.

One of the new hair ornaments which will presently be on sale is daintily dazzling, and the "young person" may wear it when her mamma sports a blaze of diamonds above her brow. This novelty is in the shape of a fillet and it is powdered all over with diamond dust. At a little distance the effect is as of strings of gems shining in the hair.

STATE HEALTH TRAIN

25

If Funds Are Secured This Novel Special Will Tour Iowa

WOULD BE OF MUCH BENEFIT

National Red Cross "First Aid Car" Might Be Attached—The Various State Officials Would Accompany Train as Lecturers.

Des Moines.—If the state executive council will find the necessary funds to finance the proposition, a "health train" will be run through Iowa this winter, according to Dr. Guilford H. Sumner, secretary of the state board of health.

Dr. Sumner, along with Arteas E. Kepford, state tuberculosis lecturer; Dr. James I. Gibson, state veterinarian, and W. B. Barney, state dairy and food commissioner, have given the subject considerable thought. All are anxious to try the experiment this winter. The only thing lacking is the money to charter the train.

The plan is to run a special similar to the famous "corn gospel" trains, which proved so successful in educating the farmers.

The state dairy and food department would preach dairy and pure food topics, Dr. Gibson would have charge of such subjects as live stock sanitation and diseases, the state board of health would educate the people on general health topics, and Dr. Kepford would handle the topic of tuberculosis.

Dr. Sumner is of the opinion that if the state goes through with the special train idea, the National Red Cross society will add their "first aid to the injured" car to the train. This car has been in Iowa, and, according to Dr. Sumner, would do a great work on a state-wide trip, such as would be made by the state's proposed train.

Galloway Declines Nomination.

William Galloway, the wealthy manufacturer of Waterloo, who was mentioned for the gubernatorial candidacy on the prohibition party ticket, at the meeting of the national and state party leaders in Perry last week, has declined to accept the offer. Mr. Galloway says he would not consider a political position of any kind, and has no desire to be so considered.

Govenor's Staff Changes.

Governor Carroll has announced the resignation from his staff of Ernest W. Moore, of Cedar Rapids, formerly representative in the house from Linn county. The governor also announced the appointment of Earl Ferguson of Shenandoah to succeed Mr. Moore on the staff. Mr. Ferguson is a prominent lawyer at Shenandoah.

Harding Is a Candidate.

W. L. Harding of Sioux City, representative from Woodbury county in the last general assembly was in Des Moines this week attending the supreme court and gave it out that he will be a candidate for the republican nomination for lieutenant governor to succeed George W. Clarke of Adel, who has announced his candidacy for the governorship.

RICHARDS' PAROLE EXPECTED

Friends Believe State Board Which Meets Next Month Will Free Former United States Marshal.

Des Moines.—Friends of former United States Marshal "Bill" Richards are confident that he will be released from the state penitentiary on parole when the state parole board meets next month. Richards was sentenced for eighteen years for burglary. He has served over six years. By good behavior six years more is taken off of his term. Members of the state board of parole stated that he has been a model prisoner and that he probably will not serve his sentence. This statement gives rise to the belief that October will see his release.

It is equally certain that Leonard Haley, convicted in Dubuque of murder, will not be paroled. Haley recently published severe strictures on the management of the prison and its sanitary conditions and then later and was locked in his cell. He had refused to do the work assigned him been prison librarian. His insubordination occurred after he had made an application for a parole.

Questions Up At Freight Hearing.

The docket of the general freight classification hearing to be held by the state railroad commission Oct. 3d, shows that some important freight classification propositions are to be passed on by the board this fall. Among the requests are the following:

That cucumbers in the brine be given a lower rate than the finished pickles.

That 70 per cent of the present rate on broken stone for paving and good roads be established as the regular rate.

That western classification No. 50 for eggs in cases be substituted for the Iowa classification.

That the commission establish switching rates on ice.

That there be a modification of Rule 28 of No. 14 classification regarding the notification to be sent to the consignee of goods.

That a minimum weight of 24,000 pounds be established for egg case fillers in place of the present 30,000 minimum.

That hogs and calves under 6 months old may be shippd in mixed car lots.

That there be a general reduction of drain tile rates to enable Iowa producers to meet interstate competition.

The docket also contains a general protest against the application of the new coal rates to articles in Iowa classification taking soft coal rates.

Warden Sanders Praises Farm.

The state executive council is expected to approve the expenditure of approximately $6,000 for a barn and other improvements on the farm near the Fort Madison penitentiary, where the convicts are employed. The barn, which will be thirty by seventy feet in dimensions, will house the stock and feed on the institution farm.

Warden J. C. Sanders hopes to rush the work of building the new barn to have it in readiness for the winter's supply of feed. Discussing the work of the convicts at the farm, he said the season had been a successful one in the face of all kinds of opposition. "First it was drought, then we had a flood, and to top things off, the hail came a short time ago. Notwithstanding these things, we have harvested fair crops of small grain and truck. The stand of corn is good, and I believe the yield will compare most favorably with the yield of any farm in the country. We are learning how to be regular farmers down at Fort Madison, and I tell you the prisoners certainly do enjoy the work."

"Trusties" Will Be Well Guarded.

The recent escapes of prisoners from the state reformatory at Anamosa gave rise to considerable discussion as to the best way to prevent these escapes in the quarterly conference between superintendents of state institutions and the members of the state board of control.

Most of the superintendents favored stricter regulations regarding the liberties allowed to prisoners, not only in the state penal institutions, but in the other institutions as well.

From the arguments which were advanced during the discussion, the conclusion is reached that the superintendents of Iowa institutions are convinced that strict rules must be promulgated for dealing with the wards of the states, especially where any liberties are permitted in the institution.

Articles of Incorporation.

"I can truthfully say Cuticura Remedies have cured me of four long years of eczema. About four years ago I noticed some little pimples coming on my little finger, and not giving it any attention, it soon became worse and spread all over my hands. If I would have them in water for a long time, they would burn like fire and large cracks would come. I could lay a pin in them. After using all the salves I could think of, I went to three different doctors, but all did me no good. The only relief I got was scratching.

"So after hearing so much about the wonderful Cuticura Remedies, I purchased one complete set, and after using them three days my hands were much better. Today my hands are entirely well, one set being all I used." (Signed) Miss Etta Narber, R. F. D. 2, Spring Lake, Mich., Sept. 26, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 2 L, Boston.

Newspapers print nearly every day the story of some fire disaster involving the complete destruction of great property values and sometimes the loss of human lives. The annual fire losses of the United States are measured by the millions; in fact, it is stated that over two hundred and fifty million dollars worth of property was wiped out by fire in the United States last year. While it is true that the precautions to prevent fire and fire fighting systems are often inadequate, the main trouble lies in flimsy, non-fireproof building construction. Experience has proved that fireproof construction is both practicable and economical. In some industries fireproof building is compelled by law. Reinforced concrete has come to the front as the most important agent in building against fire. The use of cement in building is becoming more and more common, due to its fireproofness, durability and economy. When building anything from the back porch steps to an office building, concrete construction may be safely adopted. The use of Universal Portland Cement in the concrete will insure cement of the best quality possible to manufacture. Universal is handled everywhere by the best dealers.

An Honor to Allison.

"Do you know," inquired Wilbur Reaser, the New York portrait painter, "that when my painting of Senator Allison was hung in the lobby of the senate, the precedent of 40 years was broken?"

Surprised being expressed Mr. Reaser explained.

"It is a fact that since the beginning of the constitutional government the senate had bought only nine portraits for the lobby. The first was Washington's and the eighth was Charles Sumner's. For almost 40 years nobody was considered worthy to follow in the distinguished line.

"It was generally thought that no other portrait would ever be added to the group; but when Senator Allison died, after serving longer in the senate than any other man in the history of the government, the rule was broken, and his picture became the ninth."—Washington Times.

A REMARKABLE CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA

Munyon's Stomach Treatment Performing Miracles.

MUNYON TELLS YOU HOW TO GET WELL FREE OF CHARGE

"A few days ago I received a letter from a young man, who states he is 28 years of age, and has occupied several important positions, but owing to indigestion and inability to sleep he has been unable to concentrate his mind upon his work and has consequently been discharged on the ground of neglect of duty. He goes on to say that he is a young man of steady habits, but for years he has suffered from dyspepsia, which has so affected his nerves that he is unable to sleep, and that it is not neglect upon his part, nor lack of interest in the business, but simply physical weakness. He asks my advice in this matter.

"For the benefit of a large number of those similarly situated I propose to answer this letter publicly, hoping that it may be the means of helping many who may be affected in this way.

"In the first place, the stomach must be made well before the nerves can be made strong. The nerves must be made strong before one can sleep well. No one is capable of doing his best who is in any way troubled with insomnia or any form of nervousness. The greatest generals have been men of iron nerve and indomitable will. They have had perfect digestion, being able to eat well, and digest all they ate.

"It is said that Napoleon lost the battle of Waterloo because of a fit of indigestion. Grant's enormous reserve power was due to a well stomach. Abraham Lincoln said that 'he did not know that he had a stomach.' Grover Cleveland, it is said, could work 18 hours a day, eat a hearty meal at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, go to bed and sleep soundly until 9 o'clock and get up refreshed, ready for a new day's work.

"Pres. Taft is another type of healthy manhood. Who thinks for one moment that he would be the President of the United States today had he been a dyspeptic or affected with some nervous ailment? I claim that two-thirds of all the failures in professional and business life are due to weak and deranged stomachs.

"No business house would care to employ a dyspeptic representative to sell goods for them on the road. One-half the men who stand behind counters today, earning from $12 to $15 a week, will never get beyond these figures, for the reason that they are physically weak. They lack the nerve power and commanding strength that come from a good, sound stomach.

"No one cares to hear a dyspeptic preacher. No matter how pious he may be, he is bound to reflect his bilious and jaundiced condition. He will unconsciously inoculate his hearers with his melancholy feelings.

"No one would think of entrusting an important legal case in the hands of a dyspeptic lawyer, any more than he would care to entrust his own life, or that of a dear one, in the hands of a physician who is nervous, irritable or a dyspeptic. Men must have good digestion, strong nerves and vital manhood in order to render a clean, clear-cut decision either in medicine, law or business.

"I believe that more than half of the divorces can be traced to ill health. I want every dyspeptic to try my stomach treatment, for it corrects nearly all forms of indigestion and nervousness. It makes old stomachs almost as good as new. Its marvelous power for digesting food and getting the best out of it makes for good rich, red blood. This, in turn, strengthens the nerves, builds up the general system, and will surely prolong life and make it a pleasure to live and do the things allotted to us."

Professor Munyon makes no charge for consultation or medical advice; not a penny to pay. Address Prof. J. M. Munyon, Munyon's Laboratories, Fifty-third and Jefferson streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

WILL GO OVER LINE

Rock Island Officials On a Tour Of Inspection

WILL GO OVER ALLERTON LINE

Will Give Particular Attention To The Shafts Now Being Sunk In the Great Coal Fields Near Dallas.

Des Moines.—President H. U. Mudge and a half score of the chief officers of the Rock Island railroad company are making a trip of inspection over the lines of the system. Mr. Mudge and his associates will embark at Carlisle in automobiles for a journey over the St. Paul & Kansas City Short Line and thence to Allerton, seventy miles south of this city. They will go leisurely over the new extension stopping at Dallas, where they will give particular attention to the shafts now being sunk in the great coal fields, two miles southeast of that point. These mines are expected to furnish 2,000 tons daily for transportation to various parts of the Iowa and Nebraska lines for use by the company's locomotives and stations. The area of the coal measures adjacent to Dallas, and controlled by the Consolidated Indiana Coal company (Iowa Division) represents 5,000 acres. It is estimated the supply will not be exhausted for thirty-five years. The average thickness of the vein is five feet.

From Dallas, the official pilgrims of the rail will follow the trail to Chariton, over a country of hills and ravines that would have discouraged any management with less courage than the Rock Island to attempt building a line through and across them. The officials will spend a day at Chariton and then they will go southward to Corydon and Allerton, whence their special train will follow them via Indianola, Chariton, Humeston and Corydon. They will pass through cuts fifty-seven feet deep and make pilgrimages over hills that almost surpass belief that they could be surmounted by the science of engineering.

North and South Roads Needed.

"The question of rural transportation is one of the most vital and most important affecting the material interests of the people of Iowa at the present time," said Hon. John W. Foster of Guthrie Center. "For this reason the promoters of the various improved highways should be working in harmony to give this state a network of first-class roads. The solution of the rural transportation problem depends entirely upon a solution of the road question. It is a good sign in Iowa that various sections of the state are projecting special roads. It is not necessary that the projectors of these roads be bitter rivals in order to secure the best results. Good-natured rivalry among the various sections of the state in building good roads will do more to give Iowa a network of fine roads than any other one agency. Let's have some north and south Minnesota to Missouri roads as well as east and west River-to-river roads."

Sends Out Sample Lesson.

"To get some of the courses in the new normal training work started uniformly this department will send out a series of ninety lessons in the domestic department," said Fred T. Mahannah, state inspector of normal training high schools. "Five lessons on domestic science are now being sent out and the others will follow over the school year as rapidly as we can get them worked out. There is no standard work on domestic science and thus the installation of this course of study in the high schools of the state leaves them without much text-book material. We shall also outline the periods of work. This outline will provide for forty-five minutes of recitation, forty-five minutes of laboratory work and forty-five minutes for sewing. The addition of the Clinton high school to the course, now gives us forty-two high schools in the state which will have normal training courses this winter."

Lewis Goes To Chicago.

Dwight N. Lewis, assistant commerce counsel for Iowa, is in Chicago attending a meeting of the committee appointed by the national association of railroad commissioners for the purpose of compiling a universal classification system for the United States on all kinds of freight hauled by common carriers.

E. E. Clark of the interstate commerce commission is chairman of this committee; which will seek to fix a uniform rate for the traffic of the nation which at present is fixed by the southern, the official and the western divisions.

NO DATE SET FOR NEXT PROBE

No Report On Management Of Prison Will Be Made Public Until After Another Visit.

Des Moines.—No date will be set for the final trip to Fort Madison of the prison probe commission until word is received from Judge M. A. Roberts of Ottumwa, according to George Cosson, attorney general, who is at the head of the commission that is investigating conditions at the penitentiary.

Private business of Judge Roberts prevented the commission's completing its work last week. Mr. Cosson says Judge Roberts is to notify him as soon as it is possible to take up the work again and Mr. Cosson and Parley Sheldon of Ames, the other member of the committee, will go to Fort Madison immediately.

It is understood that no report will be made to Governor Carroll concerning the management of the prison and the actions of the state board of parole until some time after the concluding trip of the commission to Fort Madison. After the evidence has all been taken the members of the commission have some private investigating to do before the work will be completed and it may be the first of January before the findings of the commission, relative to the charges made by David Brant, editor of the Iowa City Republican, are made public.

Rules For Firing Boilers.

Rules for firing steam boilers so as to obtain the maximum power with the least amount of smoke were made public by Harry McNutt, smoke inspector, and will be sent out in a few days to every place in the city where large heating plants are used. The following rules are set for firing boilers with Iowa coal.

"Do not fire any large lumps, but break coal down to uniform size.

"Keep ash pits bright at all times. If they become dark it is evidence that the fire is getting dirty and needs cleaning. Do not allow the ashes to collect in the ash pits; this not only shuts off the air supply, but causes grates to burn.

"In firing, spread coal over as wide a space as possible.

"Fire up one side of the furnace at a time so that the other side, containing a bright eye, will ignite the volatile gases from the fresh charge.

"In cleaning fire, clean one side then allow an interval of five minutes before cleaning the other side.

"Do not allow the fire to burn down before charging. If this is done, it will not only result in a smoky chimney, but in an irregular steam pressure, and loss of coal.

"Do not allow holes to form in the fire. Regulate the draft by the bottom or ash pit doors, and not by stack dampers.

"Fire little at a time and often, rather than heavily and seldom.

"Carry the fire as thick as the draft will permit. If the draft is poor, a thin fire is necessary, but a thick fire bed with good draft will effect better economies."

Bleakly Opposes Mandamus Suit.

The opinion of former Attorney-General Byers that it is illegal to write automobile liability insurance under the laws of Iowa will be the defense which State Auditor Bleakly will make to the application of the American Fidelity Insurance company of Montpelier, Vt., for a writ of mandamus compelling Auditor Bleakly to officially recognize their automobile liability insurance policy.

Mr. Byers' opinion, given about a year ago, was to the effect that policies of insurance securing automobile owners against damages for injuries caused by the running of their machines, no matter in whose hands, was illegal in Iowa.

The Vermont company writes this kind of insurance. Auditor Bleakly not only refused to recognize such a policy, but threatens to revoke the state license of the company to sell insurance in Iowa. It is to compel this recognition and to prevent the revocation of their license that the Vermont concern has brought the suit.

Stewart Named Scale Inspector.

Steps to begin active work in prosecuting violations of the new state weights and measures law were taken when the appointment of G. W. Stewart, of Iowa City, as state superintendent of weights and measures was announced by Governor Carroll.

No prosecutions have been made for violations of the weights and measures law because the present state superintendent, L. G. Weld of Iowa City, was out of the country and access could not be gained to his office. It was not known whether he would resign or take up the work until this week. His resignation has been received, Mr. Stewart having been appointed a vigorous enforcement of the law will be ordered at once.

From Every Room.

A school building in which every room has a direct connection with the ground, without first entering the main hall, has been built just beside the site of the famous Collinwood (O.) school in which 175 children perished by fire in 1908. It represents many unique features of construction and is said to be as fireproof and panic-proof as it is possible for a school to be.—Popular Mechanics.

"ECZEMA ITCHED SO BADLY I COULDN'T STAND IT."

"I suffered with eczema on my neck for about six months, beginning by little pimples breaking out. I kept scratching till the blood came. It kept getting worse, I couldn't sleep nights any more. It kept itching for about a month, then I went to a doctor and got some liquid to take. It seemed as if I was going to get better. The itching stopped for about three days, but when it started again, was even worse than before. The eczema itched so badly I couldn't stand it any more.

"I went to a doctor and he gave me some medicine, but didn't do any good. We have been having Cuticura Remedies in the house, so I decided to try them. I had been using Cuticura Soap, so I got me a box of Cuticura Ointment, and washed off the affected part with Cuticura Soap three times a day, and then put the Cuticura Ointment on. The first day I put it on, it relieved me of itching so I could sleep all that night. It took about a week, then I could see the scab come off. I kept the treatment up for three weeks, and my eczema was cured.
